SCRANTON, DECEMBER 18, 1900.

It has been suggested by the Philadelphia Inquirer that on the day before Christmas every passenger on the street cars of the United States pay one cent or more above the required fare, the excess to be divided as a Christmas gift among the street rallway employes. We gladly commend this good idea to the generous people of Scranton.

A Workable Idea.

EFORM, which a majority of the people will always favor if there is proved need of it, fails more frequently through defective method than through impregnable opposition. Those urging it go too fast and too far for the majority to keep up. Rome was not built in a day and it is well to remember this in planning the reconstruction of Scranton.

One thing which makes municipal reform more difficult than it ought to be is the proneness of its champions to fix a standard corresponding with their own high ideals, and to expect the public at one clip to jump up to it instead of ascertaining the moral average of the masses and from that as a starting point gradually building

The average man, for example, is a partisan who under ordinary circumstances may be counted upon to vote with his party. Having been brought up in this habit until the habit is well established, the impracticability of expecting him suddenly to become non-partisan in city affeirs ought to be apparent; but many reformers do not see it and consequently choose the most difficult method within sight when every practical result at which they aim is possible of accomplishment with much less trouble along existing party lines,

The machinery of party organiza tions is sufficiently responsive to majority sentiment to do whatever that sentiment demands when its demand is clearly presented and self-evidently genuine. Even a minority sentiment, if determined, can senetimes control party action, it being well known that the occasional "kicker," as a rule, receives greater attention in politics than the man who has always been

The problem confronting the people of Scranton is to organize and encourage the natural preference of the majority for clean government in such a respect of the existing political parties. Trying to abolish those parties by the sporadic formation of independent movements is futile and more often defeats than elects better candidates for office. Party government is inevitable and the practical idea is to accept and improve it instead of wasting energy in vain attempts to de-

We believe that the suggestion, outlined yesterday, of a bi-partisan, standing committee of citizens, composed of practical and representative and race, and undertaking to secure men for ward and city offices, embodies a workable idea. If not, why not? Without interfering with any existing organization or challenging the immediate opposition of active political workers throughout the city. it presents the possibility of a guiding influence of great worth in the processes whereby city officials are regeneration, but to build up, little by little, in each ward and section, using the instrumentalities at hand. The one formidable obstacle is the difficulty of securing busy men of affairs to volunteer their services for such an undertaking, which would involve both time and expense. Yet public spirit exists in our community and the right kind of demand would no doubt bring into action the right kind of men. This moral certainty is

The hysteria of the anti-Quayites

Instruction in Crime.

HOULD the criminal code be used as a text-book in the public schools in order that crime is and what its penalties are? In the Binghamton Chronicle Chief of Police Moore of that city makes answer in the affirmative and his theory is endorsed by the Binghamton police commissioners. This, briefly, is his aras well as any lawyer, what constitutes the crimes of burgiary, robbery, larceny, mayben, forgery and all like offenses, together with the punishment provided by law for the commission of such offenses, and the best way for him to acquire this knowledge is through the text-books in his school. In other words, I would advocate the printing of the criminal code in school textbooks something after this fashion: Larceny.-Larceny shall embrace every theft which deprives another of his money or other

Punishment.—Every person convicted of lar-ceny, if the property stolen exceeds the value of §25, shall be imprisoned in the state prison or state reformatory for a period of not less than ten years. If the property stolen is of the value of $25 or less, the person convicted shall be confined in the county jail or penitentiary as the city recorder may elect, and the sentence is discretionary with him-not to exceed one year and $100 line, or both.

I would have this enumeration include every uveniles. In teaching boys the criminal code it should be the duty of the teachers to im-press upon their minds the danger of committing Not only should the crime be made ab horrent of itself, but the fact should be im-pressed upon the mind of the scholar that those who commit crimes are almost certain of detec-tion and punishment. These lessons should be printed in the third reader and all readers above

In this connection, Chief Moore advises that the minimum penalty for burglary, which in New York state is one year, with subsequent reduction under certain conditions, be increased to five years; and that the penalty when the burglar has deadly weapons upon him be increased to life imprisonment, on the theory that the presence of weapons is prima facte evidence that murder is intended in case the burglar is discovered.

