Base Ball

Scranton took its tenth straight game Saturday, and is now so far in the Atlantic league race that none of the other teams are in hailing distance. In the National league, Brooklyn easily downed Pittsburg and so drove the Pirates back further into third place. Chicago, by virtue of Griffith's fine pitching, won from Boston and by so doing more firmly establishes its grip on fifth place. The averages:

THE TENTH STRAIGHT.

Scranton Again Defeats Harrisburg, the Legislators Being Swamped This Time by a Score of 20-9.

For five innings Saturday afternoon the contest between the Scranton Champions and Harrisburg Legislators was as evenly contested and interesting a one as the most fastidious enthusiast could desire. Then, however, the slaughter began and the local batters fell on the inshoots, out curves, fast ones, slow ones, in fact all the mysterious collection of foolers served up by the Right Honorable Joshua Keener, and these, together with several yellow errors, contributed by the Harrisburg fielders, combined to give Scranton twenty runs, and the tenth straight victory.

Burnham put a patched up team in the field. Knox going to short, Jack O'Brien to third and Kervin to center. The change did not affect the fielding of the team particularly and certainly did not affect the batting. Kervin led in the slugging. In his six appearances at the rubber he landed on the horse hide four times with the viciousness of a Lajoie, and two singles and a brace of three-baggers were the results of his day's work. Catcher Toft, who early in the season was condemned as a light batsman, but who has been rapidly dispelling the illusion, showed up well with the stick and banged out four clean singles. Sir Richard Knox was also in evidence, and swung the small sized telegraph pole, which is his favorite bat, with sufficient effect to make a home run and two singles. Big Roeber McIntyre was also heard from, contributing a three-bagger and two one-basers. Sheffler got in three singles, Knoll a triple and single, Pirate O'Brien a couple of singles and Jack O'Brien and Kennedy a single apiece.

Kennedy wasn't in the best of condition, and in addition to being hit hard enough to win most ordinary games was rather wild, giving six bases on balls and hitting with the ball one batsman. However, at critical points he pulled himself together, as was particularly marked in the third inning. With two men gone, Vigneux hit to deep left center. It was a beautiful hit, but fast fielding Kervin held Vigneux at second and gave him only two bases on the drive. Ferguson drew a base on balls and Witrock also walked. With the bags full, Keener stepped to the bat. The st lwart twirler has been batting well all season, and wore a smile on his face a yard wide. It lost its width, however, when Kennedy put two strikes over and he struck out by hitting at a ball he could not have reached with a nine-foot club.

Spike Shannon was the bright particular luminary of the visiting team with the bat. He made a single, double and triple, and they were all good, long, clean drives. The score:

RIGHT OFF THE BAT.

Dick Knox's home run Saturday earned him a box of cigars.

Hartsell, last year with Louisville, is now playing with Indianapolis in the American league and leads the batters of that association with .432.

In the seventh inning of Saturday's game Jack O'Brien had his shoulder injured while sliding to second and was kept out of the game for the rest of the innings.

Catcher Frank McManus, the crack Allentown backstop, has been sold by the management to the Chicago team in the American league. McManus is a splendid player and ought to shine in the western company.

Danny Coogan, one of the catchers of the disbanded original Reading team, is another one of the players who has already drifted into the New York State league, and is making a big hit by his backstop work for Cortland.

Catcher Byers Saturday night left the Harrisburg team and went to Portsmouth, Va. Negotiations were immediately made by the management for a new catcher and in today's game at Wilkes-Barre a new face will be seen on the Harrisburg team.

Manager Burnham yesterday received a telegram from James J. Corbett to the effect that he would appear in this city Wednesday and play first base for Scranton against Allentown. Before the game he will spar three rounds with Jack McVey, his traveling companion.

It is no wonder that the Harrisburg pitchers are batted so hard. The team carries two twirlers and on the days they do not pitch they are utilized in the outfield. This is enough to weary any player and on a pitcher, in particular, whose arms needs the most rest, this is terribly wearing.

Saturday's crowd at the park was about as hospitable an aggregation of rooters as ever assembled to see a team play ball. Throughout the entire game they rooted for the visitors and whenever a player wearing the fiery Harrisburg uniform crossed the plate he was cheered loud and long.

Sandow Mertes, of Philadelphia, center fielder for the Chicago National league team, is pushing Flick, of Philadelphia, hard for the home run batting honors. Friday against Boston he made a double and two home runs and Saturday made a two bagger and another drive for four sacks.

An odd happening took place in Saturday's game between Harrisburg and Scranton. At the conclusion of Scranton's half of the eighth inning the Jersey City players, one and all picked up their bat bags and started for the gate, thinking the game was over. Umpire Russell, strange to say, labored under the same delusion and it was only after the players were recalled from the grand stand that the game went on.

TAYLOR NEWS.

An Interesting Base Ball Contest, U. M. W. of A. Picnic a Grand Success—Personal News.

