COMMON COUNCIL.

Sewer Ordinance Passes First and Second Readings-Another Meeting Tonight.

Common council met in adjourned regular session last night. The meeting was to have been held at 7 o'clock, but a quorum was not secured until after 8 o'clock. Those present were Kennedy, Loftus, Nealon, Wedeman, Smith, Evans and Masters.

The ordinance providing for the ap-propriation of $250 received from the American Felegraph and Telephone company to the fund for repairing and grading of streets was referred to the finance committee.

J. D. Davis' ordinance providing for the construction of a sewer on Hospital and Fallbrook streets was referred to the committee with instructions to report forthwith. The committee reported favorably, and the ordinance, on motion of Smith, passed first reading, and on motion of John Nealon it passed second reading.

The ordinance provides for the construction of a sewer from the Dundaff street crossing on Fallbrook street to Hospital street, and on Hospital street to the Hospital gates. For the payment of the cost of the sewer assessments shall be made upon the resi-dents abutting upon the line of the sewer. The assessments shall be made payable in six equal installments, the first of which shall be due thirty days after the execution of the contract for said sewer, the second assessment shall be due and payable one year thereafter, and the remaining installments shall be due and payable yearly thereafter until the whole assessment is fully paid. All deferred payments shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum.

As soon as said work has been completed and accepted by the city, the mayor and controller shall issue to the contractor improvement bonds for the balance unpaid on said contract. Said bonds shall rest for redemption upon the money to be realized from said assessment only. The face value of each bond is to be one hundred dollars and to bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, said interest to be paid semi-annually, and the bonds to be denominated Fallbrook and Hospital street sewer bonds and to be redeemed at the call of the city treas-

Council adjourned to meet this evening at 7.30 o'clock.

A Horse Goes on a Tear.

Albert Hulbert, of Philadelphia, who is in this city making the new gas and turning it into the old mains of the new gas company, was limping around town yesterday afternoon with his face contorted with pain every time he put his right foot on the ground. His injury was due to an experience he had earlier in the day. He accompanied Dr. J. C. Harper, of Church street, on the physician's round of morning cails and held the reins over the doctor's scene the men all jumped off. John inside feeling pulses. He got along first rate and when the doctor was driving he expressed his admiration of the qualities of the animal. Dr. Harpen stopped at a residence on Lincoln avenue, and Mr. Hulbert resumed his practice of holding the horse up. But the keen air had imparted a wonderful spirit to the horse, or else it was the close proximity of the gas man that surcharged his veins with fire. Anyway, it commenced to paw and chang its bit and act real coltish. Then Mr Hulbert said "Gee-dap!" and started the horse off for a little promenade until the doctor should come out. But the pace Mr. Hulbert had in view didn't suit the horse. He had only gone a short ways when he stopped, out his head down and refused to go further. Then Mr. Hulbert began coaxing. Perhaps he coaxed too hard, for the equine changed its mind in a flash, made a turn and started back at a gallop. Mr. Hulbert hung on the lines with his jaw set and his eyes wide open, and swung the horse clear of several obstacles in its path.

The animal fought hard to get its head, but long experience with the pliers and tongs had made the gas man's wrists hard as steel, and he kept perfect control of the erratic beast When the house of Dr. Charles Burr, on Grove street, was reached, the horse suddenly made an alteration in his line of campaign and did a merry waltz with its fore feet in the air for a few seconds. Then he jumped up. cracked his heels together and fell over-dead. The carriage was overturned and Mr. Hulbert did an acrobatic act in getting out from under it. Reyond hurting his foot severely, he was not injured. The horse was a valuable one and had been owned by Dr. Harper only a short time.

Dennis Donovan Dead.

Dennis Donovan died in Scranton. Monday evening, of the effects of a two weeks' siege of muscular rheuma-He is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Geary. Miss Mary Donovan and Mrs. James Thompson, wife of Councilman Thompson, of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were in attendance at bedside of their brother, the latter having gone to Scranton some days ago and Mr. Thompson having been sent for on Monday morning, as the doctors had abandoned hope of his recovery, the malady having attacked the sick man's heart. the last call of the day and no groceries were in the wagon. The driver attempted to swing his horses into Wyoming street when the whiffletree snapped. The horses immediately started to run. Flannery sprang to his feet and tried to control them, but as one of the horses was free it plunged forward and the wagon made an abrupt turn, upsetting the vehicle and throwing Flannery into the street. The pole, by some curious freak, turned completely around under the wagon and righted it. The horses continued on to the end of Wyoming street and turned into Frank Smith's yard on Garfield avenue, where they were caught by Joseph Hall. When an inventory was taken of the results of the episode it was found that Mr. Flannery was considerably bruised and shaken up, and that the whiffletree, pole and brake of the wagon were

The Teachers' Institute.

The second session of the Carbondale teachers' institute was called to order vesterday morning at 9.30. The first number on the programme was music. in which all joined in a swelling chorus. Then Dr. Lyte devoted forty minutes to a further consideration of English grammar, which subject he started on Monday afternoon. Then Dr. H. W. Elson followed with a talk on history, taking up the thread of his discourse where he had left off on the preceding day, from the constitutional convention of 1786 at Philadelphia. Then the teachers again lifted up their voices in melody, and Superintendent Coughlin gave an interesting talk on the unimpressive theme of arithmetic.

In the afternoon the session was devoted to the subjects of history, English grammar and geography, ably expounded by Dr. Elson, Dr. Lyte and Superintendent James M. Coughlin respectively. There was a large attendance. In the evening the Hon, Champ Clark, a member of congress from Missouri, gave a platform talk to a large audience on the life of Daniel Webster. The programme of the proceedings for today follows:

BLAINE'S COSTLY SARCASM. Text of the Speech That Cost Him

the Presidency. From the Indianapolis Press. James G. Blaine and Roscoe Conkling served in congress together, and at no lime manifested any love for each other The Ill-feeling culminated in 1866 in a brief, but ill-natured controversy and a testy characterization of the New York statesman by the gentleman from Maine, which was never forgiven, The two men never even pretended to be friends after that day in the house, and in November, 1884, the Republican vote of Oneida county, Conkling's home, fell off more than enough to defeat Blaine. With a normal vote in that county he would have carried the state of New York, and have won the presidency. On the occasion referred to Mr. Conkling was speaking and Mr. Blaine asked him to yield the floor for a moment. Conkling replied haughtily: I do not want to have anything to do with the member from Maine, not even as much as to yield him the floor," With some asperity of manner Blaine rattled off this stinging rejoinder:

As to the gentleman's cruel sarcasm I hope he will not be too severe. The contempt of that large minded gentleman is so willing; his haughty diedain, his grandiloquent swell, his majestic, super-eminent, overpowering, turkey gubbler strut, has been so crushing to myself and all the members of this house that I know it was an act of the greatest temerity for me sir. I know who is responsible for alls. know that within the last weeks, as monibers of the house will recollect, an extra strut has characterized the gentleman's bearing it is not his fault. It is the fault of another. That gifted and satirical writer, Theodore Tilton, of the New York Independent, spent some weeks recently in this city. His letters published in that paper embraced, with many serious state-ments, a little passer sature, a part of which was the statement that the mantle of the late Winter Davis had fallen upon the member from New York. The gentleman took it seriously, and it has given his strut an additional pom-posity. The resemblance is great. It is strill-ing. Hyperion to a satyr, Thersites to Hercules, mad to marble, doughill to diamond, a singed cat to a Bengal tiger, a whining puppy to a rearing lion. Shade of the mighty Davis' to:
