TWENTIETH CENTURY MAN

SUBJECT OF DR. DE. GRUCHY'S DISCOURSE LAST EVENING.

He Must Be an Intellectual, Moral, Physical and Spiritual Being to Keep Up with the Procession. George Hopkins! Narrow Escape from Death in Briggs' Shaft-Several Funerals Yesterday-St. Leo's Entertainment-Other News Notes and Personals.

"The Man for the Twentieth Century" was the subject which Rev. Thomas de Gruchy discussed at the Jackson Sfreet Baptist church last evening and ha handled this important personage without gloves. In substance he said the future man must be well equipped mentally, physically and spiritually, he must be a man of in telligence and understanding and, above all, a God-fearing man.

The nineteenth century, he said, is slowly coming to an end and all the civilized world is anticipating the great event. In a few days we shall step upon the threshold a new-born century. Never before in the history of mar has any century been so crowded as the one just closing. Man has trained and harnessed the forces of nature and nations are only a speaking distance

We see all harure responding to man's investigation and the children or the earth are not of the zoological garden, but of the garden of Eden, despite the Darwinian theory. Who can tell what we will have in the twentieth century? Will we have flying machines? If we do, I hope man will fly upwards to God. But we have only begun to lay the foundations of the coming century.

Considerable plowing and harrowing for the most noble manhood in God's universe. Everything has been brought forward for scrutiny. God rules the universe, and is at the wheel of the ship. What kind of a man must we have for the twentieth contury? He must be educated and well equipped, mentally, physically, morally and spiritually.

The twentieth century will usher in the dawn of the millenium and the keynote must be "I believe in God." The future church will be manned by men, and the twentieth century minister must be an intelligent man who believes something and is going to breach it. The man that moves along is the man that moves with Christ. He must preach to the heart instead of the heat. May God bring a divine benediction on us all.

Footman Severely Injured.

George Hopkins, of Fellows patch, who is employed as a footman at the Briggs' shaft, met with a severe accident Saturday afternoon, which may result fatally. He was descending the shaft in the carriage, and had passed one of the inner veins, when a car of coal was pushed into the shaft. The carriage was not there to receive it, and it fell to the bottom.

Hopkins heard the crash coming and tried to avoid it, but was caught by the falling car and pinioned to the bottom of the shaft, where he was rescued with much difficulty. When removed to his home and examined by Dr. George B. Reynolds, it was found that his right arm was fractured, his shoulder blade was broken, and he sustained a severe injury to his hip and internal injuries.

the effect that all the individual operators were to be bought out, the Simpson & Watkins firm was induced to let go of their holdings and have them transferred to the Temple Iron company, organized and capitalized by the Morgan people.

This removed one of the mainstays of the independents, and it looked as if they were doomed to be forced to succumb, after their years of vallant struggling. But such was not the case. They were disappointed but not disheartened, and all they wanted to induce them to keep up the fight was someone to show them how they could stand a fighting chance of winning.

It was then E. L. Fuller came to the rescue. He had been one of the most aggressive in the fighting thus far, and nost of the successful coups were the result of plans that were originated in his fertile brain and carried out by his indomitable will and tireless energy. When appealed to by the independents to take up their cause and lead them in their struggle, he agreed to be their Moses, provided he was allowed full swing and that the others would back him up, if he presented a scheme that insured victory. They told him to go ahead and they would stand by him, and he did

MAPPED OUT PLANS.

Without taking a single operator into his confidence, let alone consulting any of them. Mr. Fuller proceeded to plan the Delaware Valley and Kingston railroad.

After a series of long conferences he induced the Pennsylvania Coal company to come into the scheme had Coykendall, the big cement man of Rondout, buy for him the abandoned Delaware and Hudson canal, for the ostensible purpose of giving a water way to New York for Coykendail's cement, and having accomplished this, called together his fellow ope:ators, unfolded his plans and wanted them to accept 65 per cent, for their coal.

The independent operators both surprised and delighted. There was no question about the success of the plan. The road from Scranton to the canal bed-the Pennsylvania company's Erie and Wyoming-need only to be extended ninetyseven miles on an already graded road bed as level as a deal board, and a route to tidewater was at hand. which, because of its cheapness of construction, and operation, would evolutionize the coal carrying busi-

Not only did the independents hasten to sign the sixty-five per cent. contracts with the proposed new road, but many also bid for big blocks of the stock. The Pennsylvania Coal company took the contracts, agreed to execute them the day the road was in operation, and then all energies were bent on the construction of the road.

WERE ASTOUNDED.

The big coal carriers were fairly asounded at the independents' project, and in their excited efforts to halt it, performed a lot of seemingly ridicuous things, such as the dumping of Lackawaxen by the Eric people for its overhead bridge, but for the real in of the water and the blocking litigation that it was expected would follow on the question of whether or Hudson's special charter permitting t to transform the canal lato a raiload could be transferred with the sale of the bed of the abandoned canal.

