THREE OPINIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT

RECEIVED YESTERDAY BY PRO-THONOTARY COPELAND.

They Contain the Reasonings and Highest Tribunal in the Cases of Von Storch Against Von Storch, Sewage Company Against Olyphant, and Gunster, Assignee, Against Jessup and Others-Local Court Affirmed in Each Instance.

Prothonetary John Copeland yesterday received from Prothonotary Charles Green, of the Supreme court, copies of the opinions rendered, Wednesday last in the cases of Von Storch against Von Storch, the Olyphant Sewage and Drainage company against the Borough of Olyphant, and Gunster, asignee, against Jessup and others, comnonly known as the City bank case.

In the first named opinion, which is by Justice McCollum, a nice compliment is paid the trial judge, Hon. R. W. Archbald, on his review of the longdrawn-out case, contained in an opinon on the rule for a new trial. Supreme court's confirmation of Judge Archbald's finding is couched in these words:

This was an action of ejectment brought t recover possession of land which the plaintiff claimed he had valid title to. That the land was conveyed to him many years ago was shown by the deeds and papers in his possession and mitted in evidence on the trial. It required no oral testimony to establish his case in chief. The documentary evidence alone was quite sufficent for that purpose. The reply of the defend-ant to the claim of the plaintiff was based on in alleged equity arising from an alleged parol trust. It needs no argument to prove that a defense of this nature cannot prevail in the abence of clear and satisfactory proof to sustain t. "The legal title to lands ought not to be exposed to the peril of a successful attack, exting where the right in equity is clearly blished," Clark J. in Earnest's Appeal, 106 Pa. 318.

A NICE COMPLIMENT. The testimony introduced on the trial was remarkably voluminous and a part of it related to matters relevant to the i-sue and occurring more than lifty years ago. This testimony we have examined and considered with care and the con-clusion we have drawn from it is that it presented an issue for the determination of a jury under proper instructions from the court. A specification herein of any part of the testimony is needless. Every part of it which is material to a proper understanding of the issue was rethat on arriving here wandered to the ferred to in the charge, which occupies eighty Notch, suffered from a sudden attack, pages of the appellant's paper nook. More exhaustive and pains-taking instructions seldom if ever appear in a charge. Whether there was an error in the instructions is a question to be considered in connection with the assignments re

There are thirty-seven assignments filed in the case and ten of them are based on excerpts from the charge. We have carefully examined and fully considered the excerpts on which the ten able to discover in either of them any cause for a reversal of the judgment or re-trial of the case. In this connection we may state that, in ur opinion, the learned court below did not err our opinion, the learned court below and not err in declining to grant permission to the defendants' counsel to open and close the case to the jury. This refusal is the basis of the second assignments, which we now dismiss with the naignments based on the excerpts from the harge. The assignments relating to the affirm-nce or denial of the points submitted and to the admission or rejection of offers of evidence need not be specifically referred to acrein. Having examined all the assignments and duly con-sidered the arguments of counsel in support of and against them, we conclude that there is no asonable ground for reversing the judgment stered in the court below. The case was carefully and fairly tried and the result reached is a conformity with the testimony on which the ordict was based. All the assignments are

Judge Edwards tried the Olyphant ase, and as has been the invariable rule with his findings in municipal law the Supreme justices concur with him

n every one of his conclusions. The City bank case was tried by Judge Archbald. The witness referred to is Edward Merrifield. His transfer of his interest in the bank was made lust a few days before the second trial was decided by Judge Archbald to be colorable transaction and therefore ould not be allowed to make the witiess competent. As the whole case depended on Mr. Merrifield's testimony the trial was abruptly terminated and an appeal taken to the Supreme court. The Supreme court, through Justice Fell, had this to say of the matter:

ACTION WAS COLORABLE. This action was brought by the assignce for the benefit of creditors of the Scranton City bank on a bond conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of its vice-president. The principal and two of the sureties died before the trial, and the representatives of their estates have been substituted on the record as defendants. The witness whose competency was challenged as to matters which had occurred during the lives of the decrased parties was a stockholder in the bank at the time the assignment was made, and as such was liable to the credi tors in double the amount of the stock held by him. He was also a director, and with the other directors had entered into an agreement with the depositors to pay them in full and to take an assignment of their claims against the bank, and claims amounting to $183,000 had been as signed to them. For the purpose of carrying out this agreement, the witness had Joined with the other directors in borrowing a large amount of money on their joint notes, one which for $0,000 was still unpaid. Notwithstanding the apparent ncompetency of the witness because of his in ed that he was qualified to testify because the statute of limitation was a bar to any proceed-ings to enforce the liability of the stockholders, under the special provisions of the bank's char-ter, and because he had assigned his interest in he fund in the hands of the assignee for the benefits of creditors which he had acquired by depositors' claims against the bank. It was held that the statute of limitations relieved the witness from liability as a stockholder, and that the assignment of his interest was not colorable, but that it did not carry the whole interest, as he will still be liable on his agreement to pay the stockholders in full, and on the note given for the money borrowed for the purchase of claims.

to the attention of the court, a different co clusion might have been reached as to the ef-fect of the assignment, even if it had carried the whole interest. It was made a few days before the second trial, and evidently not in that good faith which the statute requires, but for the sole purpose of enabling the witness t sustain the action of his testimony. The dec ion, however, is based upon reasons which fully ustain it. The agreement to pay the deposits in all was binding. Admittedly they had not been aid in full, and the court with the witness be one it found that the directurs had not been re eased. Whatever the assignce for the benefit of creditors might recover in this action would go in direct relief of the pecuniary obligation of the

INVESTIGATING THE RENDHAM ACCIDENT

JURY BEGINS THE TAKING OF TESTIMONY.

