

LACKAWANNA COUNTY.

JERMYN AND MAYFIELD.

Crystal Fire Company and Lady Friends at Chapman Lake-Parsonale.

Thursday evening Chapman lake was a scene of mirth and festivity. Dr. and Mrs. S. D. Davis, entertained from 8 until 12 o'clock the members of Crystal fire company, No. 1, and their friends. Dr. Davis has recently remodeled his country residence and beautified the grounds surrounding the home.

JERMYN AND MAYFIELD.

dentis is evidenced by the large number of passengers arriving and departing on the trains nights and mornings. Some one, a stranger, who is a traveling man, remarked the other day "Oaken passes all the towns on this road." In the words of Shakespeare, "Tis true." What we need is a train leaving here about noon for Scranton and it probably will not be long before this accommodation will be granted, an effort seems to be made to give the public what they want by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad.

TAYLOR NEWS.

Children's Day Exercises at the Different Churches Tomorrow-Residence Damaged by Lightning. Other Interesting News.

Children's day tomorrow at the Methodist Episcopal church will be observed in an elaborate manner. The pastor, Rev. C. B. Henry, will preach at 10:45 a. m.; Sunday school at 2 p. m. in the afternoon commencing at 7 o'clock, the following programme will be rendered, under the direction of Chorister Richard Watkins: Voluntary, Symphony orchestra; chorus, "Hosanna to Jesus Above"; chorus, "The Living Christ"; school; recitation, "Pass Over"; Nina Gimenez; chorus, "Singing Praises"; school; recitation, "Baby Among Dandelions"; Urania Tubbs; responsive, superintendent and school; chorus, "The Child"; recitation, "The Child of Nazareth"; Nellie Cardwell; recitation, "The Rosebud Time"; three girls; chorus, "Rosebud Song"; primary department; dialogue, "Sunbeams"; six little girls; recitation, "Little Lambs"; Bessie Davis; solo and recitation, "Did the Child of Nazareth Die?"; Mrs. Daniels; recitation, "The Boy in the Temple"; Thomas Phillips; dialogue, "When I'm a Man"; six boys; hymn, "Forward Be Our Watchword"; congregation; recitation, "Why Are We Glad?"; Myrtle Fatzinger; recitation, "Four Wee Tots"; Edna Kulp; chorus, "With a Hearty Will"; school; address, Rev. C. B. Henry; dialogue, "Willing Workers"; Mrs. Daniels; class; chorus, "Awards"; solo (selected); R. Watkins; chorus, "We Shall Like Jesus There"; school; doxology; benediction.

Children's day tomorrow at the Presbyterian church will be observed with special services. The pastor, Rev. H. H. Harris, Ph.D., will preach in the morning at 10:30 o'clock. In the evening at 7 o'clock a grand musical and literary feast will be rendered. All are cordially invited. For the evening, the following programme will be rendered: "The Greenwood colliery of the Brooks Coal company will pay their employees today for May."

At the Wesley Baptist church tomorrow Children's day exercises will be held. The pastor, Rev. D. M. Edwards, will officiate at the morning service; Sunday school at 2 o'clock. An excellent programme will be rendered in the evening. All are welcome.

The lawn social held last evening, under the auspices of the young ladies of the Wesleyan church, was well patronized. Children's day exercises will be held in the Wesleyan church tomorrow. An excellent musical and literary programme has been arranged for the evening. The pastor, Rev. John Evans, will preside.

Miss Lydia Haskins, who has been the guest of relatives in Edwardsdale, has returned home. The school board was organized June 8, by the election of A. D. Dean, president; A. R. Cowles, secretary, and Benjamin H. Haskins, treasurer. Prof. C. Hanson, who has conducted the school with remarkable success for several years past, was unanimously re-elected as principal but declined, as he has adopted the law as his future profession, having already opened an office in Scranton. A. A. Schaub, of Susquehanna county, was selected in his place as principal, and Miss Flo Tinkham as his assistant.

