Perley, Leonard Peterson, in some of the officers: William Williams, Gay Reple, Robert Dohle, Edward Elsie and Will Jones. The officers are: Nelson Tette, president; Charles Bertine, vice president; Edward Elsie, secretary; Victor Wenzel, treasurer.

LAST SYMPHONY CONCERT.—The Symphony Orchestra society gave its eleventh concert last night at the Lyceum to a house in which were few vacant seats. The programme was in some respects the finest yet presented by this organization which Scranton is so proud. It has continued through these years of discouragement, has given costly entertainments with small financial returns, has met with rebuffs and ridicule at the presumption of establishing a permanent orchestra capable of producing great works of art in the face of the indifference has steadily practiced on and semi-annually made a public appearance.

As the months have passed the orchestra, under the judicious leadership of Professor Hemberger, has continued to give compositions by the great masters until listeners not especially musical became interested in some of the themes and found the haunting tones of some wonderful symphony or sonata lingered in memory with the same persistence that rattle melodies look up their shade. And now people have grown to like the Symphony Orchestra beyond its individual make-up.

In each concert some great symphony has been produced. That of Haydn in D major was a happy selection. The simplicity of the themes, with the sincerity and freshness of the first period made a strong appeal to the sensitivities of the audience.

The ambulant movement was played with superb effect. The individuality of the composer is most truly felt in this and the waltzes especially brought it out. The minuet with its weird minor chords so rarely heard from Beethoven was given with the artistic interpretation whose test was the unmistakable thrill felt by every listener.

The grand march was one of the most effectively produced on the program. The strange Norwegian sentiment waiving throughout led it all the mystery of sorrow for the held northern primitive land, and the prophecy of the feasting summer. In certain passages it was the most elaborately presented selection of the evening.

CHARGED WITH KILLING HIS FATHER

JAMES NOLAN ARRAIGNED FOR TRIAL. He Quarrelled with His Father Because the Latter Objected to His Attentions to Mrs. William Osborne—On the Night of April 11 the Fatal Blow Was Struck—An Axe Said to Be the Weapon Used. Only Ten Jurors Secured Thus Far—Talesmen Drawn.

James Nolan, of Carbondale, was put on trial before Judge H. M. Edwards, in the main court room, yesterday morning, charged with the murder of his father, John Nolan.

The crime was committed at the home of the Nolans, in the South Side of Carbondale, on the night of Wednesday, April 11, last. The weapon used was a small axe, and the elder Nolan died the next night in the Emergency hospital at Carbondale. The blow that caused death crushed in the skull. The axe, with which it is alleged the blow was struck, was the commonwealth's table yesterday. It is still stained with blood.

There were no eye-witnesses to the crime, which was committed in the kitchen of the house, but when young Nolan was arrested a hour or so after the terrible assault, he admitted striking his father, but said he did it in self-defense and did not know the kind of a weapon he used.

He made no effort to escape, going to Williams' bottling works, where he was taken into custody an hour after the blow was struck by Constable Edward J. Neary, of Carbondale, who is the prosecutor in the case. Young Nolan, and other young men he associated with made Williams' place a rendezvous and it is supposed he went there from force of habit. He was quiet, but somewhat dazed, as well as somewhat intoxicated when placed under arrest.

WOMAN IN THE CASE. A woman seems to have been the cause of the trouble between Nolan and his father.

She is Mrs. William Osborne, of Carbondale, whose husband was sentenced a year ago to a term in the penitentiary for seriously stabbing his brother-in-law, a man named Walsh.

Nolan has been acquainted with Mrs. Osborne for several years, and both before and since the arrest of her husband was a frequent caller at her home. His father did not like this and frequently protested vigorously against his son's attentions to Mrs. Osborne.

This caused bad blood between the father and son and almost constant friction and quarrels.

On the day of the crime they had some difficulty and early in the evening, it is said, young Nolan was in the central part of Carbondale looking for his father. He made some remarks that indicated an eye directed toward his parent. When he arrived home, some time before 9 p. m., his father was there and the fatal quarrel occurred.

The prisoner is a quiet, serious-looking man twenty-four years of age. He is about five feet tall, with a high forehead, thin nose, and thin lips. He is covering of hair on the top of his head. His smooth face was cleanly shaved and he was neatly, though not expensively dressed. His eyes are mild and deepset, the nose straight and well formed, and one looks in vain for the strong chin or firm-set jaw one expects to find as a feature of such a man. Altogether he seems the antithesis of the physical peculiarities that are commonly associated with men who commit crimes, that are grave, desperate or unusual. He is a mine worker by occupation and has the reputation of being peaceful but very quick tempered. He is unmarried.

HIS MOTHER IN COURT. In the court room yesterday were the mother, brother, two sisters and brother-in-law of the prisoner. The mother is a self-dissatisfied woman, whose pathetic features, framed by her widow's bonnet, showed evident traces of the great sorrow that came into her life when her husband was struck down by the son she looked forward to as the source of her declining years.

