PITTSTON.

Pittston, July 4.-Independence Day passed off very quietly here, there being no formal celebration of the day, aside from the usual liberal use of fireworks and crackers. St. Mary's church picule drew a large crowd to Everhart's island and many hled themselves to nearby lakes and mountain resorts, leaving the city deserted to a certain extent. At the West Pittston fair grounds the Apple Blos-

Weak, nervous, the digestion out of order-that is what ails a host of people. It comes about in this way: First from overwork or other causes, the nerves are burdened beyond endurance, nerve waste is not replaced, nerve force is weakened, then the stomach loses its nerve-controlling power and Indigestion follows, with failing strength. When first Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills came to Scranton people could hardly be convinced that this great medicine would remove these troubles. ## WILL WAIT FOR FORTUNE

Wedded Despite Provisions of Her Father's Will.

By Exclusive Wire from The Associated Press. New Brunswick, N. J., July 4.-The fact that her fortune is tied up in trust until she shall have reached forty years, is not worrying Mrs. Warren Hardenbergh, who became a bride last night, when she was married to Mr Hardenbergh, the ceremony being performed at her home by Rev. M. H. Hutton. The announcement today of the wedding caused no end of surprise among her many friends.

Until last night the bride was Miss Sarah Langdon, the only daughter of the late James P. Langdon, who, up to the time of his death last March, was president of the New Brunswick Rubber company. He was greatly opposed to the attentions of young Harden-bergh. Mr. Langdon changed his will just before his death so that half of his fortune, which went to his daugh ter, should not be paid to her until she was forty years of age. In the meantime it will be held in trust. Young Hardenbergh was married sevee that portrait and signature of A. eral years ago to Miss Lena Deinzer, Chase M. D., are on every package, who only lived a short time.

MINISTER WU ORATOR AT PHILADELPHIA

eroad land does not associate the celebration of his veins does not look upon the Fourth as the mest glorious day of the year from the fact that he can include in firing off all kinds of fire crackers to his heart's content? Judging from the sounds I hear and the gleeful air I see about every place today, if I could divest myself of all consulousness of time and place, I should, with-out much difficulty, imagine myself to be in my own native land in the New Year's season. Thus, it seems, this is not the first time you have called upon China to assist you in the celebration of

There Should Be a Bond of Sympathy According to popular belief, China is as far removed from the United States as the east i from the west, not morely in geographical post tion, but in other respects also. The one is old; the other is modern. Here feverish activity shows itself everywhere; there settled repose seems to pervade the very air. It might be sup-posed that there could be no bond of sympathy between the two countries-no common point of a position to speak with authority combine to confirm this impression. But there is no greater mistake. As the canons of Confucius and Mencius as laid down in the Chinese classics constitute practically the Magna Charta of the Chinese empire, let me quote the words of Mencius that have a bearing upon this question. "The people," says the sage, "are the most important element is a nation; the spirits of the land and grain (that is, the country) are the next: the sovereign is the lightest. Therefore, to gain the peasantry (that is, the people.) is the way to become emperor." If this is not government "deriving its just powers from the consent of the governed." do not know what is. It may be urged that with the present political creeds of the Chinese people, and that the opinion of the great sage on a political question has only an academic interest. Such, however, is not the case. Every Chinese school boy not only knows the above quoted passages by heart, but is thoroughly im-bued with its spirit. As soon as he begins to study the art of composition, the themes he has to write upon may he taken from those very words. When he is old enough to compete at the public examinations for efficial honors, he may be required to dilate upon the various phases of the great principle thus raunciated, and run it out to its legitimate consequences. Under the circumstances, any unauthorized departure from the obvious interpretation of the passage is looked upon as heretical, and any candidate who distorts the plain meaning of the words into something directly opposite may as well stay at home as far as his prospect of success is con-cerned. The truth is that the government of China and the government of the United States rest upon the same foundation—that the people are sovereign. This principle is aptly expressed by an ancient monarch of China in a manifesto knewn as "The Great Declaration." He says; "Heaven sees according as my people see; heaver bears according as my people hear." The differ ence between the governments of the two coun-tries lies rather in the manner in which the principle is carried out. You believe in the choice of public officers through the ballot box we believe in the choice of public officers through the examination hall. In this country all men are equal at the polls. The chief magistrate of the nation as well as the lowliest day laborer has no more than one vote. The most learned scholar of the country as well as the most ignorant soul who cannot even write his own name has no more than one vote. The man who has grown gray in the service of the country as well as the man who has just taken out his naturalization papers has no more than one vote. Every vote i as every other. Those who get the most votes are entitled to represent the people. Thus the ### governors are recruited from the governed.

