DIED VERY SUDDENLY. Throat Trouble Caused the Demise of Thomas Peter Wendover.

Thomas Peter Wendover, of 313 Madison avenue, died yesterday morning at his home, after a very short illness, laryngitis being the cause of his death. Friday he complained of throat trouble and remained at home. Saturday he seemed practically recovered, but yesterday morning was taken suddenly ill again and died about 12:20 o'clock. Mr. Wendover was very well known in the city and was a prominent member of several secret organizations, being especially interested in the Knights of Maccabees. He was grand deputy commander of this district of the Maccabees.

He was 49 years of age and a man of magnificent physique, looking hale and hearty enough to live beyond the allotted three score years and ten, which makes his sudden end all the more shocking. He was about six feet in height and weighed over two hundred pounds. He was never subject to throat trouble, and the first attack Friday passed away very quickly and Saturday morning he appeared to be in fine health. He went to bed Saturday night feeling very ill, however, and speedily grew worse.

Thomas Peter Wendover was born in 1851, in New York city, of good American stock, one of his ancestors, Peter Wendover, being among the early settlers of New York state. Peter H. Wendover, was a New York ship builder and designed the first American flag, the one made by the famous Betsy Ross.

Deceased was educated in New York city, and lived there until he was about 20 years of age, when he moved to Troy, N. Y., with his mother. He then went on the road as a salesman and followed that calling for many years. About twelve years ago, he married in Newcastle, Mrs. Wade, who survives him. He later moved to Jamestown, N. Y. About nine years ago he moved to Scranton and since then has lived in Dunmore and the central city. For the last few years he was in charge of the collecting department of the Singer Sewing Machine agency in Scranton. From his very arrival here he was prominently identified with secret societies, and was especially notable in Knights of Maccabees' circles. As grand deputy commander he was a moving spirit in the order and was prominently identified with every event of any importance. He was also an active worker in the Improved Order of Red Men, among the Knights of Malta, the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and the Odd Fellows.

Mrs. Wendover, his wife, has been seriously ill the last six months, and it was feared that the terrible shock caused by her husband's sudden death would have fatal results. No date has been fixed as yet for the funeral, all arrangements pending the arrival of relatives. Mr. Wendover is survived by his wife, his mother, Mrs. T. P. Wendover, of Buffalo, N. Y., his step-son, F. E. Wade, of this city, and an adopted sister, Mrs. Allan Sproul, of Evanston, Ill.

THE HANDWRITING UPON THE WALL

SERMON OF REV. JAMES STUART DICKSON.

The Eloquent Philadelphia Divine Spoke in the First Presbyterian Church Last Night and Drew Lessons from the Message That Appeared on the Wall During the Progress of Belshazzar's Feast. We All Have a Supreme Moment in Our Lives—How to Meet It.

Rev. James Stuart Dickson, of Philadelphia, preached an interesting sermon at the First Presbyterian church last night, where the congregations of the First and Second churches worshipped. He took for his text, "Thou art weighed in the balance and art found wanting," Daniel vi:27. He told of the dramatic features of the great feast of Belshazzar, of the idolatrous, rolling revelers, wasting the night in riotous living and of the sudden and terrible warning, the hand-writing on the wall. All night had been passed in drunkenness and sensuality, but at last wantonness and sacrilege sunk to their lowest depths when Belshazzar ordered that the sacred vessels be brought in.

Then the mystic words appeared on the wall, and in vain the astrologers and wise men tried to explain the meaning. "But then," said Rev. Dickson, "one of those present gave the first really wise counsel, and suggested that Daniel be brought in." Then were the wondrous words deciphered and the dread meaning interpreted, which foretold the incoming of the Medes.

But these words, "weighed in the balance and found wanting," think of them. Belshazzar was given an opportunity to do great things by God, but he neglected them. He was tried and tested, but was found wanting. And do you, who are especially interested in the Knights of Maccabees, think God is doing any less for you and me?

