TOOK TOO MANY PILLS.

Delia Cummings Almost Poisoned by Strychnine in Pink Pellets She Consumed Yesterday.

While little pink pills may be exceedingly efficacious as a restorative for shattered nerves, headaches, earaches, toothaches, etc., nevertheless it is a recognized fact that taken in wholesale quantities, the bumble little aforesaid pink pill has a great latent ower for evil. Delia Cummings, a domestic employ ed in the residence of Attorney O. B. Partridge, at 1013 Olive street, yesterday underwent an experience which makes her competent to give expert estimony upon the subject.

Before breakfast she consumed be ween six and nine pellets, and within two hours had convulsions and appeared in all the agonies of poisoning Arsenic or strychnine contained in the pills caused her trouble. Dr. Walker, of the Lackawanna hospital staff, who was called to the woman's aid, is of the opinion that it was strychnine. Emetics and antidotes were administered and last night the patient rested easily Miss Cummings consumed the pills bout 7.39 o'clock. While busied preparing breakfast, she felt out of sorts and decided to take a little medicine to ward off illness. On the wardrobe rested a small box containing a number of harmless looking pills. Unknown to the domestic, the little pellets were of such power that the directions on the box advised the use of out one of them per day.

However, the servant girl was willing to take heroic measures and bravely gulped down pill after pill until the box was half empty. While the family were eating breakfast, some time later, they heard a shrick from the kitchen and on rushing into the apartment found Delia writhing on the floor in the throes of convulsions, Dr. Reed Burns was called in, and the Lackawanna hospital then notified. The girl was removed in the ambulance to the home of her brother-inlow, Robert Gilleard, at 422 Phelps street, and rapidly recovered from the effects of the poison.

MOIR SAYS HE DOESN'T CARE

HAVING DONE HIS DUTY HE NEED NOT WORRY.

Claims It Is Now Up to Councils to Put Reorganization Ordinance in Legal Shape by Passing the "Chaser" and Appropriating Money to Meet Its Demands-No Reclassification of Real Estate This Year. Difficulty About Classifying Coal. Applicants for Fire Department.

Speculation was rife yesterday as t whether or not Recorder Moir would revoke his revocation of the reorganization ordinance veto as a means of clubbing the estimates committee into making appropriations for the officers provided for in the charter.

The recorder has fifteen days which to pass upon a measure and it this instance seven days still remain. When he vetoed the ordinance, he was prompted, so he says, by a desire to have its inadequacies supplied and its illegalities corrected. After the veto message had gone to City Clerk Lavelle he had a conference with the then director of public safety, Mr. Clemons. and Director of Public Works Roche leaders in the two parties in city councils, and as a result of the conference the recorder recalled his veto, with the understanding that the ordinance would be amended to suit his ideas by neans of a supplementary ordinance,

This "chaser" has been introduced and is now before committee in select council. As is generally understood, it provides for a delinquent tax collector a city detective, four additional patrolmen and several other things the ecorder wants. The estimates committee at Tuesday night's meeting entertained motions for appropriations to neet the expenses of these various of fices, but by an overwhelming vote each was in turn defeated.

DOESN'T CARE A FIG.

"Personally," said the recorder yesterday, "I don't care a fig what they do As recorder I did my duty in having the supplementary ordinance introduced, and as recorder I am destrous that the offices in question should be provided for. The action of the estimates committee, however, cannot be fortured into a slap at me, because I am in no wise concerned now that I have done my full duty. Will I recall my recall of the veto of the re-organization ordinance? Certainly not, It is an incomplete and, in certain features, illegal measure, but I have pointed out a way of curing its defects, and t is now up to councils to act. On the side let me say that the "chaser" will pass. I fell certain that a majority of the councils will see the light in due

Before bowing the reporter out, his nonor in an interrogative rather than declarative way remarked something to the effect that it was not impossible to compel councils by mandamus to make provision for the delinquent tax collector.

It has been practically decided by the city officials that there will be no reclassification of real estate this year. The assessment made by the old board of assessors will be taken as the basis of the levy, and next year a new and complete assessment will be undertaken according to the second class city laws Attention has been called by So licitor Watson to the fact that Scranton cannot be content with a classifica tion contemplating only three classes Coal is a separate estate, under th law, and must be assessed separately It cannot be classed as built-up, suburban or agricultural property, nor car it be included in the personality column. The second class city laws say there shall be three classes; no more no less. Solicitor Watson is at a los as to how to advise the assessors, Some think that unless remedial legislation is passed the assessors will have to neglect the assessments against coal. It is safe to say the owners of coal beds will not protest.

STOOD BY HER FATHER.

Little Edna Hunt Refused to Give Testimony Which Would Send Her Father to Prison.

