TAKE NOTICE.

It having come to our notice that one J. E. Williams, at one time publisher of the Scranton Directory, is at work upon the preparation of a directory ostensibly to take the place of Taylor's Scranton Directory, the following facts are submitted for the public's in-

On the 21st day of January, 1895, an agreement was entered into between J. E. Williams and Catharine Williams, his wife, parties * of the first part, and J. James Taylor, party of the second part, whereby all right, title and interest of the former in all unpublished directories of any city, borough, township or district, in any part of Lackawanna county, and copyrights and maps of all directories in such county heretofore published, together with all other property in this county, were sold to Mr. Taylor, his heirs, or assigns. A clause in that agreement provides that neither J. E. Williams nor Catharine Williams, his wife, will in any manner engage or + become interested in the publication of any directory of any city, & borough, township or district in any part of Lackawanna county + for the period of twenty-five years from the date of said agreement, and that neither will aid or assist in any manner in the production or publication of any directory as aforesaid during said period. It was also stipulated that against any violation of this contract the said parties of the first part may be enjoined.

On the 5th day of February, 1895, for legal consideration Mr. Taylor assigned and transferred to The Tribune Publishing company all his interest in the foregoing contract, and since that date the directory known as Taylor's Scranton Directory has been the property of The Tribune Publishing company, with Mr. Taylor, during his lifetime, serving as manager. For the benefit of all concerned, announcement is now made that The Tribune Publishing company intends to continue the publication of the directories included in the foregoing contract, and therefore any contracts made by the said J. ### CAPTAIN SYRON MISSING.

He Has Not Been Seen Since Election

H. A. Coursen, Chief of Staff.

Night. Patrick Syron, an employe at Calvin Seybolt's mill, and one of the best known military men in the city, has been missing from his home and work since a week age yesterday and absolutely no trace of him has been found. On election night, in company with friends, he was at Republican headquarters and started home to West Scranton, where he resides with his brother-in-law, Hotelkeeper McAndrew, on North Main avenue. The last seen of him was when he was talking Jerseyman's two shoulders square with a patrolman on lower Lackawanna avenue. Captain Syron, as he is familiarly known, was prominently identified with the Phil Sheridan Rifles years ago, and during the Spanish-American war enlisted in the Volunteer Engicorps, and saw service in Porto Rico. He is captain of the local corps of Spanish-American War Veterans in his city. Mr. McAndrew reported his abence to the police yesterday, and inquiries are being made about him. It is believed the captain has left the

DWYER THREW JERSEYMAN

CHARLES LEONARD THROWN TWO STRAIGHT FALLS.

Wrestling Partner of Champion Ernest Roeber Yesterday Came Here from Newark, N. J., and Last Night Met M. J. Dwyer at the Bicycle Club Rooms-Forty Minutes Was the Time of First Fall and Seven Minutes Did the Trick for the Second.

M. J. Dwyer, teacher of physical culture, last night again demonstrated to a large number of spectators at the Scranton Bicycle club rooms, that as a wrestler he can give points to the majority of the men who depend upon their prowess on the mat for a livelihood. Charles Leonard, of Newark, N. J., a wrestling partner of the mighty Firnest Roeber, was his antagonist. and a worthy adversary he proved It took forty minutes' hard work on the mat for Dwyer to gain the first fall, but the second was made in lightning-like rapidity, it only taking seven minutes. A combination half-Nelson and crotch hold proved Leonard's Waterloo, Dwyer getting both falls on this. As the Jerseyman was thrown the second time, his right arm was turned under his body and was badly sprained. It had been already weakened by Dwyer's continually pounding his knee into it, which is perfectly legitimate in tactics of the mat, but rather wearing on the noun-

Between two hundred and fifty and three hundred persons were present. when, at 8.40 o'clock, Thomas Twiss and Abram Corcoran, of North Scranton, stepped on the mat shook hands with each other, and began a fifteen minutes' bout. Twiss was the bigger man of the two, but Corcoran the faster and more clever and at the end of the allotted time, had scored two falls and gained the referee's deceision.

THE MAIN BOUT. Promptly at 9.10 o'clock, Leonard and Dwyer took their corners and President B. F. Connolly, of the bi cycle club, read the conditions of the match, which were two falls out of three, strangle lock barred, winner to take $200 side bet and seventy per cent of gate receipts. He then introduced Dwyer and Leonard, Referee John Jones, of North Scranton, and Time-keeper F. S. Godfrey. Both men wore trunks and were stripped to the waist. Dwyer- weighed in while the Jerseyman went His chest and back muscles 150%. were big and knotty and his arms of

All through the bout Dwyer was the aggressor and Leonard was several times placed in exceedingly ugly positions, from which he emerged, however, by beautiful work on his part. occasion, about fourteen minutes after the start, Dwyer, by a mighty effort, picked the Newark man up and stood him on his head, but just as he was about to score an apparent fall, Ernest Roeber's pupil made a lightning-like move and regained his feet. It was a pretty bit of work, and the cheers which Leonard received made him feel that even if he was a stranger in a strange land, the crowd wasn't entirely agin' him. On another occasion Dwyer, by using his pet half-Nelson and crotch hold, brought his opponent down, with one sturdy shoulder fast against the mat. The other, however, stubbornly refused to go down, and as Dwyer in vain tried to press it down the crowd kept up an excited, enthusiastic clamor which did not subside until Leonard had wriggled out of the culturist's grasp, and was out of danger. Several times the local man had his adversary in these tight places, while Dwyer's own fast, agile work saved him from a fall. After forty minutes of this work, Dwyer at last brought the against the mat, the referee waved that it was a fall, and the two wrest-lers made for their rooms, to be sponged off and prepared for the next

THE SECOND FALL. After a fifteen minutes intermission. the match was resumed. After a few minutes' wrestling. Leonard's forearm was weakened by Dwyer's knee pounding and then once more came the culturist's terrible hold, and the man from Newark was lifted on high and hurled to the mat with terrific force. It was the second fall, and he stayed down, His forearm was badly hurt and at first was feared to be broken, but on later examination proved to be badly sprained. The $200 side bet, posted by Leonard with The Tribune, was handed over to Dwyer, together with his own wager money, and the winner of the match declared his readiness to meet Herrick. the Providence, R. I., wrestler, who challenged the winner of last night's match through The Tribune.

club management." Leonard appeared crestfallen after he match, and as his injured arm was being attended to remarked that this was his first defeat, in the career in which he has gained hundreds of victories. He was perfectly satisfied with the referee's decision, but thought that Dwyer should have been penalized for foul play during the first part of the match. The culturist was cautioned by the referee against using his elbow, and Leonard says that he continued even after this. Today Leonard leaves the city. He says that he would like to again have a go with Dwyer and will once more challenge him.

The challenge of Atlas, the Graeco-Roman wrestler, to the winner of the match will be ignored by Dwyer. He says that Atlas is entirely out of his class.
