LACKAWANNA LAUNDRY

THIS AND THAT.

Of Walter Burke, of Archbold, who is on the United States grand jury, the Archbold Citizen contains the following:

"Intelligence has revealed here of a daring deed Burke did a few months ago while his vessel was at Chesapeake Bay. One night the American consul came aboard of the Nashville with dispatches for the commander-in-chief, who was at that time in the bay. Burke had orders for the vessel to get under way at once to carry these dispatches. Just as the vessel started a light in the steam pipe gave out and the vessel came to anchor. The fire was blown down from the main boiler and the chief engineer reported to the captain that everything was as hot in the fire room that he could not touch the joint for at least twelve hours.

"The captain did not wish to be delayed so long and he had no other way by which to send the dispatches. Then Mr. Burke and two others volunteered to try to fix the joint at once. They were permitted to make the attempt. They succeeded, and the ship was under way in three hours. The captain was so delighted with the work of the volunteers that he called all hands to muster and commended the three men before the whole ship's company. He also told the men that he would have a note of their good work written in ink on the records of the three men and it so appears in the naval department at Washington.

"The captain of the Nashville has sent to Washington an application for Mr. Burke's appointment as chief of the water department. It is approved he will be rated as water tender, the most important position in the department, in which Burke is serving."

Sergeant Richard Edwards yesterday celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his appointment on the police force. The big blue coat officer was made extremely happy by the presence of his wife and the second member of the family, Ben Thomas, who has five service stars on his coat sleeve was the first man appointed to guard the city's peace.

H. W. Cross, whose appointment as assistant passenger agent of the Erie railroad was announced in yesterday's Tribune, will leave Scranton this evening for New York. He will be accompanied by a representative of the division passenger agents of the Erie. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Cross.

Remains have arrived.

FUNERAL OF MRS. DIMMICK WILL TAKE PLACE TODAY.

The ashes of the late Mrs. Joan du Pont Dimmick, who died in Manchester, Eng., June 19, and was cremated, arrived here over the Lackawanna road at 11:35 o'clock last night.

They will be committed to the family vault in Forest Hill cemetery at 8:30 o'clock this morning. The committal service will be read by Rev. Mr. Bateman.

The ashes are contained in an hermetically sealed case, made of quartered oak, shaped in miniature like the more common style of sarcophagi, eighteen and a half inches long, a foot wide and a foot high. Silver-plated steel bolts hold on the lid and on top of the casket is a silver plate bearing the inscription: "Joan du Pont Dimmick. Born 15th March, 1854. Died 19th June, 1901."

The fact that the White Star Steamship company delivered the casket to an express company having no Sunday service in Scranton, accounts for the delay. The relative took the casket from this company and gave it in charge of the United States Express company, which hastened it through to its destination.

THAT ROCKY GLEN TRACT

Mr. Fuller Brings Out Some of Its More or Less Interesting History at Yesterday's Hearing.

If it wasn't that that very sarcastic Mr. Fuller, of the Luzerne bar, was a stranger within our gates, some one might be tempted to rise up and say he was a bold, unfeeling person.

Yesterday, in the hearing in the Rocky Glen injunction case, before Judge Kelly, he had the effrontery to attempt to bring out by documentary and parole testimony that Arthur Frothingham was not acting in good faith when he projected a reservoir across the right of way of the defendant company.

Why in the world Mr. Frothingham could want to block a railroad, as Mr. Fuller would slyly intimate, is not disclosed, but he that is many, Mr. Fuller tried to make it appear to Judge Kelly that it was to block the railroad, rather than to construct a really-truly water plant, that the reservoir was projected.

He showed that, early last year, George A. Lee, one of the promoters of the new road, had dealings with Mr. Frothingham regarding the securing of a right of way through the tract in question; that on May 24, of last year, Miss Annette Reynolds, in whose name the property was held, made and acknowledged a deed to the Glen Ridge Cemetery association for this aforesaid tract of land; that no one could be induced to do any burying there, and the cemetery scheme was dropped, and that after the route of the railroad was laid out the reservoir was dedicated so that the breast of the dam was twelve feet below the line of the railroad.

The unnie Mr. Fuller further made it appear that Mr. Frothingham knew, as is commonly known, that a railway can not exercise a right of eminent domain against a water company's right of eminent domain, and can not condemn property used as a burial ground or place of worship.

"Now Mr. Frothingham," drawled out the inconsiderate Mr. Fuller, "you have, as we see, incorporated yourself as a cemetery association and a water company—please tell us when you propose to have yourself incorporated as a place of worship."

Prior to Mr. Frothingham's examination the defendants put on the stand E. A. Hoffman, a Wilkes-Barre civil engineer, who told that while he was surveying for the new road early last year he encountered Mr. Frothingham and Miss Reynolds on the tract now in dispute. Hoffman declared that he could not run a line through there as it was a cemetery. Hoffman replied, so he says, that the law against seizing a cemetery for railroad purposes was no operative until there had been some burials made. To this, came the rejoinder of Mr. Hoffman declaring that "just as soon as you people make a move with your railroad we'll have some stiffs in there, all right."

Later Mr. Frothingham took the stand and denied having made this above-quoted statement, and Miss Reynolds averred that she did not remember any such conversation.

Attorney E. W. Thayer, who drew up the deed for the transfer of the plot to the cemetery association was called to the stand and produced the deed.

He could not say that it had ever been delivered. The plaintiffs contended that it had not been delivered and that the cemetery project was dropped before the association had a single meeting, because it was thought best to cut up the tract into building lots.

George A. Lee, Major T. F. Penman and Civil Engineer Rittenhouse were examined at length regarding the operation of the road. They told of its substantial construction and that from 12 o'clock midnight until 6 in the morning, it was proposed to run freight on it with big steam locomotives furnishing the power.