The base ball contest which took place on the Old Forge park grounds on Saturday afternoon for the championship of the county and a purse of $25, between the Reds of this town and the Dashers of that place, was well contested and proved to be interesting throughout. Owing to the lateness in commencing the game, it was decided to play only seven innings, but up to the final inning the score remained a tie at 4-4, so it required an extra inning to decide it. The winning run was scored by McHugh, of the Reds, who gained his base by a neat hit. He stole second and was brought in by a nice two-bagger from the bat of M. Glynn. The drive was a neat one and brought the rooters, which numbered nearly a thousand people, to their feet. J. Morris pitched for the Reds and was invincible, the Dashers' terrific batsmen getting only four scratch hits, and also striking out seven opponents. The batting of Glynn was a marked feature of the game. The score by innings:

	R.	H.	E.
Reds	0 2 0 1 1 0 0 1—5	9	5
Dashers	0 0 3 1 0 0 0 0—4	4	3

Batteries—Reds, Morris and Glynn, Dashers, McDonald, Mullen and Garvin. Struck out—By Morris, 7; McDonald, 3; Mullen, 2. Base on balls—Reds, 4; Dashers, 5. Umpires—Williams and Eagan.

The following letter, which appeared in Saturday's Scranton Truth, was written by Frederick Hartnoll, a former Jermyn resident, and coming as it did, without solicitation on the part of Mr. Connell, is worthy of consideration:

Sir: As a citizen of this commonwealth I accept and read with interest and enthusiasm the Hon. William Connell's congressional record, and appeal to his constituents for re-election to congress. By virtue of such a showing as presented in the above record it would seem a just and merited tribute to tender him that solicited request by standing shoulder to shoulder for him at the primaries on Monday next. His appeal is a modest one, commanding the attention of those who in the past have been his friends and supporters and from whom he now asks a further renewal of confidence. I have never met the gentleman or communicated with him directly or indirectly or any belonging to him or the party of which I am an humble follower. As a voter I feel an interest in the county and country, and even in the city of which he is a resident, and where he enjoys the friendship of all political affiliations alike. I admit I have read of Mr. Connell and often with pleasure, especially since his entry into practical politics. My impression of him as a servant of the people is that he is an ideal and conscientious one; an honored representative of and for the people. Irrespective of his standing with those who share with him the exalted office of legislators, I believe his record in congress worthy the united franchise of this county. As a believer in and a supporter of the Republican cause I accept it as espoused by its present incumbent. I hail with pleasure this opportunity of testifying to its support and of furthering the re-election of Mr. Connell. I greet him as a public benefactor. This is written without solicitation, fear or favor of any one. Frederick Hartnoll.

OLYPHANT.

The funeral of the late Thomas Morgan took place from the home of his parents on Scotch street Saturday afternoon. The large number of persons who attended was a gratifying proof of the esteem in which he was held. After a brief service at the house and the remains had been viewed, the funeral cortege moved to the Congregational church, where an excellent and appropriate sermon was delivered by Rev. R. S. Jones, of Providence. There was a large number of beautiful floral offerings. The pallbearers were David T. Lewis, W. J. Lewis, William Brooks, George Williams, jr., James Harris and Henry Williams. The flower-bearers were Thomas Williams, John Morris, D. J. Davis, Ebenezer Jones, Arthur Hendrickson and D. J. Lloyd. Interment was made in Union cemetery.

How to Cure a Sprain.

Last fall I sprained my left hip while handling some heavy boxes. The doctor I called on said at first it was a slight strain and would soon be well, but it grew worse and the doctor then said I had rheumatism. It continued to grow worse and I could hardly get around to work. I went to a drug store and the druggist recommended me to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I tried it and one-half of a 50-cent bottle cured me entirely. I now recommend it to all my friends.—F. A. Babcock, Erie, Pa. It is for sale by all druggists. RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

Its Recent Establishment and Rapid Growth in Postoffice Department.

From the N. Y. Sun.

As recently as 1893 the Postmaster-General reported to congress that the introduction of any system of rural free delivery of letters and papers would be impracticable as involving an expenditure of $20,000,000 a year without any commensurate revenue. In his annual report for 1894 Postmaster-General Bissell declined to spend the appropriation of $10,000 made by congress to test the feasibility of rural free delivery. When Congress increased the appropriation for a test to $20,000 in 1895, Postmaster-General Wilson adopted the opinion of his predecessor and of the house committee on the postoffice and post roads that the plan of establishing rural free delivery was wholly impracticable. He added that he had assumed control of the department too late in the fiscal year to take any action under the appropriation, but should Congress see fit to make it available for the current year he would carry out the experiment ordered by the best methods he could devise.