ONE SUPREME MOMENT. "We all have our great deeds and missions to perform, we all have one supreme moment in our lives. The supreme moment came to Samuel when he was in the home of Eli, it came to David when he shepherd was asked if Jesse had another son. It came to Isaiah with that vision of the Most High, it came to Paul with the vision of Troas, it came to Martin Luther when he cut the cord that bound him to Rome and entered the monk's life. It came to Washington when he became leader of a forlorn hope under the elm at Cambridge, it came to Lincoln when he crossed the threshold of the White House and began the lonely life of misunderstanding and often thwarted service by which he saved a race and nation.

There is some main service for the life of every one of God's called servants. God is fitting ourselves for some work that has an important relation to the progress of His kingdom as the ministry of Saul or Samuel, or he may have marked you out for an unobtrusive place that has relation no less real to his wide purpose. He has chosen you to win in your life some notable victory over the devil and the band of forces of sin.

ARE FITTING OURSELVES. "And looking from the human side we can very well believe that our whole life may be one consistent, unceasing training for such a crisis. Day by day we are fitting ourselves for some fitting relation to it. But the whole thing can be looked at from the divine side, too. In the performance of each duty, in the endurance of each temptation, in the casting of ourselves on God, in taking us up and trying us, seeing if we are yet up to his standard for us, "Some day every one meets the crisis in his life. Then comes the great, the vital turning point, upon which hinges the destiny of man. The crisis of Saul came to him when he was crowned king. Amalekites, when he disregarded the command of God as given him through Samuel, his prophet. The crisis of Belshazzar came to him when he disregarded all counsel and in drunken revels and a carnival of debauchery paid no heed to the safety of his city, and paid the penalty with his life, when he proclaimed himself useless for God's purposes.

"It came to Judas, when he betrayed the master, and sold Christ. So with each of us. The critical time of crisis, will come to all when we finally prove our fitness or our unfitness. Then we will be weighed in the balance, and tested and tried.

"When we do evil in thought or act, whenever we do wrong in any sort, we fight the intercession of Jesus Christ for us. "Remember you have a great friend in heaven, and one who can save you from that terrible enemy, Self, that mighty power which can save you, will help you, if you cry out for aid."

DROWNED IN LAKE HENRY. Sad Ending of John R. Weldon's Fishing Expedition.

John R. Weldon, aged nineteen years, was drowned at Lake Henry, Saturday morning, while fishing in company with Louis Ridenour, of 423 Wheeler avenue. The boys had gone to the lake Friday afternoon and fished all night. About 8 o'clock in the morning they anchored their boat off the edge of the floating island.

Ridenour left the boat and went to a point a short distance from Weldon's, who was seated in the stern of the boat. A few minutes later Ridenour called to his companion that he had a "bite," but received no answer. When he went to investigate, he found Weldon's hat floating on the water. Without a moment's hesitation, Ridenour dove into the lake in search of his companion, but failed to locate him. This he repeated until almost exhausted. He then rowed to Canfield's cottage for assistance.

Messrs. Canfield, Robinson and others responded and the body was recovered at a point near where the boat had been anchored. The boy had evidently lost his balance and fell from the boat.

The remains were later removed to the home of deceased's mother at 1244 North Washington avenue. Deceased had been an apprentice at the Dickinson works for several years. The remains will be taken to Altoona for interment.

LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 46,970

"I had female complaints so bad that it caused me to have hysterical fits; have had as many as nine in one day.

"Five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me and it has been a year since I had an attack.

Mrs. Edna Jackson, Pearl, La.

If Mrs. Pinkham's Compound will cure such severe cases as this surely it must be a great medicine—is there any sufferer foolish enough not to give it a trial?