Where Merit Wins. In China, we endeavor to attain the same end a different road. The competitive examinations are open to all. At the examination all stand on the same ground and have an equal chance of success. The son of a minister of state is accorded no more consideration than the son of the humblest tiller of the soil. Indeed, poor, hard-working student is more apt to pass examinations successfully than the luxuryloving scien of an illustrious house. In this way a certain proportion of the ruling class of the land is drafted at stated intervals directly on the people. In passing I am bound to say that the educational system in vogue in China is not suited to the present requirements and should be modified, but this does not affect the soundness of the principle upon which the competitive examination is based. It will be seen that the government of China is, in its essential features, a "government of the people, by the people and for the people," as well as that of the United States. Such a government, as Lincoln observes, "shall not perish from the earth." China is a living witness to the truth of these

How many nations have survived the centuries since China emerged as a compact nation from the nebulous past? Only the pyramids now at test the magnificence of ancient Egypt. Ninevah and Babylon now lie buried beneath a widstretch of sand and archaeologists are still disputing about their sites. The great nations of present day are but creations of yesterday. China is the only surviving representative of an age that is past, having witnessed the rise and fall of many a mighty race in many a land. The United States may be considered young with its one hundred and twenty-five years in comparison with the long duration of China. But as long as Americana remain true to the principles of their nation's founders, as long as the people con-trol the government, there is no fear that this great republic will not continue to grow stronge

This is a day naturally set apart for patriotic sentiments. Your invitation to me shows that your partiotism is not of that kind which cannot e anything good in the people of other lands, id the motto of which is: "Our Country, Be motto of which is: She Right or Wrong." This is only national sel fishness, which often goes by the name of patriotism. It is a relic of bygone days, when there was comparatively little intercourse between the people of one country and the people of another except that of a hostile nature, and when a man could be free to enjoy life and liberty only in the and of his birth. All this is now completely changed. Happily, we live in a more culighted and humane age. Railroads, telegraphs and news-papers contribute directly to knit the world closer and closer every day. Consequently, patriotism has lost much of its former meaning. We have noble examples of this broader and higher patriotism in Lord Chatham, whose ringing denuncia-tions of the American war are still able to make the car tingle and the blood boil, and in Gladbarbarities in every form and whose sympathies went out to the weak and oppressed, irrespective of race or religion. Let pairiotism in its proper sense be synonymous with humanity, justice, fruth, law and order. Let all clannish or selfist feelings be banished from the hearts of civilized

Effects of Commerce.

Commerce has recently brought the people ne earth into closer relations than ever Events which take place even in far-off lands car in longer be viewed with indifference. This true has lately been brought forcibly home to to American manufacturer. It is well known that North China is a large consumer of American cotton goods. The recent disturbances in that the cotton industry of the southern states that many cotton producers are threatened with serious loss, if not with ruin. The welfare of one nation is thus curiously linked with the welfare of an Territorial lines are not so distinctly drawn as they were years ago. National interest, have gradually given way to the world's interests. The day is not far, distant when love of country will be secondary to humanity as a virtue.

This nation, it seems to me, has not sprung into existence without a manifest destiny. There must be some noble ends for which the inde-pence of the United States was established. It was to demonstrate to the world what great good mankind a free and independent people can do to establish a "government of the people, by the people and for the people"; to preserve law and order; to treat all people alike with fairness and justice; to do away with selfish and clannish feelings; to make American patriotism synonymous with fair play, with love of mankind, with | men to obey the law.

MARRIED TO BOGUS COUNT. Girl in New York Victim of a Dar-

ing Adventurer. By Exclusive Wire from The Associated Press. Paris, July 4.-Count Robert de Pomereu, deputy of the Department of Scine Inferieure and mayor of Heron, near Rouen, has received a decree from a French court declaring he was never married to a woman named Lizzie Barrier.

At the beginning of this year Count de Pomereu received a letter from Lizzie Barrier, in which the writer claimed conjugal rights and reproached him with abandoning his wife and their baby. Count de Pomereu investigated the matter and found that Lizzie Barrier had been induced to marry, in New York, January 28, 1892, an venturer who used the name of Count Robert de Pomereu. When Lizzie Barrier was confronted with the real Count de Pomereu, she admitted he was not her husband.

Upon the day of the marriage in New York of the Barrier woman and the imposter, the real Count de Pomereu was at Heron, in Normandy where, in his capacity of mayor, he read the marriage ceremony over two of his villagers.

Lizzie Barrier possesses authentic marriage documents of her marriage with the adventurer who posed as the French count, but nothing is known of her real husband's present whereabouts.

ANIMALS' MISGUIDED FRIEND New York Park Commissioners Thinks They Like Pictures.

Exclusive Wire from The Associated Press. New York, July 4.-Park Commissioner Clausen is thinking up ways to make life pleasanter for the animals in the menagerie. He has planned to have appropriate landscapes painted on the walls of their cages; a jungle for the lions; forest for the monkeys, etc.

It is the observation of men who know a good deal about animals that they are utterly incapable of understanding anything pictorial. A cat or a dog, or a horse, or a lion, or a tiger, does not, apparently, see any thing in a picture of an animal like itself or something familiar to it when placed before its eyes. It is simply so much paper or pasteboard and nothing more. Animals depend upon smell for identifying things. Mr. Clausen has not heard of this.

DISARMING THE CUCUMBER.

How to Fix the Vegetable So It Won't Work Havoc. From the New York Sun.

Buy a medium-sized cucumber to serve raw. It should be a good green, and firm to the touch. Remove thinly skins from both ends and cut off a thick paring. This is important be cause the cucumber contains a bitter principle and much of it lies near the skin and the stem end. Not a trace of green should be seen when the paring is finished. The cucumber should then be cut into slices, wafer thin and put into sait and water. Let not the unwary cook be led to think that this will make them brittle and crisp, however. They will be as flabby as elery a week old-but digestible.

Since most people prefer their cucumbers crisp or not at all, this method finds little favor except among invalids and incapables. But cold water without the salt answers almost the same purpose and the cucumbers come out after their soaking as fresh and ten der as if they had just been picked from the vines. Drained and covered with crushed ice and served they make a disn fit for a king.
