

BOLANDS ON THE STAND

FORMER CITY TREASURER AND HIS BROTHER TESTIFY.

C. G. Boland Admitted That $500 Was Loaned to Simon Thomas as a Counter Inducement to Inducements Held Out by the Old Company—William Boland Said That James, Fellows and Frable Solicited Him for Money—Councilman Finn Not Present.

Ex-City Treasurer C. G. Boland was the first witness called yesterday, and continued the testimony begun at Monday's hearing in the bribery cases against Councilmen E. J. Coleman, Thomas O'Boyle, Edward James, R. H. Williams, T. C. Melvin, John McAndrew and P. F. McCann. He testified that while Councilman McAndrew never mentioned money to him directly, regarding the passage of the ordinance, still he had, by the use of slang expressions, gently intimidated various witnesses. "He said," Mr. Boland reluctantly admitted, "my fellows don't play ball or something of that nature. I never went into detail with him, nor asked him to explain his meaning."

Mr. Boland resumed the testimony of Monday's hearing, regarding the loan made by the new telephone company to ex-Select Councilman Simon Thomas. He declared that Wade Finn told him that he heard Thomas was being offered $500 to oppose the passage of the ordinance and Finn suggested that it would be a good idea to loan the councilman a like sum, as he needed it to pay his liquor license. "I think," said the witness, "that Mr. Finn later told me that he sent Thomas the money. Mr. Finn did not tell me where he got the money nor did I ever afterward hear if it was returned."

WOULD HE BE THE ELEVENTH. "Did you ever have any talk with Mr. McAndrew?" Mr. Boland was asked. "I did," answered the witness, "and my understanding was that we had ten votes assured he would make the eleventh. No, I don't think that McAndrew ever mentioned money to me. He may have used slang," and then followed the bit of testimony given above.

"Did you ever have any talk with Councilman Richard Williams?" interrogated Mr. Torrey. "I did. I met him one evening in the city hall and he said he wanted to assist the new company but something prevented him. He gave no intimation of receiving any money, nor did he say he was awaiting for a European trip," this last being brought forth by a question about the trip from Mr. Torrey.

"The witness admitted that he had heard something at the time of a cabal of councilmen, but had no recollection of his company; receiving any intimation that they could reach them. He was then examined in the subject of the Barber Asphalt company's repair contract, and the methods by which it went through council.

"You were present when Mayor Bailey hesitated to accept some money from Mr. McKinney, were you not?" asked Mr. Torrey, and the witness after a little thought replied, "I was in my office the last day of my term, busy with work, and while there, there was talk about Mayor Bailey's signing that contract. I was opposed to it. It was rumored that Mr. McKinney was about the building, but not in my office."

SAW NO MONEY. The mayor was in my office for awhile to straighten up his accounts. He may have used some expression about McKinney trying to give him some money, but I saw no pass between the two that morning."

"Did you see any pass between them at any time?" interrupted his inquirer. "Not any money," was the quick response.

"A check?" was Mr. Torrey's rapid fire retort, and the witness answered, "I once saw Mr. Finn accept a paper which I was afterwards told was a check, in my office, from either Mr. McKinney or Mr. Rock, I'm not sure which."

Mr. Torrey here reverted to the important question of the day before, and asked Mr. Boland if he had any more definite recollection than on Monday of the company of Simon Thomas, whereas the witness replied that Wade Finn, although not financially interested in the company, was anxious to assist in the passage of the ordinance, and had informed him that he heard Mr. Thomas was offered $500 by the company to oppose granting a franchise to the new company. Mr. Finn wanted to hold Thomas, and thought a $500 loan would be an effectual means of holding him. Witness personally was against any using of bribes, and this $500 was to be entirely for the company. Witness informed his brother and General Manager Wayland regarding the matter. Witness positively asserted that he himself did not advance the money to Finn to give Thomas, but could not say that he did not give Finn some money, as Finn was in the office in the treasurer's office with him, and he may have advanced him some funds.

WILLIAM BOLAND ON THE STAND William Boland was next put on the stand. E. B. Sturges, of the Municipal League, remarked that it was the first time in ten years that he had examined a witness, and then took charge of Mr. Boland.

The latter told of his connection with the Lackawanna company three years ago, and mentioned that the telephone ordinance was defeated at first by accident on account of Mr. Robinson, the "eleventh man," being twice kept from council meetings by illness. It finally came up and was defeated, Mr. Coyne, who had been supporting it, voting against it. Mr. Boland told of his going to Minooka for Coyne and bringing him up to the meeting, only to have him abscond to the enemy. Witness subsequently met Coyne and on telling him that he had made a mistake in acting as he did, the latter intimated "that he was taking care of himself now-a-days. Previous to his Coyne, as a friend of the ordinance, told witness that Councilman P. F. McCann offered him $300 to vote against the ordinance. The witness declared that he was solicited by Councilman Edward James, and said that he told James that he was surprised at him, as he had before he did he think him a boot-licker. Horatio Fellows and Edward Frable also came to him for money, he testified. The former asked him to put $500 into an envelope and he would guarantee him the necessary vote.