"Don't cry, papa. I won't send you to prison. They can send me there if they want to, but I won't tell them any more." With these words, fourteen-year-old Edna Hunt threw her arms around her sobbing father's neck, and with a defiant pout faced a very astonished group in the West Scranton police station last evening.

The father, John B. Hunt, of 906 West Lackawanna avenue, was being given a hearing by Magistrate Bezaleel Davis on a criminal charge preferred by his daughter, who was a prominent figure in the sensational events of Sat urday night, when wth a half-dozen men she was arrested in a freight car near the Diamond crossing. She then made certain charges against her father, but when her evidence was desired last night she refused point blank to say anything incriminating against him. She alluded vaguely to some wrongdoing, but gave no directestimony.

Standing bravely before the crowd which thronged the station, and among whose members she could recognize several of her own relatives, the strange little girl, her baby crowned with an aureole of golden hair and flushed an angry red, fiercely declared, "You can't make me tell," and when her father swore his innocence of guilt the child gave utterance to the remarks quoted at the beginning of this artcle. Magistrate Davis finally discharged Hunt, and the girl was returned to the Florence misson.

"I like the Florence mission," she said to a Tribune man, "because I can do as I please there. I have reformed now, and they can't hold me there forever. In two years I will be free, and when I am I won't trouble anyone. I will never darken my father's door

Those in charge at the mission are at a loss what to do with the child, and are inclined to view Edna as a small white elephant on their hands. She re gards the taking away of her liberty with the stoicism of a young Indian squaw, and seems utterly indifferent concerning berself and her future.

DIDN'T GET A BIT GLAD

BEARER OF JOYOUS TIDINGS COMES OFF WITH A CHILL.

James Gannon Stolidly Refuses to Enthuse Over the Announcement That the Legislature Has Passed a Special Law to Save Him from Spending His Whole Life in a Prison Cell-Seems Perfectly Contented and Is Waxing Fat-As Determined as Ever Not to Sign.

If James Gannon is in the least con cerned about the special legislation passed by the house and senate to 'rip" him out of fail, he gives no indi cation of it by his talk or manner. A Tribune reporter bastened to the county jail vesterday to bear to Gan non the glad tidings that the senate has passed the "Gannon ripper," and that the governor's signature was the only thing now wanting to make him a free man

"M'n'yah," said Gannon.

After a search of several minutes, in company with Warden Simpson, the reporter found the old man down in the laundry, sitting on the edge of a stationary washtub, lazily dangling his egs, and slowly swinging an umbrellahandle cane to and fro, as if beating time to some easy-cadence tune that was running through his mind. The only other occupant of the laundry was prisoner engaged in ironing his clothes, preparatory to being released tomorrow. Gannon was absent-mindedly watching the ironing operaton, bu disdaining any reply more than a nod or a grunt to the speculations of his companion.

LOST IN MEDITATION.

After watching the scene for a fee noments, the reporter could not repress a yawn. Gannon looked up as the reporter approached, but in moment was again lost in meditation upon the ironing process. Not wishing to disclose his identity the reporter conveyed his message in a sort of incidental way. "By the way, Mr. Gannon, did you hear that the senate today passed the bill that will open the prison doors to you?" quoth the reporter. Then it was Mr. Gannon delivered himself of the eloquent, though brief, ejaculation, "M'n'yah." Translated it would probably read something like the second line of the epic couplet beginning, "Hail, hail, the gang's all here. The reporter waited a while, looking lowards Gannon with an interrogative

"I don't know what they're doing or what they've done," he finally added. "Of course you will be glad to get out?" ventured the reporter.

"Uh huh," said Gannon, slowly nodding his head up and down affirmatively. The reporter explained to him th form and purpose of the bill; how it would make it possible for the court to order his release, immediately upon the bill becoming a law, and how Judge Archbald, the framer of the bill, had said that the day the bill was passed Gannon would be a free man.

IT'S TIME, SAID GANNON, "Well, it's time for them to do something," said Gannon. "How long have you been here now!

was asked. "Six years and ten months," came quickly in response. "I suppose you would stay here as long again before you would sign?" the reporter remarked. "I would, and I'd rot here first," declared Gannon, with some show of vehemence. At this juncture, Gannon seemed to realize that he was talking to a newspaper man, and as has been the almost invariable experience, the interviewer's occupation was gone. Gannon crossed his right leg over the off one, and declined to answer any more questions. Several parties who have talked with Gannon lately have had an experience similar to that of the reporter as de scribed above. He does not seem to have any concern in his approaching release, and some who have talked with him have come away with the in pression that he is not overly anxious to give up his easy, economical life at the jall. Gannon is now sixty-eight years of age. He has grown very fleshy and has healthy, not to say rugged look. Warden Simpson says he has not been Ill a single day since he has been warden, and that is more than three years. CONGRATULATORY DINNER.
