OLYPHANT.

The sewer question is still the allabsorbing topic of conversation on the streets of our town. Anything to defeat the corporation sewer is the cry. stretch of the Lackawanna street pave and are evidently bent on reaching the "flats" first. A special meeting of the council was held on Tuesday night to consider matters relative to the sewer: whether the borough had not the right to appoint their own inspector to see that the work was done properly and that the streets were left in proper condition. Mr. Van Sickle said that he had consulted the borough attorney on the question, who stated that while the company had every legal right to occupy the streets they were bound to leave them in as good condition as they found them and could be held accountable for any damage that may occur in coming in contact with the borough's own sewer,

Mr. Mack then responded that the workmen in excavating near the intersection of Lloyds court had broken one of the borough pipes. Mr. Reap then moved that a committee be appointed to confer with the attorney as to the mode of proceedure against the Sewer Drainage company for the damage sustained. Messes, Reap and Gillespie were named. The chairman was empowered to employ a competent inspector to look after the borough's interest in the construction of

A committee of tax-payers from the "flats" were present and wanted counell to give them permission to connect a private sewer in that section of the town to the borough's system. The members of the council were willing to grant the request, but thought Miss Mabel Jadwin, of Carbondale, the better way to get about it would be for them to bring in a petition then pass an ordinance making their sewer an extension of the First sewer district of the borough. A commiltee of two were appointed to draw The Mayfield band will give an open up an ordinance for this purpose and have it ready for Monday night's meeting.

Little Hope for Henry Maynes' Recovery-An Operation Performed Upon Him Yesterday Afternoon.

A DAINTY CROP. How Mushrooms Can Be Profitably Raised and Handled. The prices which rule in the markets for mushrooms at the present time prove conclusively that they form a very profitable crop. There are several ways of raising them. They can be grown in the open, under frames, and in hot-houses, but whichever method be utilized, the crop will be found to be one of the most profitable that can be raised for market purposes. It matters little what sysem be adopted to raise them so long as the work is done well, but it is absolutely necessary, when they have been grown, that they be put up in porper form, for if they are badly packed they will give poor results at est. We are dealing with a dainty product, with one which requires care in handling, for the mushrooms should be unbroken and in fresh condition when they are brought under the notice of buyers. When we argue thus, we are not intending to lead up to the suggestion that they should only be put up in punnets, though that is the best package for the best stuff. If they are well grown and in good

We are quite aware that this point has been debated again and again by some writers, but there are risks when the crop is grown in the open which must and other things, too, we have decided that the shed is the best for mushroom cultivation. With a sunken bed and a path down the center under the ridge of the roof, one may very cheaply secure a fine place for the purpose. We think the sunk bed best, because it tends to economize or Further, the thatched roof secures an even temperature, and an even temperature is a polent factor with this crop. We have seen heavy crops grown in the houses we refer to-a shed about 100 feet in length by 25 feet the finest mushrooms ever marketed for six months' work. Not a had result by any means. If the value is put profitable nature of the business is ap Too many growers do not consider the importance of these, and fall in ing to recognize the importance of ventilation many growers imagine that the quality of the indoor mushthose grown in the open.
