ELCRED REYNOLDS' BODY FOUND

Discovered Floating in the Lackawaxen Near Hawley—Other News from Honesdale.

Special to the Scranton Tribune.

Honesdale, June 7.—This morning about 7 o'clock, as Mr. Meyer was crossing the bridge at Hawley on his way to work, he discovered the body of Eldred Reynolds, who was drowned in the Lackawaxen river Memorial day, near the Honesdale armory, floating in the river. He secured the body and in answer to a telephone message several Honesdale men went to Hawley and brought the body here on the 10:40 a. m. train. The remains were placed in charge of Undertaker Brown. The long time the body had lain in the water prevented all from viewing the remains. Funeral services were conducted at the family residence by Rev. C. L. Percy, at 2:30 this afternoon. Interment was made in Riverside cemetery.

The settees have been placed in Central park, the toiler may rest.

Little Wayne county is fast coming to the front and can no longer be placed on the back woods list, with saw-logs, tan bark, bears and wild cats as the principle products. With her auditor general and chief clerk at the state capital, judges, artists, poets and writers of wide renown, she stands side by side with the banner counties of the state, and last, but not least, comes the prospect of anthracite coal and coal oil within her borders. The prospect of oil near Tanner's Falls is good. For some time past a stock company has been forming, for the development of the same. Mr. William Dimmick, of Honesdale, is completing arrangements to select the location of the well. It is expected that operations will be commenced very soon. When the oil begins to flow a railroad will be extended from Honesdale to the oil region.

THE MARKETS.

Wall Street Review.

New York, June 7.—In today's stock market there were only a few points of activity and strength and the majority of stocks were dull and sluggish, moving irregularly up and down under the varying operations of the room traders. There were some large transactions by the brokers who have been credited with acting for various financial brokers, but they were so mixed on the long and short side as to add to the speculative confusion. The volume of dealings showed a further falling off from yesterday's decreased total. Whatever points of strength were shown in the market seemed to be due to individual causes. The movement in Baltimore and Ohio seemed to be based on reports of the conference between Pennsylvania and Reading officials, presumably to arrange measures for the benefit of Baltimore and Ohio. The tobacco stocks were the subjects of an active speculation on the organization of the consolidated company. The stocks were feverish, receding early on realizing, but rallying on published assertions of a formation of an underwriting syndicate for the new company, which would tie up half of the proposed debenture bonds and keep them off the market. The Continental tobacco stocks showed net gains of about a point; American Tobacco, 2⅝; American Snuff, 8¼, and the others, 2½. There were besides many usually neglected stocks, which advanced from one to five points without any news to explain the movement. Net changes as a rule are not significant, the sluggish fluctuations not tallying prices not far from last night's level, although the extreme range from high to low ran from one to three points in the active stocks. Total sales today, 736,000 shares.

The bond market was quiet and irregular. Total sales par value, $2,685,000.

United States bonds were all unchanged on the last call.

Got Into the Wrong Shop.

With his hair unkempt and a wild look in his eye a man rushed into the seventh floor barber shop at one of the downtown office buildings and sat upright in one of the cushioned chairs. The tonsorial artist adjusted the towel and hair cloth and was preparing to lay hold of a pair of shears when the stranger shouted his instructions at the top of his voice.

"I have had this plagued thing for several days and I have made up my mind to have it over with now and forever. A man is a blankety blank fool to carry it around without having it attended to."

"It is a trifle shaggy around the edges," remarked the barber. "Will I cut it short or simply trim it?"

"Cut nothing; trim nothing," shouted the man in the chair. "Pull it out, you idiot, and do it quick. What do you suppose I am here for?"

It required the proprietor and three barbers to convince the man that he was in a tonsorial parlor and not a dentist's office. He then admitted that he had taken something to relieve the pain, which had caused him to lose his bearings.—Chicago Chronicle.