Inquest Had Several Irrelevant Features, but a Large Amount of Evidence Tending to Explain the Wreck and What Led Up to It Is Adduced-That Boys Were in the Habit of Changing the Signal Lights Is Quite Conclusively Proven-Will Visit Scene.

"Who are you acting as lawyer for, anyway, the company or county? Do you want to bulldoze me just because have me here singlehanded? withdraw from the stand." This Parthian shot was delivered by Patrick Brady, first of the witnesses sumnoned by Coroner J. J. Roberts in the nquest last night in the case of Motornan Westbrook, who was killed in the ollision of two cars at Rendham on the Scranton Street Railway company's Duryea line, July 8. The witness delivered the words in a loud, animated voice to Coroner Roberts, and then started to leave the stand. This was the auspicious opening of the case, and until 11 o'clock the jurors were forced to listen to a mass of confused eviience, regarding the collision, adjourning at last to have another sit-

At the suggestion of Attorney C. P. O'Malley, who appeared in the interests of the company, the jurors will be given a ride this afternoon to the scene of the catastrophe on two cars similar to those in the wreck. A strong effort is being made by the ompany to prove that the accident was in no way due to any defects in the construction of the road, or any carelessness on the part of the crew of either car, but that it was the direct result of a misunderstanding arising on account of the signals having been changed by mischlevous boys living in the neighborhood.

SIGNALS ARE CHANGED. Several witnesses testified that boys in the neighborhood often interfere with and change the signals, and for that reason they consider traffic on the road dangerous. Mrs. John Owens, of Old Forge, testified that she lives near a signal box, and has often seen boys interfering with the signals. They congregate in a field nearby and play ball, and on several occasions she has seen them either pulling down the signals with sticks, or mounting on each other's shoulders to change them. Whenever she saw the boys interferng with the lights, she called to them to leave the signals alone. On no occasion had she heard a conductor requesting any one standing near a box o change the signals for him. Patrick Brady, the first witness put on the stand, testified that he was in the car coming from Duryea to Scranton. There were about ten passengers on the car. At Rendham the two cars collided as they met after descending the two grades. He was unable to vinced of it, maintaining that he is say whether the car was under reasuffering from eczema or some other sonable control, saying that he was not conversant enough with the subject and could not give any decided > lision. Mr. Brady was rather an uncomfortable kind of a witness and both Coroner Roberts and the jurymen were unable to get much information from him. Attorney O'Malley opened fire with a few queries as to whether or not be remembered the conductor having left the car to change the signals etc., and then asked him "How about the speed-?"

TILT WITH WITNESS. "I object," interposed the coroner forcibly pointing his finger flercely at the witness and continued: "This man knows nothing about the speed, He has testified already to that ef-

After considerable debate, however the witness was allowed to answer and

"To the best of my belief there was fuller speed at the time of the collision than at any time during the ride, each man thinking he had a clear road before him. The rate at which we were going I should judge to be about twenty miles an hour.' A few tart words here passed between Coroner Roberts and the witness, which resulted in the volcanic outburst quoted above by Mr. Brady. William Lamoreux, another passenger on the Scranton bound car testified that while on the car he saw the motorman tightening the brakes and making a strenuous effort to stop the car. Mrs. Foley, of Rendham, who was walking nearby at the time of the collision gave evidence to the same effect. Rev. J. L. Race, pastor of the Stewart Memorial church, at Rendham, was another witness called. He told how he had been standing in front of his parsonage when he heard the cars approaching. "I saw them com-ing near each other," said he, "but I thought they would merely come to each other on the track and then stop, as I had often before seen them do. On several occasions the cars have met and would halt awhile, the two motormen disputing the right of way, at which times I acted as peace-maker. The two cars were approaching each other slowly and I had no idea that any accident would result. At that they came together.

NO PREVIOUS INJURY. On cross-examination he reiterated the assertion that the cars had con together on previous occasions at the point in question, without any injury

sion of July 8, in his opinion, were due to a changing of the signals.

The Scranton bound car, he declared, was a stronger built car than the one from Scranton, and after the collision it was found resting on the other's platform. On being further questioned he declared that he saw nothing to make him believe that either brakeman had neglected his duty.

Vincent and Nicola Scandolie, who were riding on the car from Duryea. then testified, giving their residence through an interpreter. Vincent said that the motorman on his car jumped off and was followed by most of the passengers just before the cars struck. nut Grove, Fla., says there has been Nicola gave testimony to the same ef-

Conrad Lang, who lives in Rendham, near the scene of the collision, and who saw the wreck, gave his version of it, which was very similar to and they say it is the best medicine that of Rev. Mr. Race, and his little 4 o'clock this afternoon at the office of grandson produced several rough sketches which he drew immediately after the collision, showing the position of the cars.
