That the price of gas has been raduced in this city in twenty-three years voluntarily by the Scranton Gas | worn out in the course of its business. and Water company from $3.50 for each 1.050 feet to $1.10, with a further dollar, with discounts equal to 5 cents ; bricks, for the small consumer and 10 cents for the large consumer, is a fact wellknown, nor do we remember ever to have heard complaints as to quality. Whatever may be said as to the water rates of this company, its rates for gas are generally acceptable. If a franchise is to be granted to a competitive company, it should be so safeguarded as to protect the public thoroughly in all the points where past experience has shown that councils are liable to be negligent or indifferent.

Not a Difficult Problem. THEN you get right down to the bottom of this question of a better fire department, or of increased insurance rates, it is very simple. One or the other is inevitable. The tables upon which the cost of fire insurance is computed assume that due precaution will be taken, both to prevent fires and to limit their destructiveness. If this assumption in a particular locality is proved by results to be incorrect, the rates have to be readjusted. That should be clear. Talk in the board of trade of dropping present policies and forming local mutual companies is not to be taken seriously. It would not solve the difficulty. Local companies would be less fitted than general companies to meet the extracrdinary losses of a destruc-ways that are generally clumsy and frequently violent and destructive. If there is a strike, the strikers not only hit at the employer but they also punish other workingmen; and if disorder follows, as too often it does, with bloodshed and military intervention, u load of costs is piled high at the expense of every interest in the community. Thus, with commendable intent, the result reached is nevertheless disastrous and this shows that to solve the problem broader leadership and keener minds are needed. Such leadership may be evolved from the ranks as the need of it presses. But it is quite as likely to come from the other side, where men are trained to cope with managerial problems and where selfinterest, not less than humanity, prompts the giving of the best thought to how to make labor prosperous, contented and cheerful.

Hearing so much as we do, now adays, about the iniquities of the various "octopuses" which are reputedly conspiring to crush or crucify the workingman, it may have been overlooked by some of us that great employing corporations like the Pennsylvania Railroad company are doing much more than they are receiving credit f : to work out on a businesslike basis the humanities incidental to their transaction of business. This voluntary pension fund is only one Illustration, but it clearly foreshadows the day-not distant, in our opinion-when every large industry will place, among its fixed charges, a percentage on business done sufficient to care for the faithful lieutenants incapacitated or

SiR ROBERT HART, the best European authority on China, ence of nearly half a century of residence among the Chinese people, during which time he has had opportunity to study every phase of their character, customs and mental methods, in an article presenting his matured conclusions respecting the recent boxer uprising and the problems collateral with it, says emphatically that there is one way and only one way whereby the foreigner can conquer the Chinaman, and that is by applying to him the doctrine of the Golden Rule. In this belief he is sustained by an immense majority of the other intelligent Occidentals who have lived long in China and who have not been there for dishonorable purposes.

Yet the proposition now credited to the German field-marshal, the Count von Waldersee, whose residence in China spans the period of only a few months, is to undertake against the Chinese people a campaign of terrorism, for the purpose of scaring the imperial government into precipitate compliance with the ailies' demands. The sword is to be unsheathed, the torch lighted and a wholesale orgy of loot and rapine is to be inaugurated . the extracrdinary losses of a destruc-tive fire; they could only survive one or two big fires by charging rates far higher than those now charged or ants flying into the interior in wild

