Information in the Cases Were Sworn to by E. B. Sturges, Col. H. M. Boies, Ex-Select Councilman J. A. Lansing and Captain W. A. May-Joseph Harris, a Detective, in the Guise of an Agent of the Scranton Railway Company Secured the Evidence Against the Accused—What They Have to Say.

Most startling of all the sensations ampaign was the laying of informaions yesterday, charging bribe taking against eighteen of the select and common councilmen. The accusers are our of the city's most prominent citizens, Colonel H. M. Boies, ex-Select Councilman J. A. Lansing, School Controller W. A. May and E. B. Sturges, the intrepid leader of the Men's union crusade against illegal llouor selling. gambling and disorderly houses. They represent the Municipal league, a civic purification society allied to the Men's union, and having in its ranks many of the leading workers of the Green Ridge society.

The accused city fathers are: Select Councilmen John J. Costello, Simon Thomas, T. C. Melvin, P. F. McCann, Thomas O'Boyle, T. J. Coyne, J. J. Mc-Andrew and Common Councilmen David H. Reese, Morris V. Morris, James J. Grier, W. V. Griffiths, C. E. Godshall, C. E. Wenzel, Thomas M. Watkins, T. F. Morris and ex-Select Councilman Horatio T. Fellows.

A New York detective, using the name Joseph Harris, who has been here for five months, representing him-self as a trolley company lobbyist, is relied upon by the prosecution to furnish substantiation of their charges. It is alleged by the councilmen, or some of them at least, that they knew all along Harris was a spotter and that they deposited his marked money in the presence of witnesses with prominent attorneys to await the expected warrants and give the trappers

WARRANTS ISSUED.

Fuller's office and demanded a hear-Alderman Fuller took his seat, the loor of his private office was opened, and Attorney Torrey called the name of the first witness for the prosecution, J. S. Harris. The agent for the league came from the private office and testified that on the morning of May 9, Councilman Godshall visited him in his room at the Hotel Rudolph and accepted $50 from him, promising in return to use his vote and influence in having council reduce the tax on the Scranton Railway company from 314 per cent. to 1 per cent. Mr. Godshall was asked if he wished to put any questions to the witness, but said he did not.

E. A. Whitney, another agent of the league, then testified that on the morning in question he was occupying a room next to Mr. Harris' in the Hotel Rudolph, and that while there he overheard the conversation between Mr. Harris and Councilman Godshall, and saw the former pass the latter $50.

"How could you do that, if you were in the next room?" interrupted Mr. To which the witness replied Torrey. that he had his eve at a hole in the panel of the door. He then stated that he overheard Mr. Godshall promise Mr. Harris his vote and influence, for the sum of $200, $50 being paid down, $100 to be paid when the measure passel second reading, and the other $50 when was approved by the mayor.

Mr. Godshall said ne had no questions to ask the witness, and Alderman Fuller then held him in $5,000 ball. City Assessor Gwilym A. Jones, of West Scranton, became his bondsman,

THE DETECTIVE.

Harris is a dapper youth, with rather boyish face, rosy cheeks, auburn hair, slight of build and a rather fancy dresser. It appears he came here about five months ago and put up at the Rudolph, registering under the name of Joseph Smith, of New York. He at once began to make himself a hall-fellow-well-met and judging from the way he was talked about last evening when the news of his identity and mission spread throughout the so far sprung in the present reform city, indicated that he succeeded admirably. "I know that fellow. Pshaw yes. He was spending money like a prince down at ---- place one night. And as I remember it, he was with Councilmen So and So and Such and Such." That's a fair sample of the expressions heard on every hand.

His first move, it would seem, was to secure a letter of introduction from a Philadelphia street car magnate setting forth that he was a professiona trolley company lobbyist. At his first encounter with councilmen he represented that he was 'after Silliman and his gang," but refrained from giving any details as to what he expected to do to his victims when he overtook

When he became well acquainted all pseudo mask, admitted that he was gang," whoever they may be, his real ordinance then before councils, by one per cent.

ORDINANCE WAS KILLED.

Either through his lobbying or some other cause, the license ordinance was killed. Probably it was a little of both, and the "same other cause" was a feeling among the better element in councils that the measure was defective. Messrs, Chittenden and Roche were the ones who led the fight against it on the night it was killed. It was then within a few nights of the last meeting would be introduced in the next counbeen arrested and taken to Alderman cils immediately after reorganization, Fuller's office. They each waived a so that the whole year, if necessary,

The maximum penalty for the offense but it had many objectionable features ting down the trolley car tax to one cil, passed two readings in this form, at the last meeting, and is now awaiting third and final reading.

The amendment in common council, reducing the trolley company's tax.was reported favorably from the license committee, which is composed of Messrs, Reese, Harvey, Watkins, Galvin and Coleman.

The vote was as follows on the amendment: Ayes-Messrs. Reese, M. V. Morris, Grier, Griffiths, Godshall, Ruane, Wenzel, Watkins, Cole-man, T. F. Morris, Cusick, Norton.

