A NOTHER Scranton boy received signal honor on the base ball field Monday, when Roy Scott, of this city, was elected captain of the Wyoming Seminary team for next season. His election is a popular one with all the spectators, as his work has been of an AI stamp. Scott was formerly a prominent member of the Siders' team of this city, but entered the seminary in 1899. He made the outfield on the team his first year and during this season played a splendid third base. Wyoming always put a good team into the field, and therefore it is more than a little distinction to be chosen to pilot its destinies.

THAT ST. LOUIS team is certainly a corner, and now that Patriceus Donovan and his good men and boys have started climbing there is little doubt but that they will continue to keep near the head of the procession. And there isn't any earthly reason why the team shouldn't. It is composed of a bunch of the heaviest sluggers in the country, who are, in addition, a coterie of fast fielders and excellent base runners. Take that outfield, for instance. Jesse Burkett, Scranton's old pitcher, Emmett Hehrick and Pat Donovan, Hehrick leads the league up to date with 286, and it hasn't been by fancy bunting, many bases on balls or being hit by the pitcher he has earned that excellent average. He has been leading the ball out with might and vigor every game, and has authorized a cluster of extra base shots which put him at the head of the long distance batmen of the league, which is no small matter, when one reflects that Edward DeLoach is still very much alive and Honts Wagner and his little willow are yet with Pittsburg.

As an instance of the way that team hits, look at Sunday's game with Brooklyn, when Padden, Burkett and Hehrick each got four hits, the dozen including three doubles and a triple. The team isn't particularly weak in the box, either, and National league base ball writers are beginning to count in the Westerners as strong possibilities for the pennant.

Bill Coughlin, of this city, continues his fine work out in the Washington, and during the last twenty-four games has batted over .340. A large number of extra base smashes are included in his collection of statistics.

Joe Dolan, who played so wretchedly for the Philadelphia National League at second base in doing good work for the Athletics at short field, and is also occasionally getting in a timely drive that means a few runs.

Harper, of St. Louis, appears to be one of the finds of the season. He is winning games with a frequency which is astounding, and his work is scoring a big hit with the St. Louis fans.

Phyle, who was one of the aggregation of players that Chicago traded to New York for Jack Doyle, worked hard Sunday to make the Windy Cityites realize what a good thing they had lost when they let him depart. In fourteen innings he only allowed four of the Chicagoans to make the circuit, but at that he outpitched win, as the Giants' fielded poorly and batted weakly, and could only score four themselves.

What's become of Milligan? The good looking youngster who pitched for Scranton last season, started this year with Mack's Athletics, and was used as an emergency twirler in a number of instances, after which he disappeared from the popular view.

Christy Matthewson's phenomenal winning streak has been broken, and critics all along the line are beginning to indulge in vicious little personalities about "Mauser Ball Mat," as a gushing New York scribe dubbed the Factoryville boy. "Matthewson, pitcher and chronicler of base ball," is the gently sarcastic manner in which the New York Sun man recognizes the pitcher's comments on each game, which appear in one of the Sun's daily contemporaries, and Charles Dryden, of the North American, ferociously sneers at articles "about the kind of soup to eat before pitching a shut-out game." Matthewson's recent breakdown was only to be expected, after the terrific pitching with which he had to strain himself to win his eight straight. When a team with disheartening frequency makes one, two or three runs a game behind a young pitcher it is only natural to suppose that he will have to pitch for all that's in him to make any sort of a showing. It won't be long before Matthewson will have struck his pace again.

Hank Plank, the south-paw from Gettysburg college, who is twirling for the Athletics, is doing magnificent work, and Philadelphia base ball writers are claiming in him the find of the year. Winters, another Gettysburg collegian, is the latest student player to be added to the classic roster of the Bostons.

Lajoie continues to play his great fielding game for the Athletics, and while not hitting so heavily as at the beginning of the season, still manages to cause a big lump to rise in the throats of American league twirlers when he looms up at the plate.

Jack Dunn, of this city, hasn't been pitching particularly well for Baltimore this season, but has demonstrated his value as a utility man by his emergency work at short field. In Monday's game he took nine out of ten chances and made a three-base hit in addition.

Bicycling.