ONLY A BLAZE. "We have much reason to believe that what we have seen is only the blue blaze bursting through the chinks and crevices of the fabric of our social and national life. There is every reason to believe that the devil below. What is the cause of this, and how can this menace to peace and security to life be best dealt with, are questions which should engage the serious attention of every philanthropist, separately and those who are the moulders of character and the framers of law. Without attempting any solution of this great problem, I do believe that the present state of things constitute a loud and imperative call to the church of God to be more faithful, more sincere, more energetic in the work of the Master, more sympathetic, in a word, more Christ-like. We are often harping on the question of 'our rights.' It would be well for all if we could impress the minds of our people with the duty of 'our duties,' as taught in the word of God. The word of God is the regenerator of society. It is the power of God unto salvation.

HORSE'S WILD BREAK. Exciting Runaway Takes Place on the Hill.

A horse and buggy belonging to a central city hiveryman were yesterday afternoon central figures in a very exciting runaway. The outfit was in front of the home of Maurice Sloan, of 713 Quincy avenue, who was about to take a drive with his wife.

About 5 o'clock a street car whizzed by, and the horse, suddenly taking fright and there being no one in the buggy to restrain it, dashed down Quincy avenue.

An ineffectual attempt was made to stop the animal by Walter Baumeister, a young man living near by, and the horse continued to dash down the street, where it collided with the curb, and the buggy lost two wheels. The horse then started on its wild career down Gibson street, but turned in on Monroe avenue, and continued up the avenue as far as Pine street, where it wandered along the sidewalk a short distance and succeeded in destroying a young tree in front of the residence of Mr. Governor. It then rushed down Pine street at a furious rate, but was at last captured between Adams and Washington avenues. The horse itself was little the worse for the glorious time it had had, but the buggy was badly damaged.

DRENCHING THE WORLD WITH BLOOD

PRESENT TIME BIG WITH OMINOUS POSSIBILITIES.

In a Sermon in the Adams Avenue Chapel Yesterday Morning Rev. James Hughes Reviewed the Present Condition of the World. Referred to the Condition of Affairs in China and the Assassination of King Humbert, of Italy, and Other Growned Heads.

"It would appear that the present time is big with ominous possibilities," said Rev. James Hughes in a sermon in the Adams Avenue Presbyterian chapel last evening, "and fears chase each other as truly as darkness succeeds the light. When the peace congress met at The Hague some time ago, our hearts were cheered with the prospect that great international questions being amicably settled without the arbitrament of the sword, but before the ink was dry in the signature of the president to the minutes of the last meeting, war had burst, like an avalanche, upon the fair face of sunny Siam, Africa, Greece, the soil with blood and filling the air with the groans of the dying and the shrieks of widows and orphans.

"Soon after this, we witnessed the opening of the great exposition in the metropolis of the world's fashion and elegance, and hopes were cherished that the bringing together of so many leaders of thought and public enterprise would tend very powerfully to create and foster a better understanding among those standing at the fountains of national destinies in the various nations of the earth; but almost before the resonance of the elegant opening ceremony had fitfully died away, the arrogant, vulgar in China, led on by cruel, relentless, so-called statesmen, and the mad pull over the heart of all the civilized nations of the two great hemispheres of this globe.

CHINESE DUPLICITY. "The fate of many high state functionaries and thousands of helpless Christians is shrouded by Chinese duplicity and diabolical knavery, while the whole world stands aghast at the horrible possibilities of a brutal massacre on a large scale. Just while the heart of the nations is being rent by this Chinese trouble, the appalling news reaches us from the classic capital of Italy of the assassination of King Humbert. The murder of this royal personage has caused a thrill of horror to run through the world, not entirely on account of the sacrifice of this individual life, but because of the general insecurity of life which such a crimson deed indicates.

"We may try to allay the fears of people by stating that such assassinations are poor, ignorant, deluded, insane persons, but the fact still remains that this nefarious work is being done on an increasingly large scale, and done too, mark you, by intelligent men. These fearful uprisings among certain members of a substratum of society are to me even more ominous than the warlike tendencies of some nations. They indicate that there is a very dangerous quantity of noxious gas down in the cellars of even Christian nations, which imperil the stability of domestic, social and national life. During the past few years, the emperor, two presidents, one queen and one king have been assassinated, besides many futile attempts made on the lives of other persons of rank and position.
