Literary Societies-Boarding Accommodations - Advantages of Location-Five Courses of Study Open for the Choice of the Winner of the Contest-They Comprise Classical, Latin-Scientific, Literary, Scientific and Technical.

THE participants in the Scranton Tribune's Educational Contest are now working in real earnest, and as they meet with success their enthusiasm keeps growing. New names are being constantly added, proving that as the news becomes known of this paper's substantial inducements to young men and women, the willing and ambitious youth of the city and country are glad of an opportunity to enter its ranks of canvassers.

Points are being scored daily by several of the contestants. One young man who took out one of the credit blank books one evening at the close of business was waiting for the office to open the next morning. He had secured several subscribers during the intervening night. This young man is employed during the day, and is using his evenings to benefit himself and is striving for a future education. Other workers are going carefully over their neighborhood, among their friends and acquaintances, and also among their friends in other towns. The unemployed can make their idle hours very profitable by entering this contest, as there is a remuneration in cash for those who do not succeed in getting enough points to win one of the ten special rewards. Those who have employment can very well find time to canvass in their "hours of ease." An ambitious young man or woman, who expects to amount to something in the future, should commence to lay a foundation for the years to come now. In the great chance The Tribune presents to them through this contest they may begin to build for the future a substantial edifice of intelligence, business acumen and commercial priority.

Valuable Experience to Be Gained. The future is to be pre-eminently an age of specialists. This work is one which will be a good preparatory school for the participant. It will teach him how to approach a prospective subscriber, state his business, unfold his reasons for going into the work, and dilate upon the substantial advantages his wares possess over those of others. It will teach the canvasser to forget his self-consciousness, to lose his timdence in his powers to gain the attention and hold the interest of the person he is interviewing.

Among the new contestants vesterday were some from outside the city showing that the country youth are fully as ambitious and anxious for their future as their urban brothers and sisters. The public is taking a great interest in the young canvassers' efforts and show a laudable desire to help them in many ways, by giving them their subscriptions or sending them to friends who they believe will be able to do so. Prospective contestants should not lose any more time in thinking about entering, but should start in now welle the public interest is into use in this matter. The time for action is at hand and now is the one chance, perhaps, of your life to gain an education without cost to yourself, other than a few weeks' canvassing.

Wyoming Seminary.

The Wyoming Seminary, the first in The Tribune's list of special rewards, is situated at Kingston, Pa., and was established in 1814, under the auspices of the Oneida Methodist Eniscopal conference. The first building crected was destroyed by fire in 1852, but, not daunted by the destruction wrought, the late William Swetland, Esq., of Wyoming, with the aid of a few other laymen and under the leadership of Dr. Nelson, the prin-

The seminary is situated in the valley of the Wyoming, one of the most historic sections of Pennsylvania, and but a few miles from the scene of the famed Wyoming massacre. Tradition and legendary lore are plentiful throughout the valley. On either side of it rise magnificent bills, clothed with verdure of various emerald hues, fRIBUNE'S GREAT OFFER and through the vale winds the peaceful Susquehanna river, irrigating and enriching the soil, making of this region a garden spot of beauty and fertility. Many handsome residences dot the landscape and the fields are level and well cultivated, truck gardens and floral cultivation lending an air of thrift and enterprise. The air is clear and bracing and from the neighboring summits a view of many miles up and down the anthracite region is unfolded.

Beautiful Surroundings.

In the midst of this charming valley the Wyoming Seminary is implanted, like a gem in a setting of emerald beauty. The buildings of the institution, erected for their adaptability for seminary work, compelse seven halls, viz.: Swetland, Commercial, Union. Centenary, Nelson Memorial, Nesbitt, and the Caroline M. Pettebone Gymnasium. Swetland, Commercial and Union halls were erected in 1853 to replace the hall destroyed by flames. In 1866, the centennial of the introduction of Methodism in America from subscriptions taken through the conference, Centenary hall was creeted. In 1887, by the aid of a few friends of the school, Nelson Memorial hall was erected. This contains conveniences for the music department and a most beautiful room for chapel exercises, In 1894 Abram Nesbitt, Esq., of Kingston, erected and donated to the school Nesbitt hall, a picture of which is here presented, one of the very best buildings among the preparatory schools in the Union. In 1898 Mrs. Caroline M. Pettebone of Wyom-Ing gave the school the beautiful Caroline M. Pettebone gynmasium, which has no superior among academic institutions. In 1894, in celebration of the semi-centennial anniversary of the athletic field was purchased, graded and equipped with grand stand, ball tennis and alley ball courts.

Nesbitt Hall.

Nesbitt Science hall is of brick, with red sandstone trimmings. The building is one of the most substantial in educational use. Its dimensions are 100 hundred feet long, seventy feet wide, and three stories high. In the basement are the cloak rooms and lockers for day scholars. paratus and lighted throughout with Edison incandescent lights, the semiinary having its own plant. The public rooms have beautiful electrollers and students' rooms are provided with swinging brackets with sixteen-candle power lamps. The buildings and grounds represent an estimated value of nearly $300,000.

Specific Work of the School. The special work of the Wyoming eading colleges, technical and professional schools, United States academies, and for business life. The busi- in the country, is there located. The ness department is a thorough, elaborate and scientific business college, with the very best of appliances for instruction. The seminary has been from the start co-educational. The history and results of this school, we believe, prove beyond question that the plan of educating young people together is the natural plan; that it is productive of the best results intellectually, morally and socially and therefore is the better plan.

Courses of Study. There will be five courses of study open for the choice of the winner of the Scranton Tribune Educational Contest, all of which are for four years. They comprise the classical, Latin-scientific, literary-scientific, scientific and technical. Students who have been partially fitted in other schools may take any studies they are

We do not say this applies particularly to horses, but speaking of horses it reminds us of several valuable horses that are owned here. Space would not permit, perhaps, in mentioning them all, but just to keep apace with our neighbors down the creek. It is not often that a tonsorial artist takes in dimes enough to be the owner of valuable horses, but such is the case with our townsman, Fred M. Osterhout, who is the proud owner of "Belle Hill," which is one of three colts sired by "Governor Hill," whose track record was 2.10, made on a track at Elmira. ## THE MARKETS.

Wall Street Review. New York, July 13.-Today's stock market

New York, July 13.—Today's stock market was but a dull and uninteresting affair and marked the further relapse from the manipulated rise of the early part of the week which came into evidence yesterday. Selling to take profits was the order of the day and the bears put out some fresh short lines. That neither of these operations was on a very extensive scale is sufficiently shown by the small figure of the total sales of the day, and the greater part of even these stock dealings took place in the forence when the bull interests were still making futile efforts to continue the advance. The pressure of profit taking which met the advance when last night's level of prices was approached discouraged the attempt and the market was allowed to lapse into an almost lifeless state. Small as the offerings were, they were sufficient to drive prices sharply below last night's level. The Grangers, and some of the southern railway stocks were most notably aftered, but there were examples of weakness all through the list of railways and specialties. The steel stocks became notably weak late in the day on a growing apprehension that the general reaction in business will curtail the consumptive requirements for iron and seed whatever the ultimate basis of prices may be. Total sales 190,800 shares.

The bond market rontinued dull and the Total sales 190,800 shares.

The bond market continued dull and the changes were mixed. The total sales par value were $1,535,900. U. S. bonds were unchanged