LITERARY NOTES

Miss Bertha Runkle is the youngest of the American authors whose pens have made them famous within the past few years. When she wrote "The Heimet of Navarre" she was little more than twenty years of age, yet the manu-script of her romance was read with enthusiasm by the editors of the Century, and has attracted wider and more favorable attention than any other story that has ever appeared in that maga zine. Many applications have been made for the author's photograph, but no one has succeeded in overcoming her aversion to its public use; and details of her biography are almost equally difficult to obtain. As a matter of fact, there is little to record. Miss Runkle is the only child of Mrs. L. G. Runkle, a well known New York ournalist. She is a native of New Jersey; never vent to kindergarten as a child, nor to as a young woman; has traveled little, and has never been to France-a fact which, she herself suggests, may account for her laying there th scene of her romance, "The Helmet of Navarre" is a maiden effort at fiction-writing; but a strik ing poem. "The Song of the Sons of Esau," app-ared over her name in Charles Dudley Warsome ner's "Library of American Literature" years ago, and is included in Mr. Stedman's "American Anthology," and once or twice in "The Helmet" she shows her skill in the forms verse-writing popular in France in the sixteenth century. To St. Nicholas for December, 1900, Miss Runkle contributed a short story, "The Surcery of Hal the Wheelwright," the scene of which is laid in the England of Henry V. As the is in no haste to take advantage of the popularity of her romance, it may be several years before a new work from her pen is published. Almost simultaneously with the death of Queen lictoria, the Outlook prints an article by J McCarthy, the author of "A Short History of Our Own Times," on the "Political Influence of Queen Victoria," accompanying the article with an excellent portrait, painted from life at Wind-sor Castle, by Mr. F. M. Bell Smith. Mr. Mc-Carthy's article confirms the statement which has lately been made that the queen took more than a formal interest in public affairs. Mr. McCarthy states very positively that the queen very frequently "by a single pointed remark or question, would throw a disturbing doubt on the wisdom of some minor act or policy suggested for her approval," and he says that Victoria has "given to the world the best living illustration it has yet had of the part which the sovereign aght to play in a constitutional monarachy and free country." In addition to this article, the February magazine number of The Outlook gives an excellent portrait of the new king of Engli and contains elaborate editorial estimates of the life of Queen Victoria and the history of England under her reign.

For more than a generation the medical writ ings of Dr. Edward B. Foote upon home hygione and the relations of sex have been recognized as standard and have found their way into sands of homes. Their distinguishing characteristics are candor and common sense and while many of the subjects which they treat upon are seldom discussed, in deference to a social convention which too often leads through ignorance to misery or immorality, the necessity for reliable information in the premises is apparent. There has just been gathered into one volume, known as the twentieth century edition, the revised fruits of Dr. Foote's long experience as a specialist in medical, social and sexual science; and this edition of "Dr. Foote's Home Cyclopedia," which is published by the Murray Hill Publishing company, at 129 East Twenty eighth street, New York, may be recommended ; without hesitation as worthy of a place in the library of every home.

In addition, the historic points are well preserved, and many of the de-fenses constructed by Washington's heroes still remain. Students of history often spend days traversing the country following the footsteps of the variate. of the patriots. It is held-and rightly so-that winter at Val ley Forge was a crucial period of the fight for freedom; that it led to the battles of Trentor and Princeton, which changed the ill fortunes the war, and that today it is one of the sacrespots of American territory. The new park will consist of about a thousand acres, and the ultimate success of the efforts of the patriotic socie ties seems to be certain.

But that is not all. Not only has the same plan or some modification of it been adopted by a number of other American railroads but representatives of many foreign railroads have detailed experts to study its workings with a view to applying it in spirit. This is especially true of Russia and Japan. There is no conjecturing how far the influence of this good example will spread.

One of the problems which the twentleth century must solve is how to organize the processes of industry so that, without stimulating thriftlessness, they may yet care for their own victims. It is apparent that we are to have an era of great financial combinations for industrial and commercial purposes; and, as a consequence, fewer men managing small private business enterprises and more men selling their labor and skill for hire than has been true in former generations. As an offset to the possible abuses growing out of the concentration of employing power into few hands, labor unions have been formed, seeking to regulate the hours of labor, the schedules of pay and also, to such degree as lies within their power, the social opportunities of the employed.

But it must be clear to all who look upon this subject fairly that the tendrepresent every act of the adminisency of labor, except when unusually tration as a national calamity these well guided, is to seek its ends by days is in danger of losing its grip.