W. A. Barnes, of Scranton, has just sold the Dr. Mackay property, adjoining his residence, to Mrs. E. F. Lightfoot and family, of Binghamton, N. Y., who are occupying the residence on Main street, formerly the home of Dr. A. Bedford. The Methodist church people are contemplating a festival and entertainment on July 8.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Travis, of Scranton, returned home this week to spend their vacation. Mrs. Wesley Blesseker, of Scranton, spent Thursday with her sister, Mrs. Isaac Blesseker. The funeral of Harry Robinson, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Robinson, who died in the Scranton Private hospital, Monday, where he was operated on for appendicitis, Sunday night, was held from the Methodist church Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. G. H. Prentice officiating. Children's day services will be held in the Methodist church Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Spangenberg and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Tuttle, of Hamilton, spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Post. Mr. David Heller, of Philadelphia, is the guest of D. S. Gardner.

Justice of the Peace Mason has gone to Rochester, N. Y., to attend the Otis celebration. His son, Fred Mason, a member of the Fifteenth regiment, participated in the parade. Miss Mabel Coulough, of Wilkes-Barre, is the guest of Miss Jennie Patton, of Delaware street.

The public schools of Blakely will close June 22. The annual examination of public school teachers will take place today. An ice cream and strawberry social will be held in the Primitive Methodist church next Tuesday evening. All are cordially invited to attend. Mrs. Frank Orchard and children, of Carbondale, are visiting relatives here. Miss Ida White, of Carbondale, is the guest of Mrs. J. F. Cummings at the Mahon house. Miss Mary Leonard, of Rock Lake, is spending the week with friends in town. Dr. Len Kelly is visiting his uncle, Dr. D. L. Longstreet, at Norristown, Pa.

Mr. W. D. Hager, of Orange, N. J., is visiting his brother, S. H. Hager, of Scranton. Mrs. A. E. Phelps, of Delaware street, Thornhurst, were callers in town, Tuesday. Miss Pollanshee, of Scranton, is the guest of Miss Emma Eschenbach. The board services held at the Methodist church, Sunday evening, which consisted of songs, recitations, etc., were very well rendered by the little folks, and enjoyed by everyone. Captain William Geary, of Seattle, Washington; Mr. Nelson Geary, of Philadelphia, N. J.; and Mrs. S. W. Coleman, of Scranton, are guests of their sister, Mrs. G. G. Smith. Captain Geary was one of "the boys of '61" from this section. Thirty-two years ago he went west, and this is his first visit home since that time. Mrs. J. A. Heller, of Factoryville, is visiting relatives in town. A strawberry and ice cream festival will be held at the Methodist Episcopal church Saturday evening. Union Park association will hold a Fourth of July picnic at their park. W. L. Harvey has just closed a deal for nearly a thousand acres of land near Gouldsboro. It is reported that work will be commenced at once to clear the land and put in dams for ice plants. H. D. Smith is having his house painted. Since the new time-table has taken effect on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, our railroad facilities for travel are very much better. It is a welcome change.

Syrup of Figs. ACTS GENTLY ON KIDNEYS, LIVER AND BOWELS. CLEANSSES THE SYSTEM, DISPELS COLDS, HEADACHES & FEVERS; OVERCOMES HABITUAL CONSTIPATION PERMANENTLY. ITS BENEFICIAL EFFECTS TO GET BUY THE GENUINE - MAN'D BY CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

Barre, is the guest of Miss Jennie Patton, of Delaware street. The public schools of Blakely will close June 22. The annual examination of public school teachers will take place today. An ice cream and strawberry social will be held in the Primitive Methodist church next Tuesday evening. All are cordially invited to attend. Mrs. Frank Orchard and children, of Carbondale, are visiting relatives here. Miss Ida White, of Carbondale, is the guest of Mrs. J. F. Cummings at the Mahon house. Miss Mary Leonard, of Rock Lake, is spending the week with friends in town. Dr. Len Kelly is visiting his uncle, Dr. D. L. Longstreet, at Norristown, Pa.

