LUTHERAN DEDICATION.

St. Paul's Lutheran church, on South Church street, formerly owned and oc-cupied by the Welsh Baptists, was dedicated yesterday afternoon. Interesting services, which were largely attended, were conducted yesterday afternoon and evening. Among those who assisted the pastor, Rev. J. F. C. Ehinger, were Rev. Randolph, Rev. A. L. Ramer, Ph. D., of Scranton; Professor G. F. Spicker, D. D., Missionary Superintendent Schaffer, D. D., and Dr. Whelan, of the Berean Baptist church. The Germania Maennerchor, Honesdale church choir and Mozart band furnished music. Seats were reserved in the front of the auditorium for the surviving members of the old Welsh Baptist congregation. thurch, which is situated on the easterly side of the street, between Seventh and Eight avenues, has just been remodeled and neatly painted throughput. It makes a very pretty home for the young and promising congregation of German Lutherans. Rev. Mr. Ehinger deserves great credit for the heroic work he has done in bringing about such fine results.

ST. ROSE'S ORGAN.

The new pipe organ for St. Rose's church is being placed in position. It is a huge affair, having a great organ of five stops, 305 pipes; swell organ, seven stops, 549 pipes; pedal organ. two stops, sixty pipes: couplers, four; mechanical accessories, three; pedal moves, seven. The great musical instrument is nine feet nine inches wide, fourteen feet deep and twenty feet high. The exposed wood work will be antique oak and the display of pipes will be finished in gold. An electric rotary fan will supply the air.

James Reed Injured.

Mr. James Reed struck his leg against a cake of ice in such a manner as to bruise it severely. It became very much swollen and pained him so badly that he could not walk without the aid of crutches. He was treated by physicians, also used several kinds of liniment and two and a half gallons of whisky in bathing it, but nothing gave any relief until he began using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This brought almost a complete cure in a week's time and he believes that had he not used this remedy his leg would have had to be amputated. RUINS OF UXMAL.

The Old Aztec Priests Were Skilled in Mechanical Tricks.

From the New Orleans Times-Democrat "In the fall of 1897 I spent several days examining the ancient ruins of Uxmai, in Yucatan," said a gentleman who was formerly in the consular service, "and during the visit I made a curious little discovery which convinced me that the old Aztec priests were adepts at mechanical trickery. The woods around the main buildings at Uxmal are full of scattered ruins of every description, and at one point I found a singularly perfect column lying in the midst of what appeared to be the debris of a small house or temple.

"I conjectured that the column had probably been the pedestal of some statue or idol which had stood in the center of the edifice and cleared away the underbrush to get a better look at it. I was about five feet long by one and one-half feet in diameter and was covered with characteristic carving. When I scraped the top clean of caked dirtI was surprised to find a hole leading into the interior and large enough for me to thrust my thumb. I cut a stick, sounded it, and found that the whole reached to a point about a foot from the base. There it connected with another channel running off at an angle and leading to a small opening hidden in the carving of the base.

"While I was probing the interior a beautifully polished circular stone plug, shaped almost exactly like a jug minus the handle, slid out of the lower hole. It was made of flint and remarkably heavy for its size. What could have been its purpose is all guess-work, but the theory that seems to me most plausible is that it was a weight and had once been attached to cord of thong leading up through the main boring. If there was a figure of some kind on the column, all that smacks pretty strongly of some secret mechanical device, and such is the opinion of the well-posted archaeologists to whom I have described the

"At home and abroad, wherever there is water and small boats are used, our oars are celebrated for their lightness, strength and durability and beauty of finish, and as many as 500,000 pairs, or about 6,000,000 feet of oars, are manufactured in this country every year. Nearly two-thirds of the product is sold to boatmen and fishermen living on the borders of the great lakes and seaconst towns and cities of the United States, and the rest is exported to England, Germany, Russia, France, Italy and Scotland. In all of these countries the superior qualities of our oars are, among oarsmen freely acknowledged, and in many of the foreign navies they are so highly esteemed that they are either largely or exclusively used For instance, 6.500 pieces, or all the oars used on British war vessels are purchased in this country. The next largest foreign buyers of our oars are the French and Italian governments, each of which has standing order with a New York dealer to supply its navy with 5,200 pieces cipally in the western states east of the Mississippi river, where large forforests furnish the best timber for their manufacture. Oars are made almost wholly by machiney, only a small amount of handwork being done in finishing them. There are three varieties of woods used for making oars. Those intended for working purposes are made of ash and oak in lengths varying from six to twenty-four feet, while those used by people for pleasure are made of spruce in lengths varying from six to fourteen feet. Oars are sold by the length and are worth from 4 cents to 15 cents per foot, according to the quality and finish of the

with a shrick, the vulture dropped its prey. The bird was probably 500 feet or so above the observers. The astonished men were then treated to a spectacle seldom seen. Few birds but s vulture could accomplish such a feat. The instant the snake escaped from the bird's clutches it dropped earthward like a shot. And like a shot the bird dropped after it, catching it in midair with a grip that caused death. At any rate, the snake ceased to wriggle, and the vulture soared away to a mountain peak to devour its hardcarned meal. That the snake did not bite the vulture and cause its death can only be explained by the fact that the thick feathers probably protected the flesh from the reptile's fangs,

OLD TIME HONESTY.

Stationery for Private Business.

"Put that back!" exclaimed President John Quincy Adams, when his son took a sheet of paper from a pigeonhole to write a letter. "That belongs to the government. Here is my own stationery, at the other end of the desk. I always use it for letters on private business."

This conscientiousness in regard to what many would consider a mere trifle may appear excessive. But the dividing line between vice and virtue is so fine that the boundary is often unconsciously crossed, and it is just as dangerous for a young person to dally with conscience as it is for a child to toy with a dagger, or to play with fire.
