HER POINT OF VIEW

SHE was rather a busy woman. The way they found it out was by reading a bit of memoranda she left in the street car.

It was all for the benefit of the race—the woman was only a type. That is what they said, at least. People who prowl over your bureau drawers and read letters and telegrams meant for your eyes alone, usually find equally pleasant excuses for their deeds.

But that memoranda, well, it wasn't any gorgeous address book bound in Persian embroidery, slipped from some rich old altar cloth in a foreign land, and fitted up with silver lettering and a dainty gold penell.

It was not a high priced one, either. She had so many letters from friends who wrote here and there, in the most neglected fashion and skipped merrily from the first to the last page and then somewhere else unexpectedly, and the blank spaces made convenient tabular for memoranda.

Cold Storage for Furs. The cold storage of fur clothing, muffs, etc., is quite an industry in many of our larger cities. As the temperature is constantly kept below the freezing point, it is obvious that this is a perfect method of storing garments and furs when they are not required. They are removed from the racks free from the odor of ice, camphor, cedar, etc., and the furs are improved by tangling in the fresh, dark, dry, restful air.
