

CARBONDALE DEPARTMENT.

The Scranton Tribune has opened a Branch Office in Carbondale and will print a daily edition devoted to the interests of the city, the aim being to supply Carbondale with a daily morning paper, containing all the news of the Pioneer City. Communications of a news nature, personal and all items for publication may be left at the new office in the Burke Building, or may be sent by mail or phone. E. L. Hatfield, manager of the Carbondale edition, will be pleased to receive callers seeking information or desirous of imparting it.

MR. LITTLEFIELD DELIGHTS CARBONDALE

The Logic and Eloquence of the Man from Maine Is Listened to by an Enthusiastic Audience.

The Republicans of Carbondale were confronted with two hard propositions last night, when they held their rally and mass meeting. The first was to disagree, rainy, windy night, itself sufficient to keep attendance down to small figures. The second was the great demonstration given to President Mitchell of the Mine Workers.

Under these conditions, with the open house holding scarcely a hundred persons, a few of whom were ladies, the meeting was started at 8.10 p. m. by the Mozart band with an inspiring melody. The speakers of the evening and the officers of the committee came in five minutes later. At twenty minutes past eight, George S. Kimball, chairman of the meeting, started the ball rolling by making a short prefatory address. Mr. Kimball referred to the heritage of the American man, woman and child, and told of its richness and compared the dimensions of the United States with those of other countries and told of its vastness, states larger than Spain and thirty-one as large as Great Britain. "There is no limit to the possibilities of America," he declared and asked these pertinent questions: "Isn't this country too great and too patriotic to be afraid to fear any other nation on the face of the earth? Isn't this country too great to be afraid to follow Jefferson, the first great expansionist? This country is too great and loves its honor too much to take 43 cents and call it one dollar. This country will not allow a yellow Malay dictator to rule the United States who its foreign policy shall be." He referred to the young men as the hope, the future counselors of the nation and with them lies the future preservation of the country.

He ended an eloquent dissertation by introducing A. Philbin of Archbald, candidate for representative from the Fourth Legislative district. Mr. Philbin spoke two and a half minutes, but in that brief time he covered a great deal of ground, defining his position on the issues of the state election, saying he would support the ballot with the utmost secrecy and saying he was not pledged to vote for any man for United States senator, but giving the assurance that if he was elected he would pledge himself to vote for a Republican.

Then Mr. Kimball introduced Mr. Littlefield and referred to the time a few years ago when the important positions of the United States government were filled with Maine men.

Mr. Littlefield, in beginning, referred to the pleasant feeling of having a counter-demonstration of such a nature help in keeping his audience small. He paid a glowing tribute to the thousands of laboring men who were at that time parading the streets. His opening and pleasant sallies at the audience in good humor.

By this time the open house had become filled. "The distinguished apostle of discontent" was one of his descriptive terms for Mr. Bryan. During his speech Mr. Littlefield touched briefly upon the alleged, paramount issues of the day, imperialism, trusts, and brought prominently before his hearers the real issue, the free coinage of silver. He had a fund of apt illustrations to send a conviction home and argued from the standpoint of a business one. He invited every one to ask questions, saying: "You needn't be afraid of me, and I am sure I'm not afraid of you."

The largest part of the address was devoted to the trust question, and he characterized William J. Bryan as the greatest demagogue in the history of politics.

Mr. Littlefield spoke until after 10 o'clock and was followed by others. The Mozart band, of Carbondale, occupied front seats and played several selections. The audience was enthusiastic and quick to see each point as Mr. Littlefield handled it.

Farwell Reception to Mrs. Locke.
Circle No. 551, Companions of the Forest, tendered Mrs. Arthur Locke a farwell reception last Saturday evening at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Joseph Jenkins, on Clark avenue. The evening was passed very pleasantly and the hours were occupied by music, games and cards. At 11 o'clock refreshments were served.

Mrs. Locke left on Monday for Philadelphia, where her husband, who formerly lived on Spencer street, in Carbondale, has secured a lucrative situation. Mrs. Locke held the office of post chief companion in the circle which gave the reception.

A Straw Utty to Peckville.
Miss Emma Utty, of Belmont street, treated a number of her friends to a straw ride to Peckville last evening, where they were received and entertained in a royal manner by an uncle of hers. The evening's enjoyment in Peckville was enhanced by stereopticon views, a graphophone entertainment and refreshments were served. Among those who were fortunate enough to participate in the jolly ride were: Misses Grace Simrell, Tillie and Antoinette Wraible, Emma Utty, Hazel Simrell, Minnie Ople, Annie Lowrey, Catherine Solomon, Ruth Ditz, and Messrs. Joseph Utty, James Utty, A. G. Ball, Albert Ople, Grant Walk, William Stevens, George Colvin, Raleigh Mitchell, Ralph Hall, C. Anderson, Garfield Anderson and Harry Bunnell.

