Nore Street Signs Needed.

COMMUNICATION has been received from a prominent real estate dealer, Mr. M. H. Holgate, which brings out a point of local interest. Mr. Holgate writes:

"There is a matter I have been want ing to have ventilated through your paper. It is in relation to the absence of street signs at the corners of the streets. Strangers come here and wander through the city and are very, very much annoyed and perplexed to find certain streets they may be looking for; even playle living here in the city are sometimes put to the inconvenience and annoyance of asking what street they are on. It is particularly annoying to strangers who have come here from towns that are up-to-date and have the street signs at intersec tions of sirects. If 1-100th part of the expense of changing the electric lights from the position formerly occupied, to a position half as high on the posts where it certainly ought not to be, had been used in providing more street signs, this great need could have been met."

As a second-class city Scranton ought to celebrate its newly acquired majesty by letting the public know the names of its thoroughfares.

tee as "plebes."

IGURES recently made public by the treasury bureau of statistics at Washington have an interesting bearing upon the proposition of the agrarians in Germany to raise the duty on American wheat imported into that country.

In the eleven months ended with November last, American exports of wheat to Germany amounted to 5,478,-330 bushels, or 6.2 per cent. of our total exportation of wheat in that period. Of flour we exported to Germany 631,-596 barrels or 3.7 per cent. of our total flour exportations. Of our total wheat and flour exportations we sent into Germany only about 5 per cent., and the percentage of this particular branch of our export trade with Germany to our total export trade with that country was only 3.6. Within the last five years our export trade to Germany has more than doubled, it has nearly trebled. Germany bought from us last year twice as much cotton as five years ago; seven times as much corn; more than seven times ducing it early in the session. as much copper; nearly twice as much

Will Be Fought to the Finish. From the Philadelphia Press.

It is a triumph of the boss, of boss methods and boss principles. Decent politics for the time goes to the wall, and those who have striven and abored and hoped for a better era and better in fluences in Penusylvania political life must ac-cept deteat with what grace they may while they gather strength for a more determined struggle bereafter. For, so long as the present machine rule continues in Pennsylvania, there is bound o be an irrepressible conflict between it and that lass of active Republicans who own themselves. For them the rule of the Quay machine has be come so odious and intolerable that mere self-respect compels resistance to it. For Mr. Quay himself they have a certain degree of respect. His audacity, his resourcefulness, his pertinacity and his rare capacity for political organization and leadership are winning qualities that compet the admiration even of his enemies. The dis reputable crowd of parasites and healers with which he surrounds himself have done even more than Mr. Quay himself to organize opposition the rule of the Quay machine. That machine, in its spirit and methods, is without scruples, l leadership, and the impossibility of effecting real fusion between the Democrats and the ant Quay Republicans. There was no single canon date pitted against Quay, and the opposition Republicans. There was no single candicould not have elected any one senator, even though they had held their lines intact at the outset of the balloting. Any move to elect an-other Republican by the aid of Democratic votes would have been the signal for a defection of Democratic votes to Quay, while an attempt to agree upon a Democratic candidate would have scrupted the Republican opposition to Quay. The contest was really between Quay and a vacancy in the United States senate, and, under these circumstances, the anti-Quay Republicans did very well when they held forty-nine of their number true to their cause. As it stands today, the legislature is a better legislature than it would have been if the fight had not been made against Quay, and some good may come out of it by con-cessions made by the victors, or because of the very slender majority which Quay controls in the senate and house, even with the aid of the men who sacrificed their honer to serve him.
