MONSTER ENGINE IS BEING BROKEN UP.

Thirty years ago the wonder of the age was the monster engine of the Friedensville Zinc company, near Allentown. Gigantic in size, a marvel in construction, its massive dimensions and herculean frame made it famous the world over and justified the proud title by which it was known "The President."

The great engine weighed about 1500 tons. Its cylinder had a diameter of 110 inches and a ten-foot stroke. Its two fly wheels weighed 107 tons each and were 40 feet in diameter. The two walking beams weighed 44 tons apiece. Forty-four mules pulled them over the mountain when the engine was erected and it took two years to place them in position.

The Philadelphia and Reading agencies at Tammany and Turner Seals were abandoned Monday and the train order office at Tammany was transferred to Hauck's, the new railroad town about a mile distant where the Philadelphia and Reading and Jersey Central connect. This means the practical abandonment of Tammany as a railroad town, and all the traffic of that place will now be handled at Hauck's.

The new steel coal car received at the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western yards last Saturday will soon be given a thorough test. It will be used at several of the company's mines in the transportation of coal, and some idea of its advantages thus secured.

BRYAN WILL AGAIN LEAD DEMOCRACY

Mr. Tillman now stepped to the front and was greeted with a cheer. He read the platform in full round voice easily heard throughout the hall.

Hill Leads the Applause. As he proceeded each plank was greeted with applause. But it remained for his reading of the declaration that "imperialism is the paramount issue of this campaign" to evoke a storm of enthusiasm.

The delegates sprang to their feet, standing on their chairs, waving hats, handkerchiefs, umbrellas and fans, while the galleries took up the chorus and carried it along for many minutes. Senator Hill could be seen marshaling the hosts to cheer. He held the fan high above his head and added his voice to the vociferous shouting. A second time Senator Tillman read this declaration and now even a greater demonstration than before carried the convention off its feet.

Suddenly hundreds, then thousands of miniature American flags were passed among the delegates and the whole floor of the vast structure became a sea of flags. An instant later the stars swept over the galleries like a mass of flame. Bundles of them were tossed upon the seats and distributed.

The scene was magnificently inspiring and the great audience was worked up to a fever heat. On each flag was the device "the constitution and the flag are inseparable, now and forever. The flag of the republic forever."

were printed the following sentences in large letters of blue.

"Constitutions governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed."

"The constitution and the flag, one and inseparable, now and forever."

"The flag of a republic forever, of an empire, never."

"A republic can have no colonies."

To the vast majority of those in the hall the flag was an unexpected incident and its appearance was the signal for a frantic roar which caused everything that had gone before it to sink into insignificance.

Senator Tillman stood surveying the storm and awaiting an opportunity to proceed. Order was finally restored and there were cries of "Good, Good," when the trunk plank was read.

When the senator reached the re-affirmation of the Chicago platform, with the declaration of free silver coinage at the rate of 16 to 1, sentiment again broke loose. But the demonstration was faint in comparison to what had just occurred when imperialism was announced as the "paramount issue."

When Hill Was Silent. Senator Hill was among those who remained quiet, while Mr. Croker waved a flag until it broke, and George Williams led the mass contingent in salutes of cheers.

The Boer plank brought another cheer and the senator received a round of applause as he closed. His voice throughout was admirable and he made himself heard throughout the vast hall. His reading was forceful and effective.

When the applause had subsided, Chairman Jones, of the platform committee, said he had been instructed to move that the platform be adopted by the convention by acclamation.

The motion was put and amid a roar of cheers the platform was adopted without a word of dissent.

The announcement of Chairman Richardson of the adoption of the platform was followed by a stirring address, which made the building ring from one end to the other.

Webster Davis Has a Hearing. Then followed a stirring and dramatic scene. The plank in the platform denouncing England's policy toward the Boers had called out immense applause, but when it was announced by Chairman Richardson that the convention would be addressed by Hon. Webster Davis, former assistant secretary of the interior, the crowd manifested its enthusiasm by cheering for two minutes as the former Republican leader ascended the platform.

The speech of Mr. Davis was arranged in order to enable him to announce his allegiance to the Democratic party and the Democratic platform and to the ticket of the convention.

In dramatic style, and with all the force and magnetism of a fine orator, Mr. Davis denounced as a "malicious lie" the statement that he had been forced to leave his office in the present national administration. He pictured in brilliant and flaming sentences the "crucifixes and aggressions" practiced by Great Britain upon the Boers of South Africa.

He expressed his intense satisfaction that the Democratic party had incorporated in the platform a plank so cordially and enthusiastically endorsing the cause of the Boers, which was the cause of liberty and justice.

In conclusion, in announcing his intention of supporting the Democratic party and its ticket, Mr. Davis said with great emphasis: "I stand upon this platform and shall support W. B. Jennings."

It was a curious and laughable confusion of the syllables of Mr. Bryan's name, but the crowd knew what he meant and cheered him wildly.

The Nominations. When partial order was restored, Sergeant-at-Arms Martin arose to his feet and said: "The next business before the convention is the nominating of a candidate for the presidency of the United States. The secretary will call the roll of states."

When Alabama, the first state in alphabetical arrangement, was called, the chairman of that delegation announced that Alabama would yield to Nebraska the privilege of nominating the next president of the United States.