NIGHT SCHOOL OPENS.

The School Board at a Special Meeting Decide to Open One.
The school board met in their room at the Central High school Monday night, in special session, to consider the opening of a night school in this city. It was decided very quickly to do so, and Thomas Taylor, the only applicant for the position, was appointed teacher at a salary of $30 per month. The night school will begin its first session tomorrow evening in the High school building.

After disposing of this question, the board took up for consideration other matters. A bill of the Lathrop Insurance agency for $30 was ordered paid. Collector F. B. Clifford's bond was received and ordered attached to the original. The treasurer reported collections of $2,500, $2,000 from Collector Watt and $500 from Collector Clifford. He also reported the receipt of a check, duly certified, from Collector Scamman, as surety for the balance of his duplicate.

The special committee on the hearing apparatus in the addition to the central building, recommended that the board instruct Attorney Butkus to commence legal action to compel Hunt & Connell to complete the work according to contract. Messrs. Leshner and Gray were allowed an advance in salary for extra work. A resolution of Superintendent Garr for new books was referred to the proper committee, and the committee instructed the secretary to comply.

The board adjourned to meet on Nov. 19, as Nov. 5, the usual meeting night, comes on election eve.

Funeral of Bernard Bryden.

Bernard Bryden, who had been a resident of Carbondale for over forty years, was buried yesterday morning in the new Catholic cemetery, where his daughter was buried two weeks ago, and his son a little over a year ago.

The requiem mass over the body was celebrated by the Rev. John Dixon, at St. Rose's Roman Catholic church, at 10.30 a. m. The pall bearers were John Killeen, Dominick Killeen, Andrew Killeen, James Bolan, Michael Cook, Charles Kilmartin, Andrew Kilmartin and Thomas Killeen.

The deceased belonged to no organizations at the time of his death, but in his younger days was active in several. He is survived by a widow, one daughter, Mrs. A. F. Cook, of Brooklyn street, and two sisters, Mrs. Bridget Bryden, of this city, and Mrs. Mary Taylor, of Dushore, Pa.

Germania Singers Celebrate.

The Germania Singing society, with their women folk, engaged five stages on Monday evening and took a drive to the Falls to assure Joseph Sheek, who has just returned from the Fatherland, how glad they were to see him again. The jolly crowd had a merry time at the hotel, and what with the band of music they took along, dancing, and refreshments, the night was far advanced when they took the journey back to the central city. Mine Host Sheek is more convinced than ever that there is no place like America, and he proved his heart is in the right place.

A Crowd Disappointed.

A gathering of about 200 men and women were at the Delaware and Hudson station to meet the 3 o'clock train yesterday afternoon, when it was expected by them that President Mitchell would arrive. But he changed his mind as to his mode of traveling here and the disappointed crowd, who had been waiting for him, were still determined to give him a hearty reception when he did come.

Workers at the Polls.

After the Central Labor union had adjourned on Sunday a committee from the Municipal Water League waited upon the members and urged them to appoint a number of workers to act with the league in bombing the proposed bonding of the city for $11,000 for the new plant. It was decided by the members to give this help.

PRESIDENT MITCHELL VISITS CARBONDALE

Received by the United Mine Workers in a Blaze of Glory—Fireworks and All Round Enthusiasm.

The strength of the union was never more clearly demonstrated in Carbondale than last night, when President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers' union, was received in a blaze of glory. It is estimated that seven thousand men and boys were in line. It took the procession nearly an hour to pass. All along the line of march the residents contributed to the spectacular display. It was positively dazzling. More fireworks were set off than are commonly used on the Fourth of July.

In magnitude and enthusiasm the city never had a demonstration which equaled that of last night.

THE PRESIDENT'S ARRIVAL.
More than 1,000 persons greeted President Mitchell at the Delaware and Hudson station at 6 o'clock. As the train came to a stop, Mr. Mitchell raised his window and pointed to the car in front. The crowd surged that way and gave him a chance to get out.

At Sixth avenue and Main street, two thousand mine workers, with many lighted mine lamps on their caps, cheered their leader. They formed one of the most attractive pictures of the occasion.

The president and his secretary, Miss Morris, dined at Hotel Harrison, from where they took a carriage to the main parade, accompanied by Mayor Kilpatrick and Rev. Dr. Whalen, of the Baptist church.

The following order was observed:
Forest city miners.

OLYPHANT.
Mrs. Thomas Murray died at her home on Jones street yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Mrs. Murray had been ill for some time with rheumatism, which was the cause of her death. Deceased was one of the pioneer residents of Carbondale, and was well known by her acquaintances. Besides her husband she survived by two sons and one daughter. They are: Constable John Murray, Michael Murray and Mrs. Katie Murray. The funeral arrangements have been made by Mrs. M. J. Jacob Ginsburg is in New York on a business trip.

