William A. Brady's American production of "The Sorrows of Satan" will be given at the Lyceum Tuesday night and will doubtless call forth a large audience. Miss Correll's readers in this city are more than sufficient to fill the theater, while those who have not read her book will be attracted by one of the most novel and interesting subjects produced on the stage for some time and by the elaborate scenery and excellent cast which the play demands.

Miss Correll's characters are not ordinary ones, and the scenes of this remarkable story are laid in London's most fashionable haunts. And those who have seen any of Mr. Brady's productions, produced among which are "The Day Before" and "The Day After," will know that he will spare neither labor nor expense to make this production worthy of one of the greatest literary sensations of recent years.

THE MARKETS.

Wall Street Review.

New York, Jan. 18.—The market was subjected to an energetic shaking down today, which caused a notable decline in prices. Prices, however, had been pretty well advanced before the decline set in, and there were notable recoveries at the end. The net changes, therefore, do not by any means give a just idea of the character of the market. The fall in prices was in most cases a perpendicular one from the high level to the low level which gave it the appearance of great violence, the selling which caused it had all the appearance of great urgency and was in very heavy volume. Large blocks coming out on the decline. It should not escape notice, however, that there were important stocks in the list which showed good resistance to the prevailing weakness. The tone of the stocks was much better than yesterday. The closing was not only steady and firm and at the best in only a few cases. Total sales, 1,251,000 shares.

Bullish trends welcomed in sympathy with stocks. Total sales, 1,251,000. U. S. refunding 2 1/2 advanced 1/2 per cent. on the last call.