The chief adds that he is well aware that many persons of kindly natures will oppose his suggestions. will say," he expects, "that it is unwise to acquaint the mind of youth with the details of crime; that the effect would be corrupting. I do not believe it, for this reason: Every physiology has a chapter, showing the evil effect of alcohol upon the human system, upon every organ of the body. I have yet to hear anyone declare that it is injurious or an incentive to tippling. All noted advocates of temperance have had the best results for their cause by depicting the horrors of intemperance."

The suggestions, at all events, ar worth considering. They have the merit of proposing something specific, whereas most of the comment upon the subject of crime and its increas: is vaguely lamentable and practically of no account.

While there seems to be no end to the rouble in South Africa and the Philippines, it is a pleasure to note that Hon. Billy Mason is at peace with the administration and with the world.

Arizona.

OME facts of general interest about Arizona appear in the annual report of its gov ernor, Hon, N. O. Murphy to the secretary of the interior, for the fiscal year ended June 30 last.

Excluding Indians, who number 28, 000, a population of 105,000 with an annual growth of 5000 is claimed. The market value of all property in the territory is estimated at $100,000,000 The number of acres of land returned for taxation is given at 3,849,774. There are 326,258 cattle, 415,964 sheep, and 43,070 horses assessed. Railroads to the aggregate of 999 miles are taxed. and there are 462 miles of railroad exempt from taxation for a term of years. The net indebtedness of the territory, bonded and floating, is stated to be $1,070,850. The public schools of the territory are in a flourishing condition. There are nearly 21,000 school children between the ages of 6 and 18. The education of all children is compulsory, under the law, and there is hardly a hamlet, however remote, which loes not enjoy ample school facilities. Only teachers of the best ability are employed, and they are well paid. The average monthly salary of male teachers is $74.15; of female teachers, $63.40, The school revenues for the year inted to $421,776,15, raised by publie taxation. All the schools are free, from the primary department to the excellent territorial university which is maintained. The undeveloped resources of Arizona in precious metals agriculture, horticulture, grazing, and timber, mineral springs, hot springs, marble and building stone, onyx, coal, and nearly every natural product known to commerce, make the territory one of the wealthlest subdivisions of the Union, and insures its future as a great and prosperous state. The value of one year's mineral productions exceeds $20,000,000. Arizona has men fairly apportioned as to location | the largest unbroken pine forest in the United States, covering an area of in each party the nomination of good over 8000 square miles. The timber is usually found at an altitude between 5,500 and 7,500 feet. The total quantity of pine timber fit for sawing purposes within the boundaries of the territory amounts to 10,000,000,000 feet which can supply the needs of a populous state for more than a century Some large forest reserves have been created in northern Arizona and rules nominated and elected. It starts from | promulgated for their regulation, with a fair average and would try, not to a view to their preservation from accomplish miracles in instantaneous spoliation and to prevent destruction

> The governor reports that notwithstanding the drought from which Arlzona suffered during the year, the condition of all industries in the territory is prosperous. Since June 30, 1899, the territorial banks have been increased 100 per cent, in number, and there has been an increase in bank deposits of 32 per cent. Seventy-four miles of railroad have been constructed during the year, and a number of new lines have been surveyed and are projected. Upon this showing is based an eloquent claim to statehood.

> The cremating of six young lady students in the Fredonia Normal school death trap, when fire-escapes were arpossible, should be a lesson in the way of preventing future casualties of like nature. Are all of the buildings in Scranton, where large numbers congregate to work, sleep or study, properly provided with means of escape in case of panic? This is a good time to think

A young man at Toledo has been sent to jail for kissing a Syrian peddler. If she resembled in any respect the average child of the desert who offers trinkets for sale in willow baskets, it would seem as though the act should have furnished its own punishment.

Mr. Bryan can scarcely be considered as possessing an appreciation of the fitness of things if he falls to offer Uncle Adlai Stevenson an editorial desk apon his contemplated publication.

It begins to look as though Coun-Von Waldersee's departure from China will be made as quietly as that of a private citizen riding on a railroad

Mr. Bryan's plan for a weekly paper is a good one, since it limits his audience to those who want to subscribe.

How to Safeguard Our City's Future 8

Sir: Your editorial in this morning's paper on "Scranton's Greatest Need" is most timely, is we have undoubtedly reached a condition of affairs in this city which calls for the initiation of entirely new lines of conduct in our municinal government, but, while I agree with you that the need of leadership cannot be made "by some ambitious citizen starting out to build up a political dynasty," nor "by letting things drift," feel constrained to take issue with you as be the best plan of action, as well as the agency by which the same could be placed in operation.

