"The Lost Paradise."

The John A. Himmelman company. The ideals, opened a week's engagement at the Academy of Music last evening, presenting "The Lost Paradise." The house was fairly crowded and the audience frequently showed forth much merited applause.

"The Lost Paradise," is, without a doubt, the prettiest play every written dealing with the troubles between capital and labor. The play was written on broad-minded lines and nothing is exaggerated, but, instead, is an exact reproduction of every day life as seen by us all, year in and year out.

The electrical and scenic effects used in the production of the piece were superb, especially so was the mill scene in the third act.

The curtain rises on that act showing the office of the mill with the machine shops in the rear and as the people pass from the office to the shop a great crowd of men, some of them on a bicycle, are seen in the distance.

The din and noise heard in this act was very familiar to those who toil each day in the machine shops of this city. The acting company was all that could have possibly been expected. Miss Beatrice Carle displayed great dramatic talent in her impersonation of the role of Clinker, the factory girl of the happy-go-lucky type, and pleased immensely.

Specialties were introduced between the acts by the excellent members of the company, among whom are the Musical Ravens, two of our clever musicians as have yet appeared in this city. One of the big features of this company is the band and orchestra, each of whom render classic and popular music in a masterly manner.

There will be a free open air concert by the band twice daily during the stay in Scranton, one at 1 o'clock and the other at 7 p. m. The play this afternoon is Fred Allen's great scenic production, "The Eagle's Nest," and tonight "Northern Lights," a beautiful military comedy drama will be produced.
