CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 18.-Hon. E. A. W. Johnson, Justice of the Peace, writes from 607 Sheffield avenue, Chicago, Ill., the following:

"I was greatly troubled with a cold which settled on my lungs and left me with a disagreeable catarth. As your medicine has come to my notice several times, I determined to see what it would do for me. It has come fully up to my expectations, completely curing my catarrh—leaving no trace of it." E. A. W. else are in some degree complicated by catarrh.

If this fact were better understood by the medical profession than it is today, it would save a great amount of anxiety and suffering, and prevent

WEDDED YESTERDAY.

There was a pretty wedding at St. Rose's church yesterday morning at 8 o'clock. Very Rev. T. F. Coffey performed the ceremony. The contracting parties were Mr. Michael F. She wore hat and gloves to match. Her maid was similarly attired. They will visit New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington and on returning to this city will reside in the newly furnished home of the groom on Seventh avenue. Both of these young people are well known. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Maxwell, of Carthage, Missouri, formerly of this city, and later of Jermyn. She is a young lady of exceptional attainments. After a course in the Emergency hospital she was graduated as a trained nurse and has since followed her profession with much success in this city. "When We Were Twenty-One." H. V. Esmond has written some good, indifferent and bad things for the stage but his "When We Were Twenty-One" almost deserves to rank among the good things he has done. It limited by the capacity of the house. How well the audience enjoyed the performance was shown received. One might wish some features of Mr. Esmond's play eliminated or made over but affer the demonstrations of aproval given by last night's audience for the play and those who presented it were vain to do any hacking at "When

We Were Twenty-One."
The story is simplicity itself. Four men of middle life are the guardians of a youth, the son of a dead chum. It was arranged among the men when the couth was a more child that he should marry Phyllis Ericson with whom they were all more or less in love though she is very much their junior. The youth, who is lovingly called "The Imp" by his guardians upsets the ar rangement to have him marry Phyllis Ericson and conceives a wild infatuation for an adven-turess from the stage to whom he is married before his guardians can head him off in his mad fully. Then it appears that Phyllis had never been in love with "The Imp." but has given her heart to Richard Corewe, one of the guard-ians, who for years has loved her but believed such good fortune as a return of his love was not for him.

Miss Elliott, quite as beautiful as upon her former appearance in this city, was delightful as Phyllis Ericson and proved that she has a right to rank among the leading exponents of comedy conceived and executed characterization. In the supporting company were Henry Woodraff, Neil O'Brien, J. B. Crawford, George E. Bellamy and Miss J. R. Crawford, all of whom were ad-

Even in this era of sumptuous stuging it is not often that a play has the advantage of such an admirable setting as was accorded to "When We Were Twenty-One" last night.

"Bowery After Dark."

The "Bowery After Dark" will be the attract tion at the Academy of Music tonight and will continue the balance of the week with a matine-Friday and Saturday. The piece, as presented at the Academy, is handsomely staged, the scene, mechanical and electrical effects used, are the finest obtainable and the acting company con-sists of talented actors and actresses with exceptional ability to portray the respective roles as signed to them.

The performance, "The Bowery After Dark," is The performance, "The Bowery After Dark," is without a doubt one of the best melo-dramatic productions ever seen at popular prices. The story is perfectly and beautifully told. The moral taught should be a held to everyone sceing it, and those who desire the funny rather than the serious will not be disappointed, as specialties will be introduced by the comedians of the company. During the action of the play exquisite source and denoes will be introduced. quisite songs and dances will be introduced Modjeska, Saturday.

The appearance of Madame Modjeska at the Ly ceum theater on Saturday, matinee and evening, in the plays of "Macbeth" and "King John" has been generally looked upon as the most distinctive feature of the present theatrical season. Her great fame as the leading tragic netress of the period would alone warrant such an attitude,

Madame Modjeska's farewell tour is being di-rected by Wagenhals & Kemper. Their manage-ment of the James-Kidder-Warde combination and other ventures are so fresh in the public mind that no assurance is necessary to the effect that Modjeska's supporting company and the scenic and other accessories will be worthy the fame of their stars. Among the players who will assist here are R. D. McLean and Odette Tyler, who are at the head of the supporting company. "Macbeth" will be presented in the

for glory and gold, the single wheel champion is looked on with a great deal of respect, as re-gards speed; but how small he does look and how pitifully slow when the big-pace making machines get into the game and whiz off mile after mile at a pace that will lap the fastest single rider in a mile, if he rides without taking their pace. So it is in the show business. The Schiller Stock company, with its brilliant epertoire of recent New York successes, its gelaxy of metropolitan artists, both from the dramatic and vaudeville world, its handsome cenery, elaborate effects and superb mountings has long ago lapped all rivals and now leads the vanguard of popular priced attractions. The company will open a week's engagement at the Academy of Music on Monday evening, presenting as the opening play "Falsely Accused."

"Kings and Queens."

"Kings and Queens" is the name of the bur-esque organization billed to appear at the Galety for the balance of the week, commencing with mutinee this afternoon. Neither pains nor ex-pense has been spared to make this production the acme of burlesque perfection. This company carries a car load of scenery, mechanical and electrical effects, and the entire production is staged in the handsomest possible manner. The comedy infused in this creation is not excolled by any organization en tour and intro-duces a bevy of beautiful girls, admirably gowned and whose songs and dances help while away the
