FALLING TIMBER CRUSHED HIS SKULL

Violent Death of John Lynch, of Tobyhanna, a Lumber Man Who Was Well Known in This City.

John Lynch, the well-known Tobyhanna lumberman, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon by being struck in the skull by a large log, which fell from a timber car, the unloading of which he was superintending. Mr. Lynch was the woods foreman of the Dodge, Meigs & Co. lumber firm for the last thirty years, and was one of the most experienced and competent lumber men in the state. He is survived by his wife and the following five children: D. M. Lynch, William M., Mary A., George C. and Joseph P., all of Tobyhanna.

The accident which resulted in Mr. Lynch's death occurred at a point three miles south of Tobyhanna, about 5.35 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was superintending the unloading of a car of lumber, when suddenly there was a crash and a large, heavy beam fell from the car and struck him full in the skull. He fell to the ground, and when picked up was dead.

Mr. Lynch was fifty-eight years of age, and was born in Ireland. When he was but four years of age his father, John Lynch, sr., emigrated to this country, and settled at Tobyhanna. John Lynch spent his boyhood days there, and when about twenty-one years of age entered the employ of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad company, and helped in the building of the Lackawanna's second track through Tobyhanna. He remained in the railroad company's employ for ten years, and then accepted a position with the Dodge & Meigs Lumber company, and remained with the latter concern ever since. His work was uniformly excellent and rapidly acquired him the splendid reputation he had among Pennsylvania lumber men. An offer was recently made him to take charge of a branch of the Dodge & Meigs company's works in the Adirondack mountains, and he would have left Tobyhanna in a few weeks.

Mr. Lynch was very well known in Scranton, and leaves a very large number

WILLIAM KENNEDY KILLED.

He Was Walking on the Tracks of the N. Y. O. & W. R. R.

While walking along the New York, Ontario and Western railroad tracks last night a man whose name is William Kennedy, but whose identity is unknown, was struck and killed by a south-bound passenger train. Kennedy was struck by the train at 7.55 o'clock on the tracks near the Providence station. His remains, which were badly mangled, were removed to Jones' undertaking establishment. A transfer card from the United Mine Workers' union, No. 882, dated Saturday, Sept. 15, was found in his pocket. It certified that "William Kennedy was in good standing" with the order. Several attempts at identification were made, but of the numerous persons who viewed the body none recognized the features of the dead man. Kennedy was about 30 years of age and 5 feet 4 inches in height. He had black hair and gray eyes, and was a smooth shaven. He wore a plain black suit. Coroner Roberts will view the remains today.

MAY BE THE SLAYER OF OFFICER GOLDEN

Man Named Longo Just Returned to Italy Committed a Desperate Crime and Then Ended His Life.

There is a possibility that "Tony Longo, the Dunmore Italian, who a month ago shot and killed Patrolman James Golden, of the Dunmore police force, has run his course. The possibility is contained in the following dispatch:

Caserta, Ital., Sept. 14.—Gaetano Longo, on returning from the United States to Pastena, a small town in the province of Salerno, a town of jealousy, and then killed two men whom he believed to have had improper relations with her. He then ran amok, killing five others and wounding two fatally. He then committed suicide.

There are many circumstances which go to indicate that Longo, the Dunmore murderer, and Longo, the Pastena murderer and suicide, are one and the same.

Following the shooting at Dunmore, Longo disappeared from sight as completely as though the earth had opened and swallowed him up, and although on various occasions men supposed to be he, were seen at Stroudsburg, Binghamton, Great Bend, Lake Ariel, Elmhurst and other places, no positive clue was gained as to his whereabouts and he remained at liberty.

"The difference in the first names of the two men, is easily accounted for, the English speaking friends of Longo were very likely to anglicize the foreign name "Gaetano" by emphasizing the last syllable and turning it into Tony. Golden's slayer left a wife in Dunmore, who is at present living with the family of Frank Longo, her husband's brother.

When Frank Longo was seen yesterday by a Tribune man, he denied knowledge of Tony's whereabouts.

"Where did you and Tony live before you came to this country?" he was asked, and he answered "Naples." "Did you ever live in Pastena?"

"Oh, yes, I lived in Pastena."

Later, however, he amended his first statement by saying that Pastena was a small town only four miles from Naples. On being asked whether his brother had a wife or sweetheart in Pastena he shortly remarked that Tony left his wife in this country, and that, to the best of his knowledge, there was no other woman living who could call his brother husband.

From all surface appearances, however, Gaetano Longo and Tony Longo are the same men. In the month which has elapsed since the shooting occurred Longo has had abundant time to return to Italy, and if he did leave a wife behind him in Pastena there is little doubt among those who know his fiery temper that he would have acted exactly as the report shows Gaetano to have done.

The name of Longo is not a common one in Italy, and the fact that an Italian just back from America bearing this cognomen should return to the small village where Tony Longo formerly lived seems more than a mere coincidence.

GOOD EFFECTS OF BOXER UPRISING

REV. R. M. MATEER VIEWS SITUATION OPTIMISTICALLY.