She sat three rows back from the bar enclosure on the west side of the court room, from which position she could not only watch the progress of the work of selecting a jury, but have her son constantly before her eyes. She gazed oftener and longer at that son than she did at the jurors, the lawyers or the court, and if one was to judge from the expression of her face, her boy was more of a mystery to her than the questions the lawyers and the judge were propounding to the jury.

She knew in a hazy kind of a way that these questions had something to do with the safety of her son, but just what it all meant she could not quite comprehend. During her quiet life she had been a stranger to the courts of justice and she knew nothing of their procedure.

Beside her sat her daughter, Miss Mary Ann Nolan, and the adjoining seats were occupied by her other daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McDonald. In the row in front sat another son, Patrick Nolan, and with him was the six-year-old son of the McDonalds. During the afternoon, while there was a lull in the work of selecting a jury, the little fellow was allowed to play with a ball.

low went over to the defendant's table, where his uncle sat, and shook hands with him. They chatted together for several minutes.

THE CASE CALLED. The case was called at 10.30 in the morning, and Assistant District Attorney W. Gaylord Thomas, who has charge of the prosecution of the case, said that the accused had no one to defend him, and he understood he desired to plead guilty. Nolan, however, said that was not his intention, and Judge Edwards assigned Attorney P. Duffy to defend him. Mr. Duffy told the court he would prefer not to assume alone the responsibility of conducting the defense in such an important case without preparation, and the court suggested that he select someone to assist him, whereupon he called Attorney L. P. Wetmore to the defendant's table with him, and the work of selecting a jury was taken up.

It was slow, tedious work. There was an uncommonly large number of jurors with conscientious scruples against capital punishment, and at 4 o'clock the panel was exhausted and only ten jurors had been secured. They were: Thomas Boland, mill hand, Scranton. Charles Dix, confectioner, Scranton. Thomas A. Hennessy, reporter, Scranton. William Eagle, cigar-maker, Scranton. Charles Garret, laborer, Scranton. P. J. Gish, painter, Scranton. Charles Hamilton, mill porter, Scranton. Andrew Eber, grocer, Scranton. H. H. Jabin, clerk, Scranton. H. S. Keller, insurance agent, Scranton.

Court directed Acting Sheriff Ryan to summon fifteen talesmen, and from these an effort will be made this morning to select the remaining two jurors. The commonwealth has still one challenge and the defense six.

The defendant has been in jail since the time the crime was committed. He yawned a good deal yesterday afternoon while the jury was being selected, as if the proceedings bored him, but never once did he allow his eye to wander to that part of the court room where his mother and the other members of his family were seated.

KISSED HIS MOTHER. After court adjourned, the mother and other members of Nolan's family waited until the crowd had departed and then asked permission of a court officer to see the prisoner. He was allowed to join them just outside of the prisoners' cell, where he kissed his mother, sisters and nephew very affectionately. He shook hands with his brother, but his brother-in-law remained some distance apart from the group.

The party chatted for several minutes, and then came the time for removing the prisoner from the court room and Nolan turned back toward the pen.

His mother started for the door with tears streaming from her eyes, but when she reached the court room door she turned to look at her son again. A deputy sheriff was busy handcuffing him to a big, burly prisoner who was to be his companion to the jail.

Mrs. Nolan allowed her eyes to rest on her son for an instant and then she hurried out into the corridor with a sob she tried hard to restrain. The work the deputy sheriff was engaged in seemed to bring keenly to her mind the great danger in which her son is standing.

George Perry, painter, of Waverly, and W. D. Spencer, farmer, of Waverly, upon being asked if they had heard anything concerning the case, told of having sat opposite to the defendant's brother during dinner at the St. Cloud and that the brother made comments on the case. They would not say that the remarks were addressed to them and admitted that they did not deal with the merits of the case.

Judge Edwards, after satisfying himself that the remarks did not deal with the merits of the case, allowed the matter to drop.

BALLOT REFORM MOVEMENT. Received Endorsement of Baptist Ministers Yesterday. At yesterday's meeting of the Abington Baptist Ministers' association, held in the Penn Avenue Baptist church, an address was made by Alexander E. Turner, of Philadelphia, assistant secretary of the society, for the promotion of Ballot reform. He spoke at some length of the absolute necessity of ballot reform in this state and the movement which he presented received the hearty and unanimous endorsement of the clergymen present.

Mr. Turner's idea is to organize an auxiliary committee with headquarters in this city. This committee would do all the preparatory work, and dates for the legislature in Northeastern Pennsylvania as to their attitude on ballot reform, and if they are against it would endeavor to have them pledge their support to the movement.

NUMBER OF PLEAS OF GUILTY ENTERED

DEFENDANTS WHO ACKNOWLEDGED BREAKING LAW.

George W. Wilson Was One of Them. There Are Six Charges of Forgery Against Him and He Is Said to Have a Long Criminal Record. Harry Castner and George Smith Admit Having Stolen Scrap Iron from the Pancoast Coal Company—Other Matters.

Previous to the calling of the murder trial, yesterday morning, pleas of guilty were taken in a number of cases. Among the defendants who came up to admit their guilt was George W. Wilson, alias N. Martin, alias George Myers, the forger, captured by Chief Robling and Detective Mair last April.

