A meeting of the stockholders will be held at the company's offices in this city, Wednesday, to vote on the question of increasing the size of the board of directors. The removal of the mills will take from Scranton several thousand of her people. There are 1,500 men employed at the South mill alone and fully as many more at the North mill, furnaces and other departments of the plant. Most of them will go to Buffalo and take their familles with them. A rough estimate of the number of Scrantonians who will follow the mill is 3,500. As an instance of the lateral effect the withdrawal of mills will have, it

The Lyceum property is owned by C. H. Welles, E. B. Sturges, Alex. Hunt and James Archbald. The Blair estate owns the Academy of Music. The price for the former is said to be $85,000, and the latter $50,000. The lots on Penn avenue, fronting the Lyceum, are included in the deal, and will be improved at an early date. The character of the building has not yet been decided upon, but it can be taken for granted that it will be a substantial and ornate addition to the city's architecture. For several years the Lyceum prop erty has been on the market, and the

Blair estate, it is understood, has been willing all along to dispose of the Academy at a reasonable figure. Litigation is still pending over the Lyceum, but it is said that the proposed purchasers are to be indemnified against any possible loss. The present owners practically had the property forced upon them. It is an incident of note that young Everhart is the last of one line of a oyal family, distinguished for centuries for bravery and nobility of character. In fact, the founder of the family was named "Everhart the Noble." He was born March 15, 1265, in Wurtemberg, and was a member of the reigning family. At the age of fifteen he conceived the idea of estab-lishing the independent kingdom of Wurtemberg and, before attaining his majority, carried out the idea and became its first king, with Stuttgart as Martin Cummings, of 807 Hampton street, William H. Dagger, jr., and his younger brother, Harry, of Back street, Bellevue, had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday while cleaning out the boilers at the Bellevue breaker. The three were flushing out the boilers with cold water and had just about completed their task when the steam was turned on, scalding Cummings quite badly about the face and hands. Harry Dagger was also badly burned about the face, arms abdomen and legs. The other Dagger boy escaped injury.

Cummings was taken to the Moses Taylor hospital, where he was treated. and the attending physician stated last evening that his injuries are not serious. Dagger was less fortunate, and Dr. G. B. Reynolds, the attending physician, stated last evening that his injuries are not necessarily fatal.