Naya-Messrs, Keller, Tewkesbury, Calpin, Zizelman, Nageli, Phillips, Galvin. Messrs, Keller, Tewkesbury and Zizelman were the only members to vote against the measure on final pass-

The trap was all ready to be sprung when the grand jury Lexow unexpecthold back to await its results. Its results, or rather lack of results, determined the league to proceed with their crusade. A representative of the league said to a Tribune man last night that more arrests are to follow and from another and equally reliable source it was learned that councilmen are not the only ones who are to be included among the defendants. According to the story of saveral councilmen they are prepared to spring a counter sensation. They say they knew from the very first that Harris was a detective and conducted themsalves accordingly. Ex-Selectman H. T. Fellows, it was asserted, accepted $50 bill from Harris and filed it with his attorneys, O'Brien & Kelly, in the presence of witnesses, placing thereon his own mark alongside a mark which it was discovered Harris had placed on the bill. City Detective Moir was instructed to locate Harris and a warrant was about to be issued for his arrest when the Lexow came and it

I went down town with Harris and in passing the Jermyn he asked me to come in and have a cigar or something. We weren't in the room two minutes before he began to get real confidential with me, told me all about his intention to scalp Silliman and flashed a big roll of bills. I was on to him, to use a common expression from that minute. I'd like to tell you a lot more about this thing, but I guess that is sufficient to show edly eventuated, and it was decided to the public that this instance is no exception to the rule that there are two sides to every story."

SENSATIONAL EPISODE.

Mr. Covne figured in a rather sensational lateral episode. It appears he has a letter in his possession which the detective wanted very badly, and a note was sent to his house during the afternoon asking him to meet Hurris at the Jermyn at 4.30 o'clock. He had business in town and after transacting it, he says, he dropped around to see what Harris wanted. He was served with the warrant charging bribe taking and escorted to Alderman Fuller's office. Attorney F. E. Beers, Detective Harris and several constables were in the private office, whither he was ushered. The door was closed and a request was made for the letter. He refused to give it up, declaring it was a private communication and there was no authority in law for demanding his giving it

Just what followed is disputed but at all events Mr. Coyne was seized and the letter taken away from him, It was found in his closed hand torn into small fragments, but the pleces were pasted together and the full contents of the letter was made legible. Mr. Coyne says that when he refused to turn over the letter he was pounced upon and the letter forcibly taken from him. He exhibited an abrasion on one of his wrists, a torn cuff and dented hat as evidence of the force that was used.

Attorney Beers says that it is true demand was made for the letter and that it was taken out of Mr. Coyne's closed hand, but that he was not forcibly seized until he had made threats to kill.

Alderman Fuller's version of the affair follows: "Mr. Coyne jumped back into a corner, excitably, when a de mand was made on him for the letter put his hand to his hip pocket and threatened to kill anybody who at tempted to molest him. Two officers authorize, a search for concealed weapons. The officers refused to disclose the ontents of the letter, but declared it was the one they wanted, and that it would play an important part in the

GREAT WALLACE SHOW.

Miniature Parade Is One of the Novel Incidental Features.

The Great Wallace show that comes to the city Friday afternoon and evening, May 26, has introduced a novel feature in their already large street attraction in the form of a min-lature parade. Several months ago a baby kangaroo made-its appearance in winter headquarters, and a few weeks later litters of lion and tiger ubs were born.

Miniature cages were built for the little ones and Mr. Wallace bought 40 cute little Shetland ponies to pull hem. The miniature parade follows close behind the large one and is given specially for the children.

Nothing new can be said about the Great Wallace show, as the citizens of Scranton have seen it, except that the show has been enlarged since last season. Among the prominent features of the show for this season are the world renowned Nelson family, acrobats; the Stirk family, bicyclists; Earl sisters, Herr Herrbeck's trained animals and many others.

LAST DAY FOR REGISTERING. Republican Candidates Must Settle

Before 6 p. m. At 6 o'clock p. m. today the time expires for the registration of candilates and payment of assessments under the new Republican rules. There were rumors afloat yesterday to the effect that a number of new candidates would be sprung at the last moment and that some surprises would be occasioned thereby.

Chairman A. A. Vosburg and Treasurer J. George Eisle will be at headquarters in the Central Republican club rooms in the Price building, on Washington avenue, between 5 and 6 o'clock to receive registrations and payment of assessments.

Elk's Street Fair Will Open at p. m. Today.

The Elks' Street Fair and Carnival did not open last night, as was expected, owing to the fact that the train bearin the Bostock show was delayed at Baltimore. The show will arrive in the city this morning at 8 o'clock. The Elks' street parade, which was to take place yesterday afternoon, was dso postponed and will be held at noon today.

In some respects the day's delay is an advantage, inasmuch as it gives the Elks a great opportunity to have the fair in splendid shape when it opens this afternoon,