TALKED WITH MALONEY. On being asked whether he ever had any conversation with E. J. Maloney about the ordinance, the witness replied, "I met Maloney after the final passage of the ordinance and he complained that he had got the throw-down from Coyne, 'same as you did,' he said. He told me that he took good care of Mr. Coyne in the matter. He also condemned other of the councilmen, but I think he said McCann, among others, treated him shamefully, as he also was being taken care of."

On being examined about the Barber Asphalt contract matter, the witness declared that he had heard Mayor Bailey say that he was offered money by the Barber people. He also heard Wade Finn tell the mayor that "there would be a darn fool if he didn't take the money, as they had fourteen votes and would pass it over his head any way."

Andrew Healey, the next witness, put on the stand, denied any connection with the company in any capacity. "Well, Mr. Healey," said Mr. Torrey, "can you in any way account for the widespread impression that you were one of the company's agents?"

"All I know," the witness replied, "is a threatening basso voice, 'is that my name has been brought up here in this matter, entirely uncalled for.'"

"Well, you had plenty of opportunity to clean your skirts by coming here before this," answered the League counsel, and as Mr. Healey retorted, "Well, we won't discuss that," and the witness was dismissed.

Ex-Councilman Watkins was unable to appear at the hearing through illness and Wade Finn, another subpoenaed witness, was also unable to attend. The date of the next hearing was not set.

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE.

Its Growth in America a Source of Great Promise.

H. B. Mevin, in The World's Work. The most noteworthy development of any art in recent times in our country is the growth of landscape architecture. Within easy memory it has passed from private to public recognition, and men of middle age can readily recall the time when formal lawns and rigid tree settings were regarded as the best offering of the landscape architect. Now we take our magnificent public parks as a matter of course; we keenly appreciate them—in fact, we could not get along without them. But all this fast-growing public interest in landscape architecture is a development of the last half century. It began in individual owners of estates and extended gradually to the people. It was long an aristocratic art, but the Democratic appreciation of it has opened up the possibilities of a complete development, and it now perhaps deserves to be called in a sense that no other art does, the peculiarly Democratic and American art.

There is nothing in which our cities take more pride. Go to any city or town you will, and you will discover that the park plays an important part in the life and enjoyment of the people of all classes. It will be many a generation before the whole continental area will present a continuous succession of parks and gardens; but the impulse has already become so general as to warrant the expectation that the time will come when no other large area of the earth's surface will present such varied and beautiful aspects. Men are at work in many places, as in the Arnold Arboretum in Boston. A visitor expressed his admiration of the hills of trees. "Not yet, not yet," a landscape artist replied; "some here are a hundred years hence, and you will see the plan worked out. Then it will be beautiful."

Store Closed.

The wholesale grocery house of R. P. Patterson's son on the DeWolf street, was closed yesterday after P. D. on account of the funeral services of Charles McMullen.

CARBONDALE.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

A Peaceful Evening—Nominations Made for City Offices.

The city convention of the local Democratic party last evening in the Academy of Music was utterly in contrast to that held last year. They Pass off Very Quietly and the Regulars Are Victorious.

The Republican primaries were held in all the election districts of this city last night and the Stalwart ticket was victorious, with but one or two exceptions. A Still Alarm.

A still alarm was received at the Mitchell hose house yesterday morning from the opera house, but no fire could be discovered by the firemen. While some of the stage hands were sitting on the stage and speculating on the size of the previous night's audience, one of the largest this season, a big volume of smoke came puffing out of the orchestra exit. In an instant word was telephoned to the Mitchell's and they quickly drove up. Investigation was started on for over half an hour trying to locate the origin of the fire but the smoke ceased coming up at the end of that time and the final conclusion was drawn that the blue clouds found their birth in the furnace of a nearby neighbor. Few knew of the fire until hours after it had happened.

Drew a Crowd.

A large crowd gathered on the bridge on Sixth avenue that spans the Lackawanna river yesterday morning and gazed for about ten minutes at an object in the stream. Those on the outskirts of the gathering who could not see muttered vague murmuring of dire things to late arrivals who came rushing up panting for breath. Rumors flew thick and fast of awful things and then those in the forefront tried to back out of the packed bodies behind. The cause of the trouble was a big muskrat swimming calmly on a stone in the middle of the stream and serenely combing his whiskers with his front paws. A search was made of the crowd for a man with a gun, but, as this is an eminently peaceful community, none was forthcoming. The muskrat finally completed his toilet and swam unperceived to his abode under the bridge.

An Accidental Vaccination.

Dr. David W. Bailey, who has been hard worked during the recent vaccination craze, had the misfortune to see himself accidentally and by so doing has had a taste of what he confidentially tells his juvenile patrons "doesn't hurt a bit." The doctor vaccinated by means of a capillary tube, and a day or so ago cut his fore finger with a piece of glass. The vaccine virus got into the wound and the finger swelled up painfully, and the throbbing and burning of the inflamed finger has kept the big physician awake nights. The swelling has gone down some now, but still is very painful.

Sprained His Wrist.

News Dealer R. S. Meyers performed an unappreciated acrobatic stunt on the icy sidewalk a day or so ago and in coming to a graceful stop balanced his 200 pounds of avoirdupois on one wrist, with the result that it looks as swollen and glossy as a ripe melon. He will not be able to put it to much use for some time and hasn't much to say for hand-shakers just at present.