He Has Spent Seventeen Years in China and Says the Massacres Have Caused a Wonderful Revolution of the Missionary Spirit in All Lands—Believes That the Present Manchu Dynasty Will Be Overthrown Which Would Be a Good Thing for China.

Rev. R. M. Mateer, a Presbyterian missionary, who has spent the past seventeen years of his life in China, in the course of an interesting talk on existing conditions in the Celestial Kingdom, at the First Presbyterian church last night, said the Boxer movement has had one good effect inasmuch as the slaughter of a few has stirred up the many in this and other lands to the necessity of aiding the cause of foreign missions, and of furthering the extension of the kingdom of Christ.

"This uprising," said he, "is but the logic of events. It is simply God's army marching on. The slaughter of the missionaries, who have bravely suffered the most cruel tortures, has inspired many others to take up the glorious work of Christianizing this great Chinese race and has infused a spirit of missionary enthusiasm into the people of this broad land such as has never been felt before. Another good effect it will have is the overthrow of the present abominably inefficient and abominably corrupt government of China."

The speaker explained at length the history of the rise and reign of the Manchu dynasty which now rules China and expressed as his opinion that it alone is responsible for the present trouble. He said that the Manchus have forced their rule upon the people and that the great bulk of the inhabitants are opposed to them.

AN UNIQUE COLD STORAGE CELLAR

It Was Opened Saturday, After Being Sealed for a Period of Eighteen Years—What It Was Used For.

What perhaps is the most unique cold storage cellar in Scranton, or very likely in Pennsylvania, is the cold storage cellar on Cedar avenue, which, for years dating back into the early '60s, was a hotel and until a few weeks ago known as Fuchs's saloon.

The hotel, which is now razed to the ground to make way for a more pretentious building by the Robinson estate, was one of the landmarks of Scranton, and under this old hotel is the famous cold storage cellar. In its day it was wonderful, and still today a magnificent piece of masonry. The cellar, which has not been in use for the past eighteen to twenty years, and upon whose stone floors scarcely any foot has trod for the length of time, was visited Saturday by a Tribune man, through the courtesy of Charles Stark.

Descent was made by the aid of a torch through an opening two feet in diameter, which, through two feet of solid masonry in the arch, through which a ladder thirty-two feet in length had been dropped. As the descent was made, a small, musty with age, poured through the aperture, as if to escape from its long imprisonment. The descent completed, the reporter found himself standing in a long, dark, gloomy arched corridor, eighteen feet high and thirteen feet wide, built of massive stone.

By the flickering light of the torch hundreds of glittering stalactites were seen, hanging pendant-like from the top and decorating and festooning the joints. Some of these hardened stems of carbonate of lime and water were from four to six feet in length and sleek like a wax taper. They presented a brilliant appearance.

Directly underneath, and resembling so many balls of marble, were their counterparts, the stalagmites, which were formed in the slime and water by the constant dripping of the stalactites above. A whispering wind, which was plainly heard at the other, and a loud cry would reverberate ten to fifteen times.

The cellar, the high stone arch of which is some twenty feet below the level of Cedar avenue, is 175 feet in length, and runs from Cedar avenue to within twenty or thirty feet of the Roaring Brook. It is of arched form, eighteen to twenty feet high, and twelve to fifteen feet wide, and is built of heavy stone. It was here the beer for the hotel was stored after it was brewed, and put in cold storage for several months, often years, and kept at an even temperature. This was before the day of the present cold storage system. It was in this place that beer brewed in M. Robinson's plant was brought from the brewery in large hogsheds and was transferred by a large pipe to rows of barrels in the cellar. To keep this cellar at an even temperature was no easy task, so when warm weather set in the beer was pushed through an aperture at one end, two feet square, into a stone refrigerator ten feet square and eighteen feet high, which was separated from the main room by a heavy wall, and this rough refrigerator, though the warmest weather, kept the beer at the proper temperature of the cellar from the refrigerator was a windlass, by which the kegs were drawn to the surface when needed. Pipes were at one time connected with the brewery and the cellar and an attempt was made to run the beer direct to the cold storage cellar, a block and a half away, but owing to the foam gathering it was pronounced not feasible.

The cellar, which was built thirty years ago at a great cost, was built by one of the Robinson family. It was used as a cold storage from that time until the year 1882, when the present cold storage came in vogue, and the cellar discontinued, and for eighteen years has been practically hermetically sealed. It is an interesting example of the old German method of keeping lager cold and fresh.

Wishes

Hard things to live on, for wishing and wanting are twin experiences.

Ever study a bank's report of business done? Ever wish you had some of the many dollars listed as "Deposits"? Ever stop to think how all the money got there? Wishes never deposited a dollar—not even a dime.

Every dollar was saved—slowly, perhaps, but surely SAVED. No bank report ever speaks of the dollars "spent." Saved dollars, are the only dollars heard from—the world over. Put your dollars—some by one—in a bank, and you'll have them counted, added up and reported among the dollars of other savers.