SOMETHING over a year ago the commissioners of Beaver county, Pennsylvania, at the earnest solicitation of local cyclists, consented to utilize the services of the tramp contingent in the county prison, to the end of bettering the condition of the county highways. It was at a season of the year when tramps were numerous, and in response to the necessary tip these gentry were gathered in from all highways and byways and given good liberal terms of service in the county jail. Here they were set to work, breaking stone, and after a sufficient amount of stone had been accumulated they were set to work on an experimental bit of roadway extending from the borough line of Freedom to the borough line of Baden. The tramps did not relish the work, but they were kept at it indefatigably, with the result that within six months' time Pennsylvania boasted one of the smoothest, firmest and best constructed macadam roadways in the country for a limited distance. Pittsburg riders know of and enjoy it, and have been hoping that the example of the Beaver county authorities would be emulated by those of other and adjoining counties. For some reason, however, the good results of the experiment have never been followed up, and tramps have been suffered to live in idleness at the expense of Pennsylvania and other states. Were the tramp element that fills our country jails in New York and New Jersey each fall put to work upon county roads, the community would receive some substantial return for the money expended in their maintenance, and the owners of bicycles, automobiles and horses to say nothing of the farmers, would profit materially.

Slowly but surely the bicycle is finding favor with military authorities in this and other countries, as a safe, effective and economical vehicle, possessed of special qualifications that the horse is lacking in. In the Russian, German, English and Austrian armies remarkable progress has been made in perfecting the bicycle corps. General Miles, a pronounced believer in the wheel for military purposes, has doubtless that his comparatively limited powers would permit him to do in experimenting to this end. It has remained for Emperor William, however, an auto-craze in his domains, to give the freest rein to his aides in experimenting with the bicycle, and as a result some of the accomplishments recorded by the bicycle corps of the German army are little short of marvelous. Their drills are more nearly perfect than is possible where men have not to overcome the natural fragility of mettlesome horses and maintain at the same time their own composure and alertness for the word of command. In scouting, foraging, messenger and spy service the wheel has already demonstrated its incontestable degree of utility on German soil.

A German military officer, in speaking of the wheel in the army, said recently:

"The military cyclist is bound to become a most important factor in military tactics and manœuvres of the future for the following reasons:

"First—His speed possibilities are greater. In nine cases out of ten, over any class of country, a cyclist will always outpace a horse.

"Second—He offers a much smaller target for the pursuing shots, and practically the only way to disable the cyclist is to bring him down himself.

"Third—He can hide much more easily than a cavalryman.

"Fourth—The cyclist has a natural knowledge of roads, and can pick up the 'lay' of a country by trained instinct.

"We love the horse, but we know the bicycle would be superior for the purposes he serves in war. He is punctured as frequently as any pneumatic tire. He needs oats. He is slow and bothersome. He is subject to all sorts of illnesses. And some day he will give way to the bicycle."

Perhaps the most notable declaration in favor of the wheel by a clergyman was made in Ohio when the Federation of Clerical Cycle clubs was organized. Some seventy ministers, members of the Cincinnati branch of the Federation, started a wheel from the Queen City to the semi-annual meeting at Hamilton, Dayton, Franklin, Middletown and other cities sent delegations almost as large. The conference which followed the banquet was a most unique one, the speakers and topics being as follows:

"Sins of Scouring," Rev. M. L. Tresler, Shelbyville, Ind.; "Whither We Are Wheeling," Rev. W. A. Robinson, Cincinnati; "Piety and Perspiration," Rev. D. S. Sappan, president of Miami university; "Contrary Minds," Rev. E. M. McFadden, Hamilton; "Good Roads," Rev. E. W. Work, Dayton, O.; "Well Tired," Rev. T. H. Crane, Cincinnati.

Bowling.

THE BOWLING season is over, but local enthusiasts are slow to overcome the fascination which the long alleys and tempting looking pins hold for the ten-pin roller, and the Scranton alleys continue doing a big business. The match games are about all over with, as the really good, seasoned player is willing to wait until the proper weather to try his luck.

"This fall promises to open an eventful bowling season in the city, and there is no doubt that teams will be as numerous as the men who discovered Christy Matthewson. The Green Ridge Wheelmen will easily be able to put into the field two teams, and it is likely that all the alleys represented in the league will be championed by at least two teams. Another tournament, with a fine trophy to play for and individual prizes to stir up members of the teams to play for all that is in them, is bound to prove a success, as was attested by the enthusiasm which marked the first of the past season's tournaments.

Jack Taylor last week established the record of the Green Ridge Wheelmen's alleys by bowling 245, which is one pin higher than the previous premier score in the league will be championed by at least two teams. Another tournament, with a fine trophy to play for and individual prizes to stir up members of the teams to play for all that is in them, is bound to prove a success, as was attested by the enthusiasm which marked the first of the past season's tournaments.
