THE SCHOOL BOARD IN A DEADLOCK

The New Board Got Only as Far as the Presidency in Reorganizing and Stuck Fast to That Office—The Deadlock Over Mr. Hughes and Mr. Vannan—Adjourned Until Thursday Night—Incidents of the Meeting.

The Carbondale school board last night added another deadlock to the number that have marked the recent history of the public bodies of this city.

The new board took only the first step in reorganization, when it divided, and broke up with a deadlock over the office of president.

While it was suspected, in fact expected, that there would be a deadlock over one of the offices, it was not thought that the division would be over that of the presidency, but rather that the members came together in the hope of a breaking away from the agreement that it was supposed would hold the members together on all of the offices but treasurer, showed themselves late yesterday afternoon, and when the members came together last night there were evidences of hostility between the sides indicated in the vote recorded here—Messrs. Hughes, Hockenberry and Gallagher on the one hand, and Messrs. Korwin, Swiebert and Vannan on the other.

This board's feeling prevailed throughout the evening, though a recess was declared by temporary chairman Hockenberry, with the hope that the spirit of harmony might make its presence felt, at least for a short period.

This hope was not realized, however, and when reorganization may be effected can only be conjectured.

In the meantime, public interest will be kept at a high pitch and it is safe to conjecture that the attendance at the adjourned meeting on Thursday night, though last night the assembly room was almost filled.

The old board was called to order for the last time by President Hockenberry, who in their seats, and just as President Hockenberry rapped for order, Mr. Vannan, the successor of Mr. Moon, came in and took a seat between Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Korwin.

After the reading of the minutes, Secretary Hughes read the monthly report of Superintendent Garr, which was received and filed. The number of enrollments was shown to be 2252; the average attendance being 114.

The report of the auditing committee was presented, but before it was read, Mr. Korwin indicated that there was a discrepancy of one dollar in the account of Treasurer Moon. Secretary Hughes suggested that this should not be true, since Treasurer Moon's figures compared with those of his, which were absolutely correct. When the figures were read by Mr. Korwin, it was discovered that the auditing committee made a mistake of one dollar in one of the balances.

This was corrected, and the accounts of Treasurer Moon were declared to be correct and an motion of Secretary Hughes, the auditors, Messrs. Korwin and Swiebert subscribed to this on the treasurer's books.

This appeared to be all that the old board had to be passed upon, and accordingly Secretary Hughes moved that the board adjourn sine die.

When the old board went out of existence at this juncture, there was a flocking of the members to Mr. Moon, the retiring member, and all of the members shook his hand warmly as they bade him good-bye.

The three members of the old board, Messrs. Hockenberry, Gallagher and Korwin, whose terms hold over, of the new temporary organization, by electing President Hockenberry chairman, Mr. Gallagher as secretary, Mr. Korwin and Mr. Swiebert as members, which were seconded by Mr. Korwin and Mr. Hockenberry respectively.

Temporary secretary Korwin read the certificates of election of the new members, that is, the directors whose terms commenced with this meeting. They were Messrs. Hughes, Swiebert and Vannan.

Mr. Vannan, who had not yet taken the oath of office, was sworn in by temporary chairman Hockenberry.

The matter of permanent organization was taken up.

THE MACHINISTS WILL NOT GO OUT

Hands of the Carbondale Machine Company to Remain at Work Pending Settlement of Difficulties in and About Scranton—Result of Conference with President Trautwein.

The threatened going out of the hands at the Carbondale Machine company's plant has been averted and the men will take up their work this morning as usual, and will stick to their employment pending the settlement of the difficulties among the machine shops in Scranton.

The committee of workmen composed of J. H. Colvin, William Smith, Frank Lewis, and Charles Lewis, the same that presented the demands about ten days ago, held a protracted session with President Trautwein yesterday, which, it is known, was marked by a lively debate. It took three or four hours to discuss and argue the points at issue, but how the men would not be learned from the committee, for each man was strangely reticent when approached for information. On what basis the men will remain at work was not given out, but it is known that the question of the nine-hour day was not settled, but was left open pending the settlement of the same issue in the trouble at the Scranton machine shops.

The men, it is known, fared better in the matter of wages, an increase being secured, but not as much as was asked for and expected. This is the anchor that held the men and in the meantime they are hopeful that the nine-hour day question will be decided in their favor.

A few of the men at the shops have expressed themselves as being opposed to a strike and would be willing to cling to the last hope before leaving their positions. It is this feeling, possibly, that deterred the men, who were in favor of going out, from taking a decided stand on the question of abandoning work in the event of a favorable answer being returned to all of the demands.

There was no work yesterday afternoon, but this was because of a meeting of employees held to discuss the terms of a new agreement with President Trautwein. At this meeting it was decided, as stated before, to resume work this morning, on the proposed basis—a slight increase in wages, which the men regard as favorable enough, and to await the settlement of the nine-hour question at the Scranton shops.

I gave up work during these years of torture, tried various remedies and many doctors, but all the permanent relief came from the use of Peruna. My trouble was called indigestion, but it was catarrh all through my system, and a few bottles of Peruna made me feel like another person, noting the improvement after I had used the first bottle.
