Sometimes their stories will be put on the Lackawanna and are almost ludicrous, but at other times they are heartrending, and it is almost impossible for a clergyman to decide that in all his experience he had never the house this afternoon, Rev. David met a stranger begging for help whose case, when investigated, was found worthy.

The Rev. Dr. McLeod, of the First Presbyterian church, in conjunction Rev. A. P. Merrill, of Deposit, who with four other leading clergymen, had an experience not long ago which was as laughable as it was exasperating. A woman clad in deepest but shabby mourning called at the church office shortly after noon and told a pitiful tale of woe. She said that her only daughter had died the night before: that she had formerly been a member of his church, and her dying request was that Dr. McLeod should preach a sermon at the funeral, which would occur the following morning at her residence. She gave a number and street in a somewhat distant locality. The doctor at once consented to officiate at the funeral, and expressed the greatest sympathy for the bereaved mother. The woman then began to finances were in a strattened condition, and that she lacked just $2 of having enough for her daughter's burial expenses. The doctor had been imposed upon before, so he told the woman that he would go to her home the following morning and bring the neces sary funds to defray the expenses, Thanking Dr. McLeod, the woman took her leave and proceeded to the pastoral residence of the assistant rector of Trinity church. Telling him the same story, she succeeded in obtaining $5 and the promise that the doctor would officiate at the funeral, This original fakir then went to the residence of Dr. Fiske, pastor of Gunton Temple Memorial church, to whom she again repeated her story, and obtained a like reward. She sought two other clergymen, on whose sympathies ecured from each $5 and the assurance that the ministers would preach each one she gave the same hour, name and address. The result was that the following morning five preachers, armed with Bibles and hymn books, serious and sympathetic looks, appeared at 10 o'clock at the quiet home of a very respectable Irish family, and each one announced that he had come to conduct the funeral of the young girl. The Irish lady, thinking that some one had played a practical joke on her, promptly became incensed, and emphadeath on that block for six months.

Charles Mohammed." His card did not state to which denomination he belonged, consequently he told each minister that he was a member of his church and a foreign missionary. To ome he said he needed funds to go to New York, where he was scheduled to deliver a lecture, and to others he claimed his destination was Baltimore for the same purpose. He succeeded in obtaining various sums of money. until finally he reached the Rev. Dr. Fiske. To him he showed his credentials, which seemed to be correct, and furthermore he claimed to be a professor in Princeton university. He showed a clipping from a Richmond newspaper, which stated that a Rev.

Charles Mohammed had been mistaken

for a negro who was wanted there for some crime, and he was almost mobbed before he could establish his identity. In addition to this, he had his cierical orders from the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroads. How ever, these orders had expired in 1889, and the Rev. the London Daily Mail. The first time the correspondents saw him was at a rallway car window at addressed them as one who speaks to friends. It seemed to them that he lifted every disability and brushed away every limitation which had hampered and almost crippled them in their work up to that time. They were to write what they pleased, he said, and this was not to be censored. Only their telegrams would be scrutinized. They were to go wherever he went, wherever they willed to go. To me his face suggests the front of a granite mountain, seamed, lined, battered by storm, strain and racking change. It records acquaintance with every trial to which mortals are put, all suffered in the solitude of undivided responsibility. Care, worry, sickness, danger, unceasing reflection, all had left their marks there, yet all were written across a gentle, sympathetic countenance, never gay or merry, yet seldom stern, and wholly ignorant of passion. I have known many great faces, but that of Lord Roberts is a face apart. I fancy that, in the minds of their worshippers, some of the oberer gods of the old mythologies had faces like his. He dresses in serge khaki, which, plain as that always must be, he renders the more plain by ridding it of all orders and decorations. There are men on his staff-there was even an American newspaper reporter with one of the armies-who wear a line and a half of ribbons. But the chief who is entitled to perhaps four lines, appears every day, for every duty and function, with a tunic as bare of decorations as that of any civilian. In Bloemfontein, where he was living between walls, his table was a small one, standing a few feet from the head of the large, long table at which sat his staff -his ponderous, impressive staff of distinguished men of the aristocracy. You dined with "Bobs" in khaki, of ourse, at his small table-if you were highly honored; or you may dine with weep, and told Dr. McLeod that her his staff, and be presented to him after the meal for a long or a brief interview, as he pleases. That is precisely the amount and extent of state about his surroundings. But all state van ishes when you touch the hand of "the little man" and talk with him about the two subjects which engross himthe war around him and politics at home. If you wonder that politics find such spacious lodgment as they do in his mind, you have not remembered how politics affected him in his career as a general, here in South Africawhen he could have prevented this war by a vastly smaller one, in Kandahar, in many fields. Lord Roberts never smokes tobacco, and with drink he has little to do. A glass of wine with two of the three meals suffices for him. He preaches temperance to his soldiers, and they all know that he shows no she worked with the same tale, and patience with those who drink to excess. He presides at meetings of the Army Temperance association and her daughter's funeral sermon. To extols sobriety, but, like all broadminded men, he refrains from advocating the impossible-one form of which is total abstinence. He has never been known to use an oath, and, indeed, there must be comparatively few men whose religion influences them so deeply as does his in every affair in life. He never parades his piety, never forces it upon those around him. Yet on every Sunday since he joined his army he has attended divine service. Not a word has he ever spoker to his stuff suggesting or ordering their presence, yet he is certain to attend the weekly service-an example to the army so modestly and so persistently presented that it cannot help but be powerful. When he took the Sacrament at Dreifontein the other day, in the face, one might say, of the whole army, it was without a hint of the parading of religion. All saw in it an act of

He has complimented a "Tommy" on his soldierliness in such a way as to win the man's loyalty to the end and surrender of his life, and on the very same day he has ordered home a general, knowing that the order carried disgrace of a man who meant as well as himself, but had not the as well as himself, but had not to corn capacity to realize his ambition. Wall Street Review.

New York, June 9.—Those who expected that the bears who sold stocks short in large volume during the final dealings yesterday would scatter to cover their shorts today and work a sharp rally to close the week were disappointed. The depressed condition of foreign stock markets continued today in spite of the rather more assuring opinions for a peaceful outcome to affairs in China so far as the interests of European powers are concerned. The About it, Home endorsement, the public expression of Scranton people should be evidence beyond dispute for every Scranton reader. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in far away places. Read the following:

Mr. Philip Garver, barber at the corner of Lackawanna and Penn avenues, says: "I was subject to pains across my back for sometime. After being on my feet for fourteen or fifteen hours the pain was so intense that I could scarcely bear it. I tried different remedies but never got anything that brought relief until I used Doan's Kidney Pills and joins me in praising them. I would not be without them in the house."