He was charged with passing bogus checks on the Casey & Kelly Brewing company, the Hunt & Connell company, Clarke Bros., and Mortimer H. Fuller & Co. There are, in all, six charges against him. He plead guilty of the first two, and was remanded till Saturday for sentence.

Wilson is a middle-aged man of good address and, according to the police, an old-time professional crook. When arrested he was carrying a hat containing a Baltimore label. The police of that city were communicated with, and inside of a week a letter was received, setting forth that Wilson was sentenced in 1895 to six years in the Maryland penitentiary for passing bogus checks. He was released only a few weeks prior to his arrest here.

The record of his arrest and conviction was sent along with the letter, and when Wilson plead guilty yesterday, it was handed up to Judge Edwards. Wilson was taken completely by surprise and made a half-hearted denial of his former conviction.

THEY STOLE IRON. Harry Costner, of the West Side, and George Smith, of the South Side, plead guilty to the charge of stealing scrap iron from the Pancoast Coal company at Throop. In company with a third man they drove to Throop one night a few weeks ago and proceeded to load their wagon from the scrap heap near the mine. The fact that the scrap heap had been gradually diminishing caused the company to set a watch on it, and when the trio were at their work, William J. Appleman and other employees came down upon them. The third man, whom the defendants say was William Lawson, succeeded in making his escape. Despite the fact that they earnestly endeavored to assist Judge Edwards that they were simply hired by Lawson to cart the iron and understood that he owned it, they were given nine months apiece in the county jail.

Louis Epstein plead guilty of stealing $2 from the Conway house, and was sent to the House of Refuge. He and his brother, Harry Epstein, both newsboys, had been making a tour of the hotel daily, presumably to sell papers. A number of articles were being missed from the different rooms, and suspicion fell on the Epstein boys. Two marked dollars was placed on the dresser in the room of Proprietor Rosar's daughter and, as was expected, the money was found on Louis when he was conveyed down stairs after having made his usual tour of the hotel. The brother will attempt to clear himself.

Both of the boys and their father are under suspended sentence for thieving. The last named was caught picking pockets.

Richard Murphy plead guilty of attempting to get away from Cleveland's market after business hours with a crate in which he had packed a lot of clams and eggs. He was sent up for nine months.

WAS A SOLDIER. Lackey Buttret, a disabled Spanish war soldier, charged with stealing thirty-two pairs of shoes from Christy's store on South Washington avenue, plead guilty and was sent up for ten months. The crime was committed April 27 of this year, just after his return from Cuba. He was down with the fever and after recovering was bitten on the arm by a tarantula. The bite permanently paralyzed his arm. He told the judge that he fell in with bad company, got drunk and gave way to a temptation to steal. All he asked was not to be sent to the penitentiary.

Louis Zelinsky admitted having appropriated $5 belonging to Peter Ruba, which was entrusted to him to buy some beer, and was given nine months. A verdict of not guilty was taken in the case of John Dyce, charged by Margaret Dyer with embezzlement.

The case of George Richards, charged with burglary by his former boarding boss, Allen Johnson, was called for trial before Judge Kelly, after the panel was exhausted in the effort to secure a jury in the murder trial. Johnson alleges that Richards broke into his house and stole a lot of household articles. Richards claims to be able to prove an alibi. Attorneys John M. Walker and P. E. Killeen were appointed to defend him.

Two More Licenses Attacked. Petitions for the revocation of two more liquor licenses were filed yesterday by Attorney James H. Torrey, P. L. Hitchcock and E. E. Beers, representing the Men's union. The licenses attacked are those issued to Francis Hafler, 122 Penn avenue, and Thomas F. Clark, 229 Wyoming avenue.

The petitioners allege that neither of these license holders actually conduct the places and that the parties conducting them keep open on Sunday. John J. Skelly is alleged to be the real proprietor of the Penn avenue place and Thomas Burns of the Wyoming avenue place. The cases will be heard with the others on June 21.

Application was also made by the Men's union agents for authority to destroy the gambling devices captured at "The Fun" and "The Manhattan." The law requires that they shall be formally declared confiscated by the court before the officers shall be warranted in destroying them.

A bill of $32 from Robert Wilson and one of $29.50 from Deputy Constable W. S. Bartlett for expenses in connection with the arrest of the two men, was returned to the city treasurer.

Vito Girandi, of Ash street, was arraigned before Alderman Kasson last night on the charge of the larceny of several beer kegs from the Pennsylvania Central Brewing company and was held in 1209 jail to appear at court to answer the charge.

Girandi, it is claimed, purchased the amber liquid from the brewery and when the wagon came around for the empty barrels he refused to give them up.

Joseph Rosa, acting for the company, then swore out a search warrant before Alderman Kasson and yesterday he and a constable from Alderman Kasson's court visited and searched the premises, finding two barrels. Rosa met with considerable opposition while going over the premises, Mrs. Girandi, he claims, making all sorts of threats on his life.