Mr. W. D. Hager, of Orange, N. J., is visiting his brother, S. H. Hager, of Scranton. Mrs. A. E. Phelps, of Delaware street, Thornhurst, were callers in town, Tuesday. Miss Pollanshee, of Scranton, is the guest of Miss Emma Eschenbach. The board services held at the Methodist church, Sunday evening, which consisted of songs, recitations, etc., were very well rendered by the little folks, and enjoyed by everyone. Captain William Geary, of Seattle, Washington; Mr. Nelson Geary, of Philadelphia, N. J.; and Mrs. S. W. Coleman, of Scranton, are guests of their sister, Mrs. G. G. Smith. Captain Geary was one of "the boys of '61" from this section. Thirty-two years ago he went west, and this is his first visit home since that time. Mrs. J. A. Heller, of Factoryville, is visiting relatives in town. A strawberry and ice cream festival will be held at the Methodist Episcopal church Saturday evening. Union Park association will hold a Fourth of July picnic at their park. W. L. Harvey has just closed a deal for nearly a thousand acres of land near Gouldsboro. It is reported that work will be commenced at once to clear the land and put in dams for ice plants. H. D. Smith is having his house painted. Since the new time-table has taken effect on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, our railroad facilities for travel are very much better. It is a welcome change.

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Wells attended the Buckingham reunion at Hamilton, Wednesday. J. E. Loveland is able to be out again, after his recent illness. Mrs. H. C. Travis and daughter, Dorothy, returned home Wednesday, after a few days' visit at Stroudsburg. Dr. and Mrs. Fisher, of Scranton, have been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Frischohn this week. Walter Runyon and little nephew, Benjamin Ellis, of Long Island City, are visiting friends here. The remains of Mrs. Frances Seuple, mother of Mrs. William Hoar, of this place, will be brought here from Dunmore today and interred in the Catholic cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Travis, of Scranton, returned home this week to spend their vacation. Mrs. Wesley Blesseker, of Scranton, spent Thursday with her sister, Mrs. Isaac Blesseker. The funeral of Harry Robinson, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Robinson, who died in the Scranton Private hospital, Monday, where he was operated on for appendicitis, Sunday night, was held from the Methodist church Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. G. H. Prentice officiating. Children's day services will be held in the Methodist church Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Spangenberg and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Tuttle, of Hamilton, spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Post. Mr. David Heller, of Philadelphia, is the guest of D. S. Gardner.

Justice of the Peace Mason has gone to Rochester, N. Y., to attend the Otis celebration. His son, Fred Mason, a member of the Fifteenth regiment, participated in the parade. Miss Mabel Coulough, of Wilkes-Barre, is the guest of Miss Jennie Patton, of Delaware street.

The public schools of Blakely will close June 22. The annual examination of public school teachers will take place today. An ice cream and strawberry social will be held in the Primitive Methodist church next Tuesday evening. All are cordially invited to attend. Mrs. Frank Orchard and children, of Carbondale, are visiting relatives here. Miss Ida White, of Carbondale, is the guest of Mrs. J. F. Cummings at the Mahon house. Miss Mary Leonard, of Rock Lake, is spending the week with friends in town. Dr. Len Kelly is visiting his uncle, Dr. D. L. Longstreet, at Norristown, Pa.

