WARRING NEIGHBORS.

Residents of the Last Chance Sot tlement Air Differences in Alderman's Court.

soveral families in the Last Chance settlement are divided by differences which they aired in Alderman Atkinson's court several nights this week. Tuesday night, there was a larceny and receiving case, in which the fortrie teller, Mary, the Dane, figured, and which was reported in these columns the succeeding day. The next sight, the alderman had another suit before him from the same settlemen and which grew out of the gold watch case.

Joseph Megal was the defendant, and the prosecutor was Frank Stone, his reighbor. Megal is a brother- in-law of Elosso Andros, the man who had stone arrested on the charge of perjury, because the last-named appeared against him as a witness in the larcony case, in which there was no evidence against Andros. Now Stone, in a spirit of pique, causes the arrest of Megal, on the charge of selling liquor without a license. Stone and his wil-nesses swore that Megal was in the habit of buying lager beer in lots of five and six barrels, particularly on Sucurday night, and it appears, also, Stone and his witnesses were Megal's best customers, buying the beer from him in large quantities, paying as high as a dollar for the portion served out Incidentally, it might be to them. said, that the quantity which they received from Megal was appreciably greater than they could have secured at a saloon. This act of Megal's was regarded in the settlement as a big accommodation, but Mebal's obliging act laid him open to prosecution, which Stone recognized and took advantage of, it is said, in order to square himself with Megal. The alderman held Megal in bail to await the grand jury's action.

CONSTABLE NEARY OUT.

He Left Emergency Hospital Yesterday Afternoon and Was Warmly Greeted by His Friends.

Constable Edward Neary, the officer who risked his life to capture the infuriated Nathan Cobb, on Monday night, left Emergency hospital yesterday afternoon and joined his family at the residence on South Main street. The injured officer appeared to be strong, and declared he felt well, save for the effects of his three days' confinement at the hospital. Everywhere the constable went he was warmly greeted, and he continually heard expressions of sincere regret over his meeting with Cobb's murderous weapon. Neary's head was swathed in bandages.

Cobb's ferocious attack on Neary was strikingly evident in two long cuts across his coat, just above the hip, One was about a foot across, and the other was a few inches less. Each thrust of Cobb's knife penetrated through all of Neary's clothing, but singularly enough the flesh was not even scratched.

sults of the day along Lodore's shores. THE CANAL BED NUISANCE. for he exhibited quite a string of cal fish and perch on his return here; about a half a hundred in all. Alderman Atkinson, who frankly admits that he is only a novice as compared with his companion fisherman, very modestly gave credit to Contable Moran for the day's success, but the constable slyly winked that it took two to land the beauties, and that the alderman was, in the vernaoular of "Chuck" Connors, "shucks" as a fisherman.

DEATH OF GILBERT COLBORN.

A Well-Known Resident Succumbs

to Attack of Bright's Disase. Gilbert Colborn, a widely known resident of this community, died at his 69 Belmont street, Thursday home, night. Death followed several months' illness of Bright's disease and asthma. Deceased was thirty-five years of age. He was born in Clifford township, but had lived in this city for many years. Prior to his illness Mr. Colborn was employed at the Wilson Creck mines, and he was a member of the Miners' Keg fund of that colliery. He had a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Deceased is survived by his mother, Mrs. Helen Colborn, his wife, one daughter and two brothers, Levi and Leander, all of this city. The funeral will be held today. The cortege will leave the home at 3 o'clock At 3.30 services will be conducted in he First Presbyterian church by Rev Charles Lee, after which interment will be made in Brookside cemetery.

HOME FROM CONVENTION.

Carbondale Exceptionally Well Represented at C. T. A. U. Gathering in Scranton.

Carbondale was exceedingly well repeseted at the Diocesan convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, which was held in Scranton on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. Probably no place so large as Carbondale had as many representaives of the cause of total abstinence as this city, a circumstance of the gathering which made the workers for the cause in this community feel quite elated.

The Carbondale societies were repesented as follows: Pioneer Father Mathew - Hon. Thomas Mooney, Eli Beers, St. Rose society-William Malloy, John Killeen. St. Patrick's-John Cavanaugh, John Costello. Knights of Father Mathew-David L. Walsh, Edward J. Dougherty.

St. Aloysius-Matthew J. Murphy, T. J. Cilhool.

The social will come off the carly part of June, and the occasion may be ccepted as opportune for the ushering n of the cool and sightly summer suits of duck. Splendić music will be provided for and the occasion will, from now on, be eagerly anticipated in society cir-cles in this city.

The Board of Health's Attention Directed to a Menacing Pool of Stagnant Water Near Seventh Avenue Denot.

The attention of the board of health s called to that portion of the abanloned canal of the Delaware and Hudson, just below the Seventh avenue depot. This part of the old canal bed is hidden from view by the expansive board walk which runs parallel with the railroad tracks, from the Seventh avenue bridge to the depot. On this account, probably, the conditions that are to be found along this part of the old canal are hidden and for this reaon they have been neglected until they have developed into a nuisance and a menace to the health of the residents of that locality.

When the canal was abandoned the water was not entirely drained from the part of the canal bed spoken of. It was said at the time that it was the company's intention to fill it in and make a macadamized roadway along where the plank walk is now. But this plan was not carried out; nothing was ione. A body of water remained under the walk and it has settled there for over two years, becoming more foul and stagnant as time passes.

A DANGEROUS EXPERIENCE.

Carriage Overturns and Horse Goes Down an Embankment.

young man who hired an outfit at Holgate's livery, on John street, this week, had a dangerous experience before he returned from his pleasant trip, but luckily he emerged without harm, though his adventure somewhat disturbed him.

The young man set out for Crystal lake, and when he reached that resort he sought out a stable to put up his horse during the day. In driving into the barn some milk cans or other obstruction threw the carriage to one side and over the embankment which arose from the surrounding field. The happening was so sudden that the horse's sense of danger was of no avail and the young man, too, was helpless to avert the mishap. The carriage toppled over, and the young man was sore and bruised when he was relieved by helping hands from his perilous plight. The frightened horse it rejuired some time to calm, and for several days it showed the effects of the *xciting experience, being restless and mable to eat.
