Mr. John Morley, liberal, member for Montroseburghs, In his manifesto, declares that his opinion has not changed that everything might have been attained in South Africa without was "In a single year," he says, "the work of a general in remaining the Dutch and English in South Africa has been undone and the difficult race problem been most miserably handled."

Mr. Morley admits, however, that it is impossible to revolv the proclamations of annexation.

The Earl of Roschery, issuing a manifesto in the form of a letter to liberal candidates, says:

In the present situation of the world, I would vote for almost any strong administration: but the news ent government are strong only in votes. In other respects, they are the weakest government I can recollect."

After enumerating the government's "failures at home and alroad." Lord Rosebery criticizes the conduct of the South African war, declaring that it has "exposed England to humiliations unparalleled in our history since the American war."

He declares that nothing can be hoped from the government either in the matter of urgent domestic reform.) or the reform of the war office.

The chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Reach, and the presiment of the board of trade, Mr. Charles Thompson, as well as other prominent men, have issues manifestos, but these contain no noteworthy features.

ing the Actitude of the mayor of San luan for extertionate punishments inflicted upon Federals, and the next day the office and printing establishment of the Diario were attacked by the lawless element and almost demolished. This affair lasted twenty minutes, in broad daylight, yet not a single arrest was made. Instead, there was printed and circulated broadcast throughout the city a most villainous circular, gloating over the destruction of the press and informing that it had been done in revenge for the article against the mayor. It incited the people of the town to rise up againsy the Federals, to prohibit the printing and circulation of the Diario, to destroy all copies found, and ended with a dire threat against every Federal, closing with the words, "And may God have merey This threat caused a meeting of the Federals to be held in the house of their leader, and coincident with their meeting was the congregation of a vast crowd in the vicinity of the house, which grew larger and larger as the darkness came on. No attempts were made, however, to disperse this crowd, At 9 o'clock the papers were sent the postoffice for transmission to the interior points of the island. These papers, however, as directed in th vile circular, were seized by the mob and torn to shreds. This was the signal for a general attack, and instantly all aimed in the direction of the house in which the Federal meeting was he-
