A CHRISTMAS CANTATA.

The First Methodist Episcopal Sunday School will give one on Christmas night.

The Sunday school of the First Methodist Episcopal church, assisted by the orchestra and church choir, will, on Christmas evening, render a cantata, entitled, "The Prophet of Nazareth," the author of which is Charles H. Gabriel. This will be, no doubt, the most beautiful cantata ever given in this city. It abounds in sweet melody and rich harmony. Some of the choruses in this composition are brilliant and no person can finish the Christmas festivities better than by attending to this most charming work. It has variety sufficient to satisfy the most fastidious, with its solos for adults and children, its duets, trios, and quartets for male, female, and mixed voices, choruses for fairies, school and choir, the whole combining to make a profitable and enjoyable entertainment.

The cantata will be given under the direction of William D. Evans, the well known tenor singer of this city. He will be assisted by the Sunday school orchestra, Leon By, director, and John B. Evans, accompanist.

More Holiday Displays.

The Park Clothing House has finished another window, which should be called a silver window, for the holiday display, and it is a question if the second window does not press the one mentioned yesterday closely for honors. Decorator M. J. Moran has filled the window with long streamers of tinsel, meshed and interwoven into artistic designs and from the top hanging tastefully arranged groups of fancy boxes of gloves, ties and other articles of haberdashery. The display is well illuminated and catches the attention of all.

Abe Sahn has an original design over the entrance to his large shoe and furnishing store. It not only looks but smells like Christmas in the vicinity, for the long ropes of ground pine that extend over the sidewalk give forth a balmy odor that is grateful to the nostrils. The windows are lighted with many incandescent lamps and on the northern side run streamers of narrow colored ribbon forming a "sunburst." It is very tasteful.

Mrs. Fannie Morris Passes Away.

Mrs. Fannie Morris died at her residence, at the corner of Terrace street and Morris place at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. She emigrated from Pembrokeshire, England, in 1857, and settled in Carbondale. Three years afterwards she was married to William D. Morris. The union was blessed with three children, two of whom are now living, Miss Mary Morris and Mrs. Isaac Rogers, who both reside in this city. A son, Charles, died five years ago. Her husband died about two years ago. She was a faithful member of Trinity church, a devoted mother, and had very many friends. The funeral will take place at her late residence tomorrow afternoon. The Rev. Rollin M. Sawyer, of Trinity Episcopal church will preach the funeral sermon. The interment will be held in Brookside cemetery.

No Railway Strike Yet.

There was a persistent rumor on Monday night to the effect that the Street Railway Men's union would order a strike of the men employed upon the local lines, to go into effect yesterday. The press committee gave out the information yesterday, however, that the report of the committee that defined the grievances of General Manager Silliman had been presented, but that it could be stated positively that a strike would not be ordered at once. What might be done in the near future the committee was not prepared to say.

Methodist Episcopal church on Christmas night.

The ladies of the First Presbyterian church opened their fair yesterday afternoon on the ground floor of the Anthracite building. A large collection of fancy articles and pretty things were exposed for sale and a large number of visitors thronged the artistically decorated rooms all the afternoon and evening. Supper was served at little tables and a good variety of edibles were on a printed bill of fare. The rooms were artistically decorated, holly and Christmas greens forming a lavish display. The attention of all passers was attracted to the fair by the prominence of its location and by a number of artistically made fancy wares being hung up in the windows facing Main street and Sixth avenue. The fair will continue this afternoon and evening. Tonight the ladies will serve a 20-cent supper from 5 to 8 o'clock. The Carbondale Gas company has donated a range and gas for this purpose and last night hot coffee and fresh-baked biscuits were enjoyed as a result of their generosity.

A Peculiar Ceremony.

On Monday evening, when the silk mill at Simpson closed down for the day and the workers started for home, they were met a short distance away by a number of strikers, who, equipped with files and drums, constituted a "guard of honor," and, playing "The Rogue's March," escorted them all the way down Belmont street into the central part of the city. Some of the workers did not like the attentions of the strikers and escaped by running away. Others seemed to enjoy the notoriety and marched along with jaunty step, keeping time. It was said that the performance would be repeated last evening, but it was probably decided not to do so, for there was no sounds of the shrill chatter of drums up Simpson way last night.