Congress made $40,000 available for the purpose and in 1896 Postmaster-General Wilson put the idea to its first test. The experiment was entirely successful and since then the system of rural free delivery has been so generally extended that it now includes 383 distributing points in forty-one of the forty-five states, the exception being Idaho, Montana, Mississippi and Wyoming. By degrees the appropriation has been increased from $20,000 to $150,000 and it is $300,000 for this year.

At the head of the states served by rural free delivery is Ohio, the most favored state, with forty-nine routes, Indiana having forty-four and Iowa twenty-three. The development of the system, however, has for topographical reasons been very irregular. Thus in Texas there are only two rural free delivery routes, while in South Carolina there are twenty-one. In Washington there is one only, while in California there are fourteen, and in Louisiana, Alabama and Florida there are three routes only, while in Maine there are seven.

In the opinion of post office authorities, however, the present system is only in its incipiency and among the plans in view for its further extension is one for rural free delivery of mail by electric cars. Some farmers and other residents of the northeastern part of Massachusetts and the adjoining New Hampshire territory have taken steps in this matter, the idea having occurred to them a few weeks ago, when they first received an electric car service in place of the stage coach which formerly ran between Exeter and Amesbury.

The free delivery of letters in cities was inaugurated by the Postoffice Department in 1863, when the whole number of letter carriers in the United States, now 15,000 was less than 700. It did not increase materially until 1880, when the number of cities and towns having free delivery of letters had risen to 104. Ten years later, in 1890, there were 519, and the number is now 745. There were by the last Federal census 712 cities or towns in the United States having a population in excess of 5,000, and practically all these places and a few others besides have now free delivery of letters by carriers.

One remarkable and salutary effect of the extension of the rural free delivery system has been the great improvement it has brought about in country roads. The extension of the system being optional with the Government, the plan has been adopted of favoring those regions in which the roads are best, and as a consequence there has been a general improvement in the condition of roads traversed by rural carriers. This has been especially the case in the West and it accounts for the apparent preference accorded to Ohio and Indiana, in which States the construction of good roads has been a prerequisite to the establishment of a rural free delivery service. In one county of Indiana the farmers incurred an expense of $2,600 to grade and improve a road in order to obtain free delivery.

The traditional policy of the post office department is constantly to extend its operation, taking, irrespective of the volume of revenue derived, no steps backward, and it has been found generally that as the expenses increase the revenues increase correspondingly. Thus, where rural free delivery has been established, the number of letters written and the number of letters received have increased and in some cases to an extent sufficiently large to make up for the additional outlay caused by the delivery. A Pennsylvania farmer made recently a computation which other farmers have approved, and the post office department has thought worthy of publication, to the effect that, on an average, every farmer not served by rural free delivery goes at least once or twice a week to the nearest post office for his mail, and occupies one-third of a working day on the trip. Putting the value of the time thus lost in the busy farming season at 50 cents a head, the total loss would run up to many million dollars. It has been found generally that while congress is reluctant to authorize some posfal expenditures, the popularity of rural free delivery among farmers is such as to make probable a further increase in the appropriation next year.

THE SCREW PROPELLER.

Has Reduced Atlantic Voyage from Twenty to Six Nights.

The screw propeller is very simple in principle and construction, and yet it is so effective that no substitute for it is likely to be found for many a decade to come. In operation it is the windmill reversed. The propeller consists of a shaft projecting from the stern of the ship and terminating in a set of blades, usually three or four in number, all placed at the same angle. The shafts are revolved by means of the ship's engines, and the resistance developed by the propeller blades revolving in the water drives the vessel forward. If a ship were firmly fastened so that she could not move forward and the engines were kept in motion, the movement of the propellers would develop a powerful current in the water astern. Where it is a question of the relative resistance of the ship's bulk and the water, that of the water is always greater, and owing to the fact that the power is applied directly at the stern there is less loss of energy than in the case of side wheels. Especially is this true in ocean navigation, where the rolling of the vessel from side to side often caused the old-fashioned wheels to lose their grip of the water. The adoption of the screw propeller immediately reduced the time of an Atlantic voyage from twenty days to about fourteen days.

In comparison with the size of the great ocean steamer, the dimensions of the propellers which drive her through the water at the rate of twenty-five miles or more per hour seem hopelessly inadequate. For instance, if one stands beneath such a ship when she lies in dry dock and looks up at her great height, and along her hundreds of feet of length, it seems impossible that the propellers can fulfill their task. As a matter of fact, however, their efficiency depends upon the speed with which they are revolved rather than upon their size. Nor are they small in themselves. The propellers of a steamship of the largest size, together with the stern tubes in which they are carried, weigh close to one hundred ton. Moreover, they are one of the most expensive portions of the ship. The propellers are so essential to the ship's progress that they are made of the toughest metal obtainable. Nickeled steel was formerly employed for this purpose, but at the present time manganese bronze is the favorite material. Manganese bronze costs in the neighborhood of $600 per ton, and this makes the total cost of a pair of three bladed screws amount to $50,000 or $60,000.