W. D. Oldham, of Nebraska, who was to present the name of Mr. Bryan to the convention, came forward and in a few graceful words expressed his appreciation of the favor extended by Alabama in surrendering its time to the state of Mr. Bryan. Mr. Oldham then addressed the convention. He received the closest attention.

As he approached the close of his address he raised both hands high over his head and spoke slowly and with an energy that caused his voice to penetrate into every corner of the hall.

"And that man is—William Jennings Bryan," he concluded, bringing his hands down with each word.

An instantaneous answering cheer swept across the convention. It was a simultaneous roar from all parts of the hall. Up went the delegates upon their chairs, over their heads went the flags and above them all soared and rang the cheers for Bryan.

The hand clasp performed its share, but the noise of creation was but a drop in the torrent. The men from the state of Nebraska flung up a large banner bearing a likeness of Mr. Bryan upon one side and upon the other the word "Nebraska" and smaller portraits of Mr. Bryan enclosed in a star of blue. Whatever may have been the difference of delegates over the platform they seemed to have forgotten them, and all were as one in favor of the man, New York vied with Nebraska and Kansas in venting its enthusiasm.

Expressions of Loyalty. Richard Croker was on a chair, both arms aloft, a flag in his right hand, which he waved vigorously. Hill was not behind him in the show of loyalty to the nominee and waving his arms he let forth a series of cheers that equaled those uttered by any man on the floor.

Over in Illinois, Ohio and Indiana, where 16 to 1 is not popular, there was no hesitation now. The die was cast, the rage of battle lifted and they swung into the line as fiercely as any that had stood unflinching by Mr. Bryan in the fight before the committee on resolutions.

Round the hall started the Illinois men with the blue banner and catching up their state emblems the other delegations took up the march, waving flags and hats and cheering at the top of their voices without cessation save with the breath necessary to start afresh. Thus the demonstration continued for just twenty-eight minutes, when once more the excited and perspiring crowd got into a state of quietude, succumbing because of fatigue rather than obeying the gavel.

Arkansas yielded to Texas, and Mr. Perkins seconded Mr. Bryan's nomination. Cries of "Hill," "Hill" came from all parts of the hall as Mr. Perkins concluded.

Senator White, of California, however, took the platform, and in a telling speech, seconded the nomination. Colorado then gave way to Illinois and Judge Thompson seconded the nomination in behalf of his state. When he had finished Connecticut yielded for David B. Hill. Flags were again waved and the delegates rose and cheered with the audience.

Speech from Mr. Hill. The men in New York delegation waving many banners were the only delegates who kept their seats. Ex-Senator Hill forced his way to the platform and waved his hand for silence. When the cheers and cries of "Hill," "Hill" had concluded, and the vast audience was seated, he began to speak slowly but clearly. His attention given him was remarkable. The vast hall was almost perfectly silent.

His laudation of Bryan was received with applause and cheers, but when he said "Bryan will have the support of a united party," the convention went wild and his hand had to play "America" to still the tumult.

"His integrity has never been questioned," asserted Mr. Hill, and the audience yelled "That's so."

His explanation of his position on the platform and his accordance with the will of the majority called for heartier applause than had been evident before and the good offices of the band were again necessary to get attention for him.

"This nomination will meet the approval of the east," he said, and enticed his auditors. In closing he said: "New York expects to join with you with her thirty-six electoral votes," and then as he stepped down from the platform the convention became a boiling sea.

"Hill for vice-president!" was one of the cries raised, and delegates all over were on their feet except the five rows of Tammany men. Ex-Senator Edward Murphy, as Hill passed to his seat, grasped his hand and shook it heartily. Then Mr. Shea, of Brooklyn, did the same and others in the row, but Mr. Croker sat immobile, and Hill passed him without any salutation.

The applause for Senator Hill continued for some minutes.

Ex-Governor Pattison Speaks. Then followed in turn seconding speeches from representatives of a great number of states. Many of the speakers were liberally applauded, but the vast audience great applause and wanted a vote. Among the speakers who received an ovation was former Governor Robert E. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, and his speech seconding the nomination was listened to attentively.

Upon the list of states the seconding speeches continued and when Utah, the last to be called, was reached, Mrs. Cohn, of Utah, one of the women alternates, stepped forward and was received with terrific applause. She spoke so faintly that her voice could scarcely be heard. She seconded the nomination of Mr. Bryan in behalf of Utah.

Mrs. Cohn's speech concluding the nomination speeches, the secretary began to call the roll of the states on the ballot for the presidential nomination.

As the roll call proceeded the shouts of approval of the unanimity of the vote seemed to increase. All of the large states were cheered heartily as they passed. The roll call was over for Mr. Bryan, Georgia, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Massachusetts were cheered cordially, but when Missouri and a minute later Nebraska were called the convention fairly palpitated with enthusiasm. So it was, too, when the state of New York was called, the convention rising to its feet and cheering.

The list of states and territories was completed with the calling of the territory of Hawaii.

The announcement by Chairman Richardson that Mr. Bryan had been nominated for president of the United States unanimously was received with great applause, but it did not compare with the previous demonstrations during the day. The flag was sung from the roof, which had played its part earlier in the session, was again lowered, the band played and the people cheered.

Standing on their seats some of the delegates waved their hats, and while the enthusiasm did not run at high tide, as the people already were leaving the hall, Chairman Richardson announced at 6:45 that the convention was adjourned until 10:30 tomorrow morning.
