DERRICK TOOK A TUMBLE.

Huge Beams Fell with a Crash Yesterday.

A large part of the big ninety-five foot derrick, recently erected on the court house square to put in position the shaft of the soldiers' and sailors' monument, feel with a great crash about 2.20 o'clock yesterday afternoon, as the result of the guy wires being unduly tightened.

Luckily no one was caught under the huge timbers. A flying splinter, how-ever, struck in the hand Thomas Langan, who was working on the court house lawn. It became embedded in his left hand, but was removed and the hand carefully bandaged.

The derrick was broken beyond ro pair and a new one will have to be constructed.