The Erie sixteen years ago leased for twenty-five years from the Eric and Wyoming the section of the latter's road extending from Hawley to Lackawaxen. The new road could not wait nine years for the expiration of the lease, and so other means had to be adopted for connecting the Erie Wyoming's terminal at Hawley with the Delaware Valley and Kingston's terminal at Lackawaxen. The Erie and Wyoming proceeded to supply this link by building a line along the canal, under authority of branching powers. The Eric fought it in the courts on the ground that this was not a branch. but a part of a main line, and, as its charter rights for a main line between Hawley and Lackawaxen had been exhausted, it should be estopped from further operations there.

RAISED IN TWO CASES. The question was raised in two cases, one of which, an injunction case, was tried before Judge Purdy, of Wayne county, and the other warranto proceedings, tried before Judge Simonton at Harrisburg. Judge Purdy decided in favor of the Eric and Judge Simonton in favor of the Erle and Wyoming Both cases were appealed to the supreme court, and both cases are still pending, a decision being expected next month. While all this was going on in Pennsylvania, another flamely fought legal buttle was waging in New York. I is necessary to the hallding of a railroad in that state to secure the authorization of the railroad commissioners. The Erie and Ontario and Western. backed by the other carrying roads. tried to prevent the granting of the certificate for the new road by showing that it was intended to parallel other roads and was not necessary. The commissioners thought otherwise and granted the certificate, and their action was approved by the appellat-der the rules, the unianimous vote forbade a further appeal. This left the hopes of the opposition hanging on the decision that would be reached by the supreme court of Pennsylvania. If the decision favored the Erle and Wyoming the new road could be built. If it favored the Eric it-but no. Mr. Fuller had too much at stake to risk it on the possible favorable finding of a supreme court. He must needs have an alternative plan, and got

Arriving at his office at 5.50 p. m. he called in his son and three of his clerks and as the court house bell tolled six the Hawley and Eastern Rallroad com pany was a reality and a messenger was on the way to the home of Mr. Fuller's civil engineer to bring him to the office at once, while a telephone message to his attorney's office bade him not to go home till Mr. Fuller had seen him.

The surveyors were at work the next norning and the survey was completed with all due haste. The papers were being drawn up in the meantime and at the moment the engineer's blue print was ready, the attorney was off to Harrisburg for a charter. He secured it without difficulty, and from the moment it was granted the new road pro jectors didn't need to care a fig which way the Supreme court made its de cision. Mr. Fuller was for proceeding to provide the missing link by means of the Hawley and Eastern, but Vice President Thorne counseled waiting the decision of the Supreme court, feeling confident of victory.

THE ROAD STRENGTHENED. The Erie and Wyoming in the meantime had been straightening its road, strengthening its bridges, enlarging its yard facilities at Wimmers, Dunmore and Avoca, building a network of branches to connect up the new collieries that would soon be tributary to it, and erecting large and expensive shops at No. 6, in anticipation of the extension to tidewater, which would be an accomplished fact, as it was then viewed, before the cold weather set in next year. That the carriers also believed the new road was inevitable if heroic measures were not taken to defeat it, was evidenced by the fact that two months ago, in the hope of weaning away enough of the independents to discourage the new road builders from their project, came out with an offer of a uniform 65 per cent. rate, an ironclad agreement regulating the supply of cars and an equally binding stipulation, very favorable in its terms, re garding the independents' share in the output allotment.

But the bait failed: the independents emained true to the new road, and the carriers were forced to resort to other means.

It was thought to buy out a lot of he independents, but as they were not to be won away from the Pennsylvania company, which had gone to a tremendous expense to carry out the scheme in which all were alike allied, only one course remained open, and that was to ouy out the Pennsylvania company. DEEMED IMPRACTICABLE.

This was, at first, deemed imprac icable, as the stock was so high-priced and widely scattered. It was believed that the existing fancy figure would go way up out of possible reach the moment the negotiations for its purchase should begin, but after a month of dickering, a controlling block of the stock was gotten together by the directors and larger stockholders, and transferred to Morgan & Co. at what was mutually agreed was a fair market price, $552 a share, or $27,600,000 for the whole property. The same figure was publicly offered the small share holders, and it is understood many of them are following the lead of the larger ones, by disposing of their holdings at a profit of $502 a share and a piece of the $11,000,000 held in the treasury. The deal was consummated last Tuesday night. The individual operators are perfeetly satisfied with the sale of the now free to accept the 65 per cent, offilling into the bod of the canal at fer of the big carriers. This was all they were to get from the new road the avowed purpose of strengthening and this was all they asked for.