PECKVILLE.
The Baptist Young People's union rally at the Baptist church Monday evening was largely patronized and greatly appreciated. The program was one of unusual interest. The address was given by Rev. J. H. Priest and Miss Orie Williams were all able and interesting and called forth repeated applause. Dr. Spencer, of the Methodist church, delivered an address. The names of the New York and Scranton Coal company of the Ontario resumed work yesterday morning. The colliery was not run owing to the want of coal, but will start up full time this morning.
Mrs. Scott, a celebrated lecturer, will address an audience at the Baptist church this Wednesday evening.
Her, the eldest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Thomas, has contracted typhoid fever. The likelyhood of death will meet in regular session, Saturday evening, Nov. 2.

Euchre.
A number of friends of Mrs. H. J. Brennan were pleasantly entertained at her home on Salem avenue on Monday evening. Euchre formed the principal feature of the evening's enjoyment.

Pedagogues Study.
The public school teachers of the second division held an institute at the Carbondale High school last evening. The object of the meeting was to read and discuss "White's School Management."

TAYLOR.

Tomorrow evening will occur the marriage of Miss Sarah Griffith, the beautiful daughter of Mrs. Richard Griffith, of North Taylor, and Mr. William J. Reese, a popular young man of Railroad street. Rev. D. C. Edwards, of the Welsh Baptist church, will perform the ceremony.

The social given at Webers rink on Monday evening, under the auspices of the Sterling Social club, was a pleasing affair. The hall was crowded with pleasure-seekers, and a comfortable and enjoyable evening was spent.

JERMYN AND MAYFIELD.

Local unions, No. 702 and No. 7025, United Mine Workers of America, accompanied by the Citizens' and Hogarth's bands, went to Carbondale last night and took part in the parade and celebration. Quite a large crowd of people from both boroughs helped to swell the immense throng that witnessed the splendid affair.

Dr. S. D. Davis and Silas B. Hills took part in the whist tournament at Scranton last evening.

The Ladies' Aid society of St. James Episcopal church will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Barnabas Carter, of Cemetery street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Stocker and Miss Maggie Quinn went to New York city yesterday.

Two People and a Parrot

"Bid me, indeed, to be—
Love your heart and take it in,
Love-love and me!" — E. J. Henley.

EDGAR MARSTON had never seen the woman whom he longed to ask to share his life. And he was 30 years old. But as autumn came, with its robes of russet splendor and maples burning like the bush the prophet saw in the scriptural past, a strange sense of dissatisfaction grew upon him. He looked around his luxuriously furnished bachelor apartments almost with resentment.

Other men had homes—homes where it was pleasant to sit in the fire, if only there was some one across the hearth. He looked over at a vacant chair. And as he smoked and meditated it seemed to him the chair was occupied. Through the blue wreaths of smoke he seemed to see a gown—a gown of a soft rose hue, with narrow rows of gold braid encircling the collar and a broader band of the glittering material girdling a slender waist. Then there was a face with a serene white brow and the square-cut lips which betoken laughter.

When had he seen it—where? Of himself he was sure. And it had haunted him. But he could recall having ever met—

"Bad—bad!—C-r-r-r! Lemmy! Good-day—good-day—good-day! Bad!" The shrill squawk assailing his ears grew louder. "Maisy—Maisy—come!"

"Bad! Lemmy—come! Lemmy—come!" The final piercing and discordant appeal brought Marston angrily erect.

"Confound that parrot! If there's a beastly bird in existence it's one of those chattering diabolical, mimicking things! I wish every one had it!"

"Jab—jab—jab! Maisie—Maisie—Lemmy!"

Now, Marston was not a malicious fellow. He and vindictiveness had never even a bowing acquaintance with each other. But it isn't the malicious thing in the world to be wrenched body and mind out of a delicious day dream and by the tortured cries of a blatant bird at that.

"Hello, there!" he cried to the group of youngsters who were plucking green and scarlet feathers from the body of his protesting parrot.

"What are you up to? Where did you get it? How the deuce can you act like that anyhow?"

A shrill babel of responses rose in reply.

"It's lost!" "It don't belong to nobody." "If I just flew out it!" "Well, suppose it did! Is that any reason you should torment it—your own little boxers, you? Even if it doesn't belong to anybody—"

"But it does!" cried a young, excited voice. "O it does! It's mine!"

Then Edgar Marston had turned—was looking down on a girl with a merry, mignonette face—a girl in a soft rose gown with a tracery of gold at the round, young waist.

Ab! Now he remembered. She and the parrot were part and parcel of the people who had moved into the suite over his in the St. Stevens' flats. But the face of his smoke-framed dreams was not merry now. Indeed, it was distinctly distressed.

"The little eyes were bright and the lips had quite a piteous curve.

"The housemaid left the window open and it flew out. I wouldn't have lost it for anything!" This with most desperate earnestness. "I've had it since a sea captain brought it to me when it was a little girl—Oh, ever so long ago!"
