PRUEMER'S DISCOVERY.

His Malto-Ment Extract Is Attracting a Great Deal of Attention in the Medical World.

H. Pruemers, of the Central Pennsylvania Brewing company, is at the head of the Malto-Ment Extract company, and is now putting on the market a malto-ment extract which is intended to take the place of beef extract, as a diet for the sick and convalescent. Malt is the raw material used, and it is treated with chemicals in a manner which gives it the flavor of beef extract. Its maker claims that it contains far more albumen than the latter, however, and is therefore far more nutritious and better adapted for its purpose.

Mr. Pruemers perfected the extract in May, 1900, but is only now putting it on the market, having already recruited the services in its behalf of a number of local physicians, who vouch highly for its efficacy. His manufacturing plant is in the annex to the brewery plant on Eighth street. It consists of a number of the most modern appliances and can turn out daily about seventy-five dozen of the two-ounce jars in which the extract is put up.

The process of manufacture consists of first treating the raw material with the chemical solution, which entirely changes the taste of the malt, and then boiling it, following which the compound is cleaned through a filter. The next step is to put it in the annex to the plant, exhausting the air and boiling it at the low mark of about 124 degrees, instead of 210 degrees, the boiling point. In this manner the albumen does not coagulate, the great advantage of which process is the saving of the albumen, and thus added nutriment. It is then run into a second pan, where it is allowed to remain for some time and thicken. The entire period of manufacture covers about four days.

There is not a bit of animal matter used in the extract, and Mr. Pruemers feels certain that his long period of study and thought has been rewarded by a revolutionizing element among remedies of this sort.

BADGES FOR THE MARKSMEN

PRESENTED WITH CEREMONY IN THE NEW ARMOY.

Members of the First and Third Battalions Received the Honors Last Night That They Won at the Rifle Range - Presentation Speeches Made by Judges H. M. Edwards and John P. Kelly - Address Delivered by Colonel C. Bow Dougherty, of the Ninth Regiment.

There were a large number of spectators present at the new armory last night to witness the presentation of marksmen's badges to the members of the First and Third battalions of the Thirteenth regiment and the review of the companies by Colonel C. Bow Dougherty, of the Ninth Regiment, of Wilkes-Barre, acting commander of the Third brigade in the absence of General J. P. S. Goblin.

The review did not take place, however, owing to the absence of the regimental band, but the presentation of badges was held, and the addresses made by Judges H. M. Edwards and John P. Kelly and Colonel Dougherty proved most interesting features of the night.

At 8.30 o'clock all eight of the local companies were in the drill room, drawn up in battalions on the north-east side of the building, facing a box near the Gibson street entrance, in which were seated Colonel H. M. Boies, Colonel C. Bow Dougherty, Hon. H. M. Edwards, Hon. John P. Kelly, Major W. S. Millar, assistant adjutant general for the Third brigade, and several members of Colonel Dougherty's staff, who came up from Wilkes-Barre with him. Colonel L. A. Watres later joined them.

MANY SPECTATORS. The westerly balcony was filled with spectators, a large number were also in the other balcony, and every box was filled with persons interested in the guard. After a march around the interior of the great room, the two battalions were drawn up by companies in front of the stand, Lieutenant Colonel F. W. Stillwell at the head of the Second and Major Frank Robling standing in front of the Third.

Colonel H. M. Boies opened the exercises by briefly commenting upon the immensity and general completeness of the armory, and expressing his hopes that the regiment would be as distinguished in the occupancy of it as it was in the old one. He then introduced Judge John P. Kelly, who was to present the Stillwell silver trophy to the Third battalion.

With customary diffidence his honor disclaimed all knowledge of things military. "But," said he, "I dare say I have as much admiration for the skill with which the soldier can employ his weapons as the most ardent enthusiast present. No man belonging to a military organization can lay claim to proficiency, unless possessed of a reasonable amount of skill in the use of the instrument of offense and defense. In this particular the soldiers of the Thirteenth regiment have been always recognized as highly able. This is a land of liberty, respect for law and order and civil administration of justice, not a country with a great standing army, but yet always able to assemble an army of trained soldiers to maintain its honor, whenever the time requires, as was so ably demonstrated in the war with Spain." Continuing, he said:

"I have now the honor to present to the Third battalion the Stillwell trophy. This is a cup to be presented to that battalion of the Thirteenth regiment which should be the best in the Thirteenth during the rifle and pistol seasons of 1900, 1901 and 1902, under the following conditions: Each battalion to enter a team of six men and to shoot with the regulation Colts double-action twenty-five, thirty-five, forty-five yards, at rapid and slow fire. The rapid fire consists of five shots at each of these ranges and to be fired in ten seconds on each range. The slow fire consists of five shots at each of these ranges, without regard to time.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Minus Moses Charged with Attempting to Assault a Little Girl.

