"One of the most charming social events of the season was the marriage of Miss Eva A. Plough, daughter of Deputy Collector D. H. Plough of Borough Park, to Mr. Clarence D. Finn, of Dalton, Pa., on Wednesday evening at the residence of the bride's parents,

1346 Fiftieth street, Borough Park. "The house was finely decorated with potted palms and roses. At 9 o'clock the bridal party started to the sweet strains of Mendelssohn's 'Wedding March' Four young ladies, the Misses Hattie and Henrietta Murphy, advanced, each holding part of a large white ribbon forming an aisle through which the bridal party advanced, led by the Rev. F. H. Parsons, of Milford, N. Y., uncle of the bride who officiated. assisted by Rev. William McCagur, o. the Borough Park Presbyterian church, These were followed by Mr. Harry Finn and Mr. Webster Dalton, acted as ushers; next came the Misses Alma and Mary Plough, who acted as bridesmaids, and after them came the bride and groom. "The bride was attired in white silk and carried a large bouquet of white roses; the bridal veil was clasped with a large diamond brooch, which was the of the groom to the bride After the wedding ccremonies the wedding breakfast was served by Caterer gave the happy pair with best wishes a start for Boston, where they will spend a few days before going to their home in Dalton, Pa. There Is a Possibility That Today May Bring Developments in the Nine Hour Strike.

Today's developments in the strike situation are expected to be many and interesting, as it is very likely that a number of the boilermakers and blacksmiths out on strike at the American Locomotive company's shop on Cliff street will return to work, to work. A committee of boilermakers waited upon Treasurer Chalmers, of the Allis-Chalmers company Saturday afterncon, and asked him on what terms they could resume work. They were willing to relinquish some of their original demands, but Chairman Campbell claims that the proposition supmitted to them was not satisfactory. In regard to the removed intention of the blacksmiths to resume work, he said: "There are a few blacksmiths going back, but what can they do without helpers. As for the machinists, they have not yet begun to weaker, and there is not the least danger of their going back to work for some time without their demands being

OPENING OF TWO ARMORIES

FRIDAY'S EVENT COMPARED WITH THE ONE IN 1878.

Prominent Scrantonians Joined with Four Professional Musicians in Making Up an Orchestra to Furnish the Dance Music-Local Paper Made a Big Splurge in Describing the Event, Devoting All of What Would Now Make About Two Col- terial has been used on this occasion.
"At the rear of the hall a stage was erected umns of Reading Matter.

There were eighty-two musicians in he two bands furnishing the $450 worth of music at the opening of the new armory last Friday night, When the old armory on Adams avenue was opened, Jan 31, 1878, twenty-three cars ago, there wasn't a trombone in the city of Scranton, and it was necessary to call upon some of the city's rominent young amateur musicians to fill out an orchestra to play the dance music.

Prof. Robert Bauer, who led the intermission music last Friday night, with his band of forty-two professional musicians, directed the dance music at the opening of the old armory. He and Colonel E. H. Ripple played first violins. The professor' brother, Ben Bauer, now deceased, played second violin. The flute player was Colonel L. A. Watres, now the commander of the regiment, and the clarinet player was Samuel Barker, the well known manufacturer of scales and screens, Harry Thomas and Richard Osborne, who played the bass violin and cornet, respectively.

Bauer boys. William H. Wolf, of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western paymaster's department, played a cornet; Edward Smith, now deceased, for many years with Powell & Co., played t horn; Emory Hill, also deceased. was the alto player, and Joseph Medway, formerly superintendent at the car shops, played the viola.

Not a little of the dance music called for a slide (rombone, Scranton at that time did not rejoice in a trombone player and there was no such thing as a trombone in all the country round. The consequence was that John Longshaw, who was an expert corneter, was put to the task playing the trombone music on a tenor horn. He afterwards got a diding trombone and became one of the first, if not the very first, from-bone player in Scranton. Prof. Bauer says that when the old irmory was opened there was a general feeling that it was several sizes oo big for Scranton and would possibly prove a white elephant on its It was not many years, though, before this fear was of the first armory opening: The event that throws all other events into in eclipse has passed. The armory opening, the most buildaint social affair in the history of this city, transpired last evening. Fetes such as this are rare, anywhere. It is such occa-sions as these that make a reporter feel his littleness. To do justic to this affair is impossible. One is overwhelmed with the vastness of the thing and gives up in despair. To convey to those not present any adequate idea of the pageant seems so utterly ridiculous, especially in a newspaper column or so, hastily thus teachers as late leave of the pight. fung together at a late hour of the night, that one feels like running away and letting it go by default. But—

Those early upon the serne last evening were open entering the building known as termory, struck with amazement. The ight was dark and stormy, the driving snow bleakly whitring into the faces of those gathered there, and the sudden transition ie outer inclemency to the inner resplendency was simply dazzling. The fifth full week of The Tribune's Educational Contest came to an end on Saturday evening. Thus far the vent has run five-sixteenths of its complete schedule. The week just losed was a good one, although not equal to the preceding one in the number of points scored, but that can probably be accounted for by the fact that schools were unusually busy and number of the contestants were get ing ready for examinations. Below a table is presented showing how much work each contestant did every day, Messrs, Lewis and Schwenker beat the others out nearly fivefold That perhaps will help to explain why they are at present first and second on the list. Three in the list of leading contestants did not get a point during the week, viz., W. H. Harris, D. O. Emery and Robert Campbell. The table follows:
