THE SUNNY SIDE OF LIFE

REVEALED BY LECTURER LOU J. BEAUCHAMP.

Excellent Talk in the Plymouth Congregational Church Last Evening oy a Man Who Takes a Bright View of Things Generally-Vaccination of Children-St. Brenden's Prize Drawings-Funeral of Mrs. Powers - School Deposits. Other Notes and Personals.

The lecture given by Lou J. Beaufliamp at the Plymouth Congregational thurch last evening was one of the pest treats of its kind ever delivered before a West Scranton audience, and t was a pity that such a small audience was present to listen to such a rifted speaker.

Mr. Beauchamp does not resort to incient jokes and comic-paper sayings to amuse his audience, but gives a egitimate, inspiring and uplifting practical talk on events of every-day ife, interjected with his own bright thoughts.

He told how many a gloomy home ran be made bright and cheerful by simply opening the "front parlor" to the children and other members of the family, instead of keeping it locked up for "company only." His advice to parents is to give their children the reedom of speech and comfort in the nome, especially on rainy days, and aid them in their researches for knowlrdge and material things.

In speaking about love, the lecturer said it was the "only good thing in this country not controlled by a trust, and was surprised at the familiarity of his auditors when he cracked some good jokes about playing cards. He couldn't understand how the church people understood so well about "leads," "ordering up," "passing," "raising the ante," etc.

His advice to young men was to get married and settle down, unless they are in debt, and then it would be advisable to settle up. To the young women he said they should guard against the companionship of men who are addicted to drink, as it is the stepping stone to their downfall, disgrace

There should be more of the motherlove in the hearts of children than is now evident, and the men and women with clean hands, clean hearts and clean souls are the ones who are re-

Does the restriction here found prevent the legislature from passing an act which shall affect the costs of a contest which ha arisen out of an election which proceded it?

NEITHER LETTER NOR SPIRIT.

That certainly is not the letter, nor do we think it is the apirit of the constitutional pro-vision. The two things prohibited are the as-signing of jurisdiction and the regulation of its exercise, by which we inderstand the assigning of the contest to a tribunal different from that by which it would have been tried according to the law as it stood when the election took place: or, without changing the tribunal, giving som pecial cast to the manner of trying and dis-sosing of it which it otherwise would not have. The manifest purpose of this to cut off legisla-tion passed to meet and affect, favorably and infavorably, a particular case,

After an election has taken place any one wh ires and has a standing to contest is entitle to have the contest heard and tried by that court or judge who would have tried it when the elecion took place; to have no more nor any le than was then required; and to have the san course of procedure observed. But in no sense can the disposition of the costs be regarded as a egulation "of the manner of trial" or "the e-O'Holleran, of Olyphant, and Thomas creise of jurisdiction," cognate expressions whi we find in two parts of the clause quoted. The only complaint that can be made against change in respect to disposition of the costs uch as is now before us, is that the parties may be called upon to assume a larger responsi bility for them than they perhaps contemplated, begun. They now have an absolute liability I it if the court decided that the contest was sustained by probable cause. But whether the not the disposition of the costs in all cases is at the pleasure of the legislature that we are not to restrict if except, where by express prohibi-tion or clear implication we are compelled to do so, neither of which can be said of what is to be
