GREETING TO MAINE HERO.

Four Thousand Persons Turn Out in Drenching Rain.

Chaplain Chidwick was given a rousing reception in this city last evening, when he arrived on the 7.05 train. All the principal buildings had been clabdecorated and everything favored the occasion-excepting the weather. That was decidedly unfavormarshals, Catholic societies of the city, war veterans, Mozart, Lawrence and Mayfield bands, went to the depot and before they completed their line of march and pulled up in front of the parochiai residence, water came down in torrents and many fine uniforms soaked. Four thousand persons stood around in the rain trying to get a glimpse of the Maine hero.

The opera house was crowded to the Goors, and as no ticket was sold for less than $1, a large sum was netted for St. Rose building fund.

The lecturer held the intense interest of his hearers throughout.

REMODELLED ST. ROSE HALL.

From the unfinished condition of St. Rose hall's exterior one would never guess the artistic effects which have been wrought within, Edward Hail has Just completed the painting and it reflects much credit on this veteran decorator. The basement is now the home of the many flourishing Catholic societies of the city. The main hall has a seating capacity of 600, which with a good-sized stage, settings, lights, etc. make it an exceptionally desirable place for entertainments. A twentyeight foot addition on the Terrace street end, extending the entire width of the building, has provided a hall on the second floor suitable for lodge meet-

Trains leave Honesdale at 11.19 a. m., 2.39 p. m. and 6.14 p. m., arriving in Carbondale at 1.38 p. m., 3.58 p. m. and 7.33 p. m.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

A little three-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Milltan, of No. 83 Canaan street, fell thirteen feet from a second-story window yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. It is considered ing at the home of Mrs. Tom Bray, most remarkable that the infant escaped with its life. A little cut on the forehead and a bruised leg were the only injuries.

AUTOMOBILE COMING.

The automobile referred to in this column several months ago as being in course of construction for Hon. E. E. Hendrick has been shipped from Hoboken and is expected here today or tomorrow. It will be the first one owned in this city, and the second that ever appeared on Carbondale streets.

THEATRICAL.

Miss Russell as "Miss Hobbs."

The amusement season at the Lyceum had brilliant and dashing close last night with the presentation of "Miss Hobbs," by a Charles presentation of "Miss Hebbs," by a Charles Frohman company, headed by Miss Annie Rus-sell, perhaps the most versatile and all round clever actress that Mr. Frohman has on his rester of stars. Miss Russell has been running Maude Adams a race all season for popularity, and it has not been an uneven one by any means,
"Miss Hobbs" is from the pen of Jerome K. Jerome, the English homorist whose humor is so un-English as to be real. The comedy deals with an episode in the life of Miss Hobbs, a ong woman who imagines that she is much operior to the generality of her sex. A woman of sense and brains, she believes, can do some thing higher, better and solder than to marry man and subordinate her life to his, In the promulgation of her not altegether un-common ideas, she brings Mrs. Percival Kingsearl and Miss Millicent Farey, who is enguged to marry George Jessop, under her influence. Mrs. Kingsearl leaves her husband, Miss Farey throws sweetheart over, and they join Miss Hobbs at her woman's retreat. On the day Mrs. Kingsearl leaves home, Wolff Kingsearl, an old college chum of her husband, arrives and learns of the situation. He refuses believe that Miss Hobbs is much different children survive: Mr. Williams, super- at heart than the average woman and makes a wager with his namesake, the deserted husband, that he will make love to the terrible "Miss Hobbs," and succeed in kissing her before a month has clapsed.

In accomplishing the task the wager imposes the comedy is developed. It is legitimate comwill officiate. Sunday school at 2 p. in. acted last night. Miss Rusell was truly charming as Miss Hobbs and her work was most en-thusiastically applauded by the audience, Charles Richman, as Wolff Kingscari and Mrs. G. II. Gilbert shared with Miss Russell the honors of the evening, Campbell Gollan, William H. Lewers, Francis Sedgwick, Margaret Gordon and Mabel Morrison were other members of the supporting company who are worthy of mention. Like all of the Frohman productions the comedy was

"There were no vacant seats in Music hall last night, when the first performance of "The Lili-putions" was given. It was a delightful entertainment, attractive, original and inspiring. If kept them shut for about a minute and a half, and then opened them, he would have thought zie, of No. 1 school, North Taylor, held he had been transported to a select corner of fairyland; and it would have been hard to dispel the illusion. 'The Liliputians' is so theroughly original an entertaitment that it is dif-ficult to describe. When put in cold, irresponsible type, half the charm of the fairy spectacle is lost. Far better it is to see, enjoy and praise it, but not to attempt to describe it."
