Testifies to the Good Qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

On the 10th of December, 1897, Rev. S. A. Donahoe, pastor M. E. church South, Pt. Pleasant, W. Va., contracted a severe cold which was attended from the beginning by violent coughing. He says; "After resorting to 'number of so-called 'specifics' usually kept in the house, to no purpose, I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which acted like a charm. I most cheerfully recommend it to the public. For sale by all druggists. Matthew Bros., wholesale and retail agents,

High Constable Frank Martin, who lives on the Ridge road, is a breeder of high-class game chickens, his stock being much sought after by fanciers of fighting stock. But it does not cut any figure with a chicken thief whether the chickens are high-blooded or the common mongrel stock. Saturday night a bird fancier called at Mr. Martin's premises and without making hi presence known he beheaded nineteer full-blooded game chickens and made off. Mr. Martin did not learn of his loss until Sunday morning when he went to feed his flock. The chickens were valued at $40. Mr. Ziba Tinklepaugh, who has a po body around Pardee hall to the east end. As soon as they were discovered, all kinds of alarms were given to get the sophomores out, and true to their class, every available sophomore was on hand. Just then the photographer hove in sight and before the freshmen could surround him the burly "sophs" took his plates and exposed them. First blood for the "sophs." We "freshies' were not to be outwitted and soon dispatched a student after another photographer. This fellow's name is Johnson and he came upon the scene about twenty-five minutes later carrying his camera on his shoulder. As soon as the students saw him they all rushed at him and fortunately the freshmen arrived first and encircled him. This was in front of the observatory. The "sophos" attacked the "freshies" viciously, but were repulsed. Then the narch commenced for the east end of Pardee. All along the distance there was fierce slugging. The "freshies" would carry a big "soph" out and sit on him and then the fun commenced in real earnest. PHOTOGRAPHER FRIGHTENED.

sophomores. Mr. Johnson trembled and shook like a leaf. At last most of the "sophs" were lying on the grass with freshmen sitting upon them and amid intense excitement and the shouts of jubilant freshmen that echoed and re-echoed across the distant hills, the picture of the class of 1900 was taken. This is the first perfect freshmen plcture taken in years. After the picture was taken, the trouble began again and the freshmen had to escort Mr. Johnson all the way back to his shop and place a guard there all night for fear of the angry sophomores breaking in and destroying the plate. When the absent sophomores returned from Nazareth there was "weeping and gnashing of teeth" and rumor had it next day that some poor "freshies" performed many "stunts" that night for the enraged "sophs" as a balm for heir wounded pride. "When We Were Twenty-one."

The story of "When We Were Twenty-one, shich will be presented by N. C. Goodwin and Miss Maxine Elliott at the Lyceum, Wednesday Oct. 17, is a very pretty one, and rather unusua among the tales of the stage. While it is alto gether modern and up-to-date, it has a flavor o the old comedy school, that is as sweet to the mental nostrils as the odor of old roses to the hereof: physical ones. It seems to exploit, primarily the sacredness of friendship. Four bachelors of middle are have bee friends from their school and college days. They are leagued together as the voluntary guardians of the son of a fifth friend, this fifth friend having long since passed away. This son, owing to the scrapes into which he habitually gets, is called the "Imp." His four guardians fixed, as they thought, his marital relations when he was quite a baby; they engaged him to one Phyllis Ericson. Of course, like all these marriages arranged when the objects of them are their infancy, this one was, so not to be, for the young couple had neither love nor attraction for each other. The dramatic interest of this story becomes ntensified when it is discovered that one of the bachelors has been sort of, sub-consciously love with the fair Phyllis, and it is revealed to the audience that all through her life she has been in love with him. The "Imp," however, settles the matter by secretly marrying an adventures, and it is the complications that lead up to this marriage, and the efforts of the bachelors to save him from it, that make the main interest of the story. The story is told in an artistic manner by Mr. Goodwin and Miss Elliott and their large company of elever associates.

"The Bowery After Dark."

"The Bowery After Dark," which will be presented at the Academy, three nights, commencing Thursday, Oct. 18, with matinees Friday and Saturday, is, as its name implies, a play that reproduces many yet unexhibited scenes of life in the most picturesque theroughfare of Greater

An olio is introduced in the "Suicide Hall" scene, and there are other novel features. The hero is hurled head foremost into the nest boa constrictors, and as one of the reptiles coils himself around the man, the soubrette sildes down a rope and rescues him. The story of the play deals with a once beautiful belle, the daughter of a prominent physician in a western city, who is found in "Suicide Hall." Miss Lillian Hoffman plays the leading part. The elaborate scenery used was painted Harley Merry, the celebrated artist.

He Smokes Them Himself.

Edison is fond of smoking, but he become absorbed in work that he even forgets that he has a cigar in his mouth, relates the Chicago Tribune. When he had an office in Fifth avenue, New York, the desk in which he kept a box of cigars was always open, and as the boys came and went at all hours his cigars disappeared with mysterious rapidity. Finally he asked a friend who was in the tobacco business if he could do something to discourage this disappearance. "Wby, yes," said the friend, "I'll make up some cigars for you. I'll put Hoffman House labels on the outside, but I'll fill them up with horsechair and hard rubber." "Well," said Mr. Edison in relating the story, "that fellow went to California and didn't re-turn for three months. I forgot about him mean-time, but when he got back I suid to him.