Minus Moses, the half-witted fellow laborer whose name is notorious, that he is chief of the fire department, was arrested yesterday at the instance of Superintendent of Police Robling, on the charge of attempting to criminally assault a little five-year-old girl named Annie Quint, residing on Raymond street.

A hearing in the case was held before Magistrate Howe in the afternoon. The principal witness for the prosecution was Alice Loveland, of Raymond street, who testified to having seen Moses take the little girl into his "hush" or moult cover, lying near the Dickson works, on Thursday afternoon, and to having seen him later with his person exposed.

points 1.04 over the First battalion, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Stillwell.

Judge Kelly concluded by congratulating the regiment upon its fine new armory and then amid dynamic applause handed the silver trophy to Major Robling.

COL. DOUGHERTY'S TALK.

Colonel Dougherty was the next speaker. He also congratulated the Thirteenth upon acquiring such a magnificent home, and declared that Scranton's lead in erecting such a building bids fair to help every military organization in the state. He referred briefly to the starting of rifle practice in this state, back in the '70s, it being inaugurated by the City Guard, then under Colonel Boies. He concluded by expressing his fervent hope that it will be only a short time before the regiment will take its position at the head of the National Guard of the state, where it stands so long.

Judge H. M. Edwards began his address by saying: "I congratulate not only the regiment, the persons present and the city of Scranton, but the entire state on this magnificent building, and my only wish could only reach to the capitol of the state if I would say to Governor Stone that it was his duty to be here at the opening of the armory. "It was his duty because it is not for the benefit of this community alone but for the entire state, and the chief executive of the commonwealth and the head of the National Guard of this state is and was in duty bound to show every respect for the grand enterprise which has produced such a building as this. The judges ought to be here, and every man of honor, and I believe in redressing wrong and securing right in American government and the American flag ought to be here tonight.

"The fate of battles depends upon the man behind the gun, and he is not merely because he is behind it, but because he knows how to use it. In the Thirteenth ample evidence has been given of your ability in this line. Out of 674 members of the regiment all have earned as marksmen, and forty as sharpshooters."

TROPHIES PRESENTED. Each company then filed past the stand, and its captain was handed the well-earned trophies. They passed by in the following order: Company B, Captain John Kambeck; Company K, Captain Milton O'Connell; Company C, Captain Joseph H. Heneged; Company D, Captain Foot; Company L, Captain W. A. Raub; Company F, Captain George P. Merriman; Company A, Captain George Russ; Company H, Captain Huff. The field and staff were next awarded their regiments, and this concluded the exercises.

Company G, of Montrose, had the highest number of sharpshooters, having qualified eight men as such. Company F comes second with six to their credit. The highest rifle scores made during the season of 1900 were made by Captain Fremont Stokes, of Company F, Captain and Past Inspector of Rifle Practice Dr. George C. Merriman, now captain of Company F, and Captain J. C. Harrington, of Company G, who made the high score of 73 out of a possible 75. The second highest rifle score of the season was made by Lieutenant Colonel Frederick W. Stillwell, his score being 72 out of a possible 75.

The highest average of pistol shooting throughout these matches for both slow and rapid fire was made by First Lieutenant Henshaw, of Company E. His score was 67 out of a possible 70, or 95.7 per cent. Captain Fremont Stokes, second, with a score of 68, out of a possible 75, or 90.6 per cent. Major Frank Robling, Jr., fourth, with a score of 61, out of 75, or 81.33 per cent.

The highest qualifying scores with the pistol for the year were made by Lieutenant Colonel Stillwell and Major Frank Robling, each having a score of 68, out of a possible 75. These scores were made at rapid fire at 25, 50 and 75 yards. Five shots were fired at each of the three distances. Twenty-two officers qualified as expert pistol shots for the year, and fourteen as marksmen with the pistol.

THE HIGHEST AVERAGE OF PISTOL SHOOTING THROUGHOUT THESE MATCHES FOR BOTH SLOW AND RAPID FIRE WAS MADE BY FIRST LIEUTENANT HENSHAW, OF COMPANY E. HIS SCORE WAS 67 OUT OF A POSSIBLE 70, OR 95.7 PER CENT. CAPTAIN FREMONT STOKES, SECOND, WITH A SCORE OF 68, OUT OF A POSSIBLE 75, OR 90.6 PER CENT. MAJOR FRANK ROBLING, JR., FOURTH, WITH A SCORE OF 61, OUT OF 75, OR 81.33 PER CENT.