A committee, such as you suggest, would be imply advisory, and the exigencies of politics are such that it is hardly fair to suppose that the organizations of either party would heed such advice, except at such times or on such ocusions as the same would seem to fall in with their ulterior purposes.

Moreover, and this I consider the most in portant defect, it would still leave the voters of the city divided on party lines, and as pass experience has conclusively shown, it is most difficult to overcome party fealty when such ivision is made, even when there is a striking difference in the respective candidates.

I would suggest a committee, not bi-partisan bility of our municipal offices being used be either organization to further their state or na tional aims

I am quite well aware that such a severar would seem revolutionary to very many, but believe that it is the only true solution of the nunicipal question, which is now vexing almost every city in this country, and I think that the trend of the best public opinion is now in that direction.

The Low movement in New York met with de feat, not because it was wrong in principle, but because it was not handled with practical wisom, and, unless all signs fail, a citizens' move ment in about to clarify the atmosphere of that

The city of Scranton is undoubtedly at a critical juncture, and it requires a sanguine temper ment to look into the future, when one consider the deplorable condition of its government, owing to corruption and inefficiency, and realizes that we are face to face with the question of going into the second class, it being apparent that the new clothes we are about to put on were cut an-

made for a very much larger man.

Moreover, this city, by reason of its rapi growth, is as yet in a crude formative star, physically, and in view of the recent consolida-tions of the ownership of our coal properties, such ownership having passed to non-residents, it future is more than ever dependent upon the rank and file of its citizens, and certainly, as onditions precedent to any future growth, we must have not only honest, but able and off clent government, through which the tax rate will be kept at a reasonable figure and city life be made attractive in so far as it is dependen

A modern city with all its complex service quires the highest type of ability to manage higher than that demanded in many great porations, and yet how few voters make their ction from that point of view.

As to the formation of such a committee, cans to me that action might very properly ome from the Municipal league, inasmuch a their work has been performed so thoroughly and yet so fairly, that their singleness of pur pose would be admitted even by those who hav been objects of their activity. Respectfully yours.

The Truth About That Canal Treaty

lowed the action of the senate on the canal treaty now pending. It has been assumed that a difference of opinion as to cans and details implies a difference of opinion in dealing with the canal question. Nothing could be farther wrong. He com-pleted his task when he negotiated the treaty. ife will resume his task in the negotiations ren-dered necessary through the action of the senate. In these negotiations he will again do his full duty, guided by all the circumstances of the case as they exist when the negotiations come. 2. The treaty will not be withdrawn. In trans-nitting it the president acted on his best judgment. Let the senate do the same. It is a co-Neither president nor senate acts alone, senate cannot negotiate. The president cannot ratify. 3. When the senate has acted the canal treaty will return to the president. On the situation created by the joint action of both the treatymaking powers of the constitution it will be the duty of the president to act. The national policy is clear-an American canal built by Americans, with an American guaranty, open to the world's trade. The difficult and deficate task will remain of securing this, with due regard to our engage-

Both must be considered. Neither can be rash-y put aside. As it has been the constitutional duty of the senate to act on its best judgment amending the treaty, so it will be the duty the president to act on his best judgment under the conditions now existing, with all the conditions that precede, in the next stage of negotiations on the canal. Concession will be necessary. The adjustment of conflicting interests will be indispensable. All the circumstances must be considered. The situation of both the negotiations in the new agreement now pending must be weighed. No factor can be omitted. No due consideration, national or interr Nicaraguan or foreign to all three. In the negoall these must have their fit weight, and all must be considered in working out a mutual un-derstanding and harmonious decision which will assure the national policy without violating the national faith, compromising the national future or affronting international claims, susceptibilities

D LAGUE EPIDEMICS around the close of the eighteenth century and the beginning of the nineteenth were frequent. One in Syria and Egypt during the years affected the French and afterwards the English army. A few months later plague appeared in Bagdad and at the same time at Constantinople and Armenia. These outbreaks, however, while severe, were not bearly so disastrous as the one in Little Russia, thirty years previous, when 50,000 persons, nearly onefourth of the population, were carried of.

St. Louis and the adjacent districts had a population of not over 3,000. There were fewer than 200 houses in the embryo city, which consisted mainly of two streets parallel to the river.

Quiet growth and development marked this period for Methodism, the influence of one superfor mind, Rev. Jaboz Bunting, prevailing with increasing sway. John Wesley, the founder of the doctrine, had been dead nine years.
