SPEAKING BY SUNLIGHT. How the Heliograph Was Used in Many Wars.

rom the London Daily Mail. Most of the news which came from Ladysmith during the slege was transmitted from the beleaguered town to General Buller by means of either the heliograph or flashlight.

Eight hundred years ago North Affrica had a system of wireless telegraphy by which places a hundred miles apart could exchange messages in a few seconds. In Algiers buildings were crected on prominent sites over the land, with adjustable mirrors on the roofs. The sun's rays falling on these mirrors were flashed in the sky, and were visible at great distances. was easy toarran ge a plan by which the flashes of different length should mean various letters and so make it possible to exchange conversation.

Then the world went to sleep, and it was not till the time of the Crimean war that the possibility of talking by sunflash began to arouse attention. The Russians used mirrors for this purpose largely when they were be steged at Sebastapol and this led the English army to examine the matter, but it was not until thirty years later that the "mirror telegraph." as some called it, was adopted by the Indian

In 1885 experiments were begun by the English army with the heliograph, and they were so satisfactory that four years later every regiment and battalion in the service was supplied with two.

Since then there has not been a military campaign without abundant demonstrations of its usefulness. In the recent campaigns against native tribes in Northern India the heliograph was invaluable, and by it the most outlying posts were kept in constant touch with headquarters. Your enemy can cut the wire of your field telegraph line; he cannot intercept the flashes of your mirrors.

Many years before this, in the Transvaal war of 1880, one of the besieged British garrisons tried by every possible means to open up communication with other British forces many miles off. Runners were intercepted. messages never got through. At last a bright idea struck one of our officers. There was no hellograph with our troops, but the officer got a shaving mirror and used an ordinary cloth cap as a shade. He put the mirror at an angle to reach where he thought the British relief column might be, and started flashing in the sky by quickly covering and exposing the mirror with his cloth cap. At first came no response.

The work was continued, the signal ork being flashed around all likely places. Then there came a flash back rom the distance. With straining eyes and beating hearts the besieged men read out the signals sent from score of miles away: "All well, Relist quickly coming."

What is the heliograph? Briefly, it s a circular adjustable mirror or mirrors, usually mounted on tripod stand and with a sighting arrangement attached. The mirror is adjusted until the shadow from the sighting rod (the rod which stands out in front of the glass) falls exactly on an unsilvered spot in the center of the glass. The unsilvered spot, the point of the sightwanted to reach have to brought it the same line of sight.

There is also a rear screw arrange ment by which the mirror can be moved to the right or left without disturbing the sighting, so as to follow the apparent motion of the sun, A shutter is so placed that it interepts the deflection from the mirror which is operated by a key at the bottom of the mirror.

The operator, by depressing the key, moves the mirror, and so permits the flash of the light to be reflected. A short depression reflects a short flash, and a long depression a longer flash This enables the Morse alphabet to be used-the ordinary dot and dash system of the telegraphic instrument.

The distance which these sun flashes will travel is hardly credible. The record was made by Captain W. A. Glassford, of the United States Army Signaling corps, who, in some experiments in Western America, succeeded in opening up and maintaining communication between Mount Ellen, Utah and Mount Uncompaligre, Colorado a hundred and eighty-three miles apart. He used an eight inch mirror. The larger the mirror the farther it is possible to flash. The ordinary English service pattern is five inches i

It is only in very clear sunshing country that long distances can be overed. In England it would probably be impossible to send a message more than twenty miles, save unde ireen Ridge Possiyterian church will entertain ittitusual conditions. Our elimiate makes: members and triends with a social in the the heliograph comparatively useless

> When it is required to send a mes-sage to a place in such a direction that the operator stands with the sun behind him, a duplex mirror has to be used, so that the sun's rays are caught on one glass and sent back to the other. This involves careful adjustment, and is more complicated than when the sun is in front.

GETTING EVEN WITH SPOONER. The Brilliant Statesman's Experience with Two Men and a Bible. From the Saturday Evening Post, Senator John C. Spooner, of Wisconsin, when a young man, was attorney for two men charged with stealing. The prisoners stated that they had seen strolling along the river bank when they espied a boat, and for a little amusement jumped in and rowed out into the stream. The owner of the boat saw them and hurried for a constable, who arrested them as soon as they returned. There had been taken from the men well-worn Bible and a small drawer, On the fly-leaf of the Bible was the

A great many people will be interested in seeing the form of the grip bacillus which appears in the border of this article. In the ten years or more since the Russian grip first invaded this country, it has proved fatal to hundreds of thousands of people. From 1889 to the date of the present epidemic, it is said that in New York State alone more than 52,000 deaths have been caused by grip. The present epidemic seems to be more disastrous in its results and even more wide spread than that which introduced the disease to this country and added a new word to the popular vocabulary. "What is grip?" people asked when the term first came into use. It took little time for the public to realize that this disease was more fatal than small-pox and more to be dreaded by reason of its after consequences. Small-pox scars the skin, but leaves the body strong.

Grip leaves no outward scars, but so undermines the physical strength that it leaves the system a prey to any chance disease. It commonly

"Last spring I had a severe attack of La Grippe," writes Miss Ency M. Van Wey, of Mitchellcreek, Tioga Co., Penn'a," and was under treatment of one of the best physicians in this part of the country from March until in July, and although greatly benefited by his treatment yet I was left in a miserable condition. Nervous prostra-tion seemed to be the leading trouble; was very despondent; would awake mornings with a dull, heavy pain over my eyes; had bilious headache a great share of the time; great distress after eating; stomach would bloat and I was very weak. The leas exertion would completely tire me out. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's medicines

I wrote a letter of consultation to the Doctor and received a prompt and very satisfactory reply. I immediately bought a bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and one of 'Favorite Prescription,' also a vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and took them as I would say to all sufferers, 'Write to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, then give Dr. Pierce's medicines a thorough trial, and it is my sincere belief that you will just as sure get your health as that day follows night:

The source of all physical strength is food, which after digestion is converted into nutrition and in the form of blood becomes the sustenance of the body. When disease attacks the stomach or other organs of digestion and nutrition, or when the stomach is "weak," as it is after an attack of disease like the grip, the whole body is weak because of lack of nutrition. The only way to gain strength is by nourishing the body, and the only way to nourish the body is to enable the assimilation of food by strengthening the "weak" stomach and curing the diseases of the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts. This is perfectly accomplished by Dr.

Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It does not make strength, no medicine can do that, because all strength is made from food properly digested and assimilated. It is by enabling the perfect digestion and asimilation of food that "Golden Medical Discovery" restores physical strength and sound health. No matter what organ is affected by disease through stomach weakness and lack of nutrition, whether heart, lungs, kidneys, liver, or any other organ, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery may be relied upon in almost all cases to give strength and health. It always