Mr. W. D. Hager, of Orange, N. J., is visiting his brother, S. H. Hager, of Scranton. Mrs. A. E. Phelps, of Delaware street, Thornhurst, were callers in town, Tuesday. Miss Pollanshee, of Scranton, is the guest of Miss Emma Eschenbach. The board services held at the Methodist church, Sunday evening, which consisted of songs, recitations, etc., were very well rendered by the little folks, and enjoyed by everyone. Captain William Geary, of Seattle, Washington; Mr. Nelson Geary, of Philadelphia, N. J.; and Mrs. S. W. Coleman, of Scranton, are guests of their sister, Mrs. G. G. Smith. Captain Geary was one of "the boys of '61" from this section. Thirty-two years ago he went west, and this is his first visit home since that time. Mrs. J. A. Heller, of Factoryville, is visiting relatives in town. A strawberry and ice cream festival will be held at the Methodist Episcopal church Saturday evening. Union Park association will hold a Fourth of July picnic at their park. W. L. Harvey has just closed a deal for nearly a thousand acres of land near Gouldsboro. It is reported that work will be commenced at once to clear the land and put in dams for ice plants. H. D. Smith is having his house painted. Since the new time-table has taken effect on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, our railroad facilities for travel are very much better. It is a welcome change.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Travis, of Scranton, returned home this week to spend their vacation. Mrs. Wesley Blesseker, of Scranton, spent Thursday with her sister, Mrs. Isaac Blesseker. The funeral of Harry Robinson, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Robinson, who died in the Scranton Private hospital, Monday, where he was operated on for appendicitis, Sunday night, was held from the Methodist church Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. G. H. Prentice officiating. Children's day services will be held in the Methodist church Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Spangenberg and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Tuttle, of Hamilton, spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Post. Mr. David Heller, of Philadelphia, is the guest of D. S. Gardner.

Justice of the Peace Mason has gone to Rochester, N. Y., to attend the Otis celebration. His son, Fred Mason, a member of the Fifteenth regiment, participated in the parade. Miss Mabel Coulough, of Wilkes-Barre, is the guest of Miss Jennie Patton, of Delaware street.

their work. It would help them a good deal if they were able to understand something of the language of the Chinese people. It is not right that American consuls be compelled to employ Chinese interpreters, as is now the case. They ought to have their own men, people of their own nation. It would be to their interest. The American consular services now does not hold out sufficient inducements for the right kind of men in China. Americans ought to be encouraged to enter the service and, having entered, to remain there. It requires a peculiar kind of men to succeed. Young men who are sent to China, who would like to learn the language, and who could look forward to a long period of service after they had once fitted themselves for it. In England, at Oxford and at Cambridge, they have Chinese professors to give elementary training. Young men go out from there into the consular, diplomatic or merchant service, and what they have learned at the universities they supplement in the service. They have enthusiasm because they realize that if they do good work they can find for themselves a career. I appreciate the fact that this is a democratic form of government, and that it may not be easy to bring about the change which I suggest. It is difficult to secure the necessary legislation, but I am sure that in view of the constantly increasing importance of the American commercial and political position in China, it would be of inestimable advantage if the consular service there could be marked by permanency of tenure and adequacy of training. Merit should be rewarded by promotion, as is the rule now. Our country and the European governments which send young men to the East to learn the language and study the customs of the country.

The English-speaking people have a great advantage in China now because their language is popular in Asia, and because it is more commonly used than any other foreign tongue. It is a pity that this advantage cannot be followed up by making the language still more adaptable to the needs of the natives of the country. The English language is due to circumstances. The English controlled India. Their language was spoken there and in all the British colonies, and when the English found their way into China ahead of other European nations they brought their language with them. But it is not an easy tongue to learn. The Chinese people are not slow in learning, but it does not seem right that unnecessary obstacles should be placed in their path. I am not partial to the English language, but it has evidently come to stay, and it may already be called the commercial language of the Orient. In all the treaty ports and important centers of the East it holds a place in the school and the counting-house which no other language can claim. It is spoken in the streets of Shanghai, it is taught in the schools of Yokohama, and it has obtained such a vogue that merchants of all other nations resident in the East make use of it in their business and in their families. If there is to be an international language, it will be English, and therefore it ought to be improved upon so as to facilitate the learning of it and make it easier for those who are not English-born.

"A whole language cannot be suddenly reformed. Changes must be a matter of slow and steady progress. In one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But there is one respect in which improvement can be made without doing violence to the idiom or the construction. This is in spelling. If a phonetic spelling were to be adopted it would be a blessing to those of us with whom English has not become a second nature. But