Mr. Usher was carrying a cast-iron register under his arm and before he could prevent it, the child, unaware of her danger, ran right into Mr. Usher, her head coming in contact with the sharp corner of the register. The blood flowed quite profusely for a few moments and it was feared the little one was badly cut, but after the application of a liberal quantity of cold water the flow of blood was stopped and it was found the child's injuries were very slight. HOW RUSSIA GRABS TERRITORY

Frank G. Carpenter's Account of the Working of Russia's Diplomacy. In the Christmas number of the Saturday Evening Post, Frank G. Carpenter, who has recently spent the better part of a year in the east, gives many facts of Russia's advance in Asia, and relates the following incident: "The powers have practically agreed that Manchuria is to be the property of Russia, and within a short time, in all probability, all the Chinese territory beyond the Great Wall will belong to the czar. The boundary line between Siberia and Mongolia is being slowly pushed southward. "During a visit to Peking some years ago I heard a tradition as to how Russia once acquired a big slice of China. There was a dispute about the boundary line, which the Russians had moved out so as to include a large amount of Manchurian and Mongolian soil. A war was imminent, and the Chinese, as usual, wanted to settle matters by compromise. The Russians consented and brought forth a map showing the territory they demanded. The Chinese threw up their hands in horror and said their lives would be endangered if they presented any such a treaty to their emperor. 'All right,' said the Russians, 'if that is so we will take less,' and they thereupon showed a second map, one-tenth the size of the first, but in which the latitude and longitude of the territory taken were exactly the same. The Chinese looked. The space within the red lines on the map was very much smaller, and they recommended the treaty without further dispute. "Few people realize the enormous extent of Asiatic Russia. It is about one and two-thirds the size of Europe, and twice as big as the United States without Alaska and our outlying islands. It comprises, in fact, more than one-third of all Asia. Siberia, now being half as big as our country. To this vast territory is now to be added Manchuria, with a possibility that Mongolia and Illi will soon come the same way. Mongolia is fully half as big as one-third the size of the United States, while Manchuria is equal to ten states as big as Ohio. "The title to Manchuria is now practically conceded to Russia."

WOULD NOT GIVE IN.

An Illustration of Sir Wilfred Laurier's Indomitable Pluck. From the Saturday Evening Post.

Sir Wilfred Laurier, who has been returned to power in Canada with a big majority of 70,000 votes, has been elected on Monday, just previous to the elections, made fifteen speeches from his special train. It was while in opposition that Sir Wilfred did his hardest, campaign work, and, just previous to the elections of five years ago, he made an average of three speeches a day. Senator Dandurand, who accompanied Sir Wilfred (who was then plain Mr. Laurier) on that tour, tells the following tale: "One day when Mr. Laurier was suffering from a frightful cold, but had made two speeches, he was nearly in a state of collapse. He was to be at St. Therese in the evening and, it being a joint meeting of Conservatives and Liberals, his best efforts were needed. "I was going along, I felt my way along the dark passage-way leading to the stairs, and was about to go up, when I saw a dark mass crouched just to the right. It was our future great premier. He had dropped there exhausted. We got him into bed and called in a country doctor, and when 8 o'clock came we had to carry him to the meeting. The Conservative speakers had their first say, and they flayed Mr. Laurier and the Liberals unmercifully. Mr. Laurier sat here in a great fur coat, not moving a muscle. The minute his turn came, however, he jumped up, threw off his coat and began to speak. It was one of the finest speeches of his life, and he carried the meeting by storm. He spoke with magnificent vigor for over an hour, and when he was through fell back into our arms exhausted. "In connection with amusements, I have never been able to understand why the young men of today deem the theatre an absolute essential in seeking diversion. An evening with a good book is, or ought to be, more satisfying to the young man of brains than an evening in a hall where a lot of make-believe characters are strutting up and down the stage, like children at a masquerade. When the human race reaches its highest mental development there will probably be no theatres."

THE GOSPEL OF SAVING.

Russell Sage Points Out the Importance of Economy. In the Christmas number of the Saturday Evening Post Russell Sage presents some of the best advice that has ever been given to young men regarding the handling of their money. In the course of the article he says: "No matter how fast a man may make money, he owes it to society as well as to himself to be economical. Any young man who will live up to the following set of rules will get more genuine happiness out of life than his neighbor who violates them. "Out of every dollar earned save twenty-five cents. Save seventy-five cents if you can, but never less than twenty-five. "Get up at a regular hour every morning, and work until the things that are before you are finished. Don't drop what you have in hand because it is five o'clock. "Be honest; always have the courage to tell the truth. "Don't depend on others. Even if you have a rich father, strike out for yourself. "Cultivate independence at the very outset. "Learn the value of money. Realize that it stands, when honestly made, as the monument to your value as a citizen. "Be jealous of your civic rights. Take a wholesome interest in public affairs, but do not let politics, or anything else, interfere with the rigid administration of your private duties. "Be clean and decent. Don't do anything that you would be ashamed to discuss with your mother. "Don't gamble. "Be circumspect in your amusements. "In connection with amusements, I have never been able to understand why the young men of today deem the theatre an absolute essential in seeking diversion. An evening with a good book is, or ought to be, more satisfying to the young man of brains than an evening in a hall where a lot of make-believe characters are strutting up and down the stage, like children at a masquerade. When the human race reaches its highest mental development there will probably be no theatres."