At the opening of the hearing, yesterday, another interruption came to give the plaintiffs a chance to show that the defendants were still contemptuously disobeying the injunction restraining them from going on the disputed land. The testimony to prove this disclosed that a gun-rope holding a derrick located on an adjoining tract was recently tied to a tree that the plaintiffs claim is on their land. The defendants will make answer this morning.

CAPTURE OF WINANS HULL

HE WAS ARRESTED YESTERDAY AT MAPLE LAKE.

Alleged Slayer of Edwin Schoonover Has Been Visiting at Home of Henry Rodney Since Friday, June 28.—He Denies the Murder of Schoonover, but Admits Having Been in His Company Wednesday, June 26.—Sheriff Armstrong Will Take Him to Wayne County.

Winans Hull, of Carbondale, was arrested yesterday noon at Maple Lake, near Moscow, by Captain of Police John Davis, on suspicion of having murdered Edwin Schoonover, of Lackawanna avenue, whose decomposed remains were found at Lake Lodore last Wednesday.

Hull admits being in Schoonover's company, Wednesday, June 26, the day the dead man was known to be at Lake Lodore, but denies having slain or robbed him. He takes his arrest very unconcernedly, and although the circumstantial evidence against him is of the most convincing nature, he smokes cigarettes in his prison cell, and smiles contemptuously at the charges against him.

The coat found on him was stained with blood, but there were no other apparent indications of guilt. He was arrested at the home of Henry Rodney, the husband of a cousin of Hull, Rodney is a farmer at Maple Lake, which is about four miles from Moscow, and it is at his home that the suspect has been since Friday, June 28, his hosts not knowing that the police all over the state were looking for their guest.

WORD FROM MOSCOW.

A telephone message was received from a Moscow resident by Superintendent of Police Frank Robling yesterday morning, in which the information was conveyed that a man answering the description of Hull, who had, moreover, been seen by the captain, was at Rodney's home. The description given did not at all tally with the one of Hull which Superintendent Robling possessed. The stranger was described as fully six feet in height, whereas Hull is known to be only of medium size. Captain Davis, who is acting detective at present, by instructions of the chief, left the city shortly after 10 o'clock on the quest and, on arriving at Moscow, drove over to the Rodney farm, where he found Hull.

Walking up to the young man, the captain quietly called him, and he turned around, remarking, "Yes, Hull's name," the police officer laid his hand firmly on his shoulder, and said: "You are my prisoner. You are wanted for the murder of Edwin Schoonover."

The Rodney family were greatly worried over the arrest, having entertained not the least suspicion that Hull's hand had been caused by any sinister motive. He had arrived at the home, Friday, June 25, recently his cousin, Mrs. Rodney, for the first time since she was turned around, remarking, "Yes, Hull's name," the police officer laid his hand firmly on his shoulder, and said: "You are my prisoner. You are wanted for the murder of Edwin Schoonover."

HULL BROUGHT HERE.

Hull was driven over to the station and brought to the city by the captain on a Lackawanna pusher, reaching here shortly after 4 o'clock, and being met at the station by Captain Jones and Thomas Jones and Sloat. Hull was taken before Magistrate Millar, who remanded him to the custody of the Wayne county officials. He was then removed to the central station, where he was examined by Superintendent Robling, Sheriff Armstrong, of Wayne county, arrived in the city during the afternoon and will leave the city with Hull this morning.

Hull admitted being in company with a man, of whose name he claimed to be ignorant, but whose description he swore to that of Schoonover, on Wednesday, June 26, at the lake. He also acknowledged taking him to his cousin's farm for a meal, but claimed to have left him there during the afternoon, and saw nothing more of him. He admitted having had a knife in his possession that day, but said he gave it to his brother.

After riding to Carbondale on a load of hay and incidentally quarrelling with the men on the wagon, he slept at the home in Carbondale on Wednesday night. The next morning he rose early, and was washed to some chores, among them the washing of a buggy, and went to Jersey by street car. From there he rode to this city on his bicycle and the same day rode from here to Simerson's, and stayed at the latter place Thursday night, sleeping at the hotel.

WENT TO HIS COUSIN'S.

On the following morning he went to his cousin's and remained there since. He scoffs at all intimations as to his guilt, and defiantly remarked to Superintendent Robling: "If I killed the man, why should I hang around here, instead of getting as far away as possible?"

A careful search of his person failed to reveal any money or weapon, although Schoonover had over $50 with him, besides a valuable watch and chain, when he left home. Hull was roughly dressed, and his light serge coat he wore was stained with dark, rusty-looking patches of blood on each cuff.

"What are these?" asked Superintendent Robling, sharply, as his eye lit upon them.

"Yellow mud," answered Hull promptly. "I had a tumble from my wheel and that's how I got them."

The stains had soaked through the cuffs, however, leaving dark blotches on the lining, and it was very apparent that that something of a far different nature than mud caused them. The left cuff is much more splashed and bespattered than the right one, and from the condition of each it could be seen that efforts had been industriously made to remove the tell-tale spots.

The wheel in Hull's possession was at first thought to be one stolen from A. R. Jones, of the Carbondale Review, who left it in front of the Globe store, Saturday, June 25 and it will be brought to the city by Captain Davis. However, as Hull is known to have been at Maple Lake on that date, he is removed from complicity in that theft.

HULL MEASURED.

Last night Hull was measured, according to the Bertillon system, by Superintendent Robling, in the presence of Sergeant Ridgeway, Bank Alarm Officer Thompson and a Tribune man. Hull was brought out of his cell by the sergeant. A handcuff was on his one wrist, but in his free hand he held a cigarette, which he was smoking in as nonchalant and careless a manner as though he were not under suspi-

JULY 15 AND AUGUST 1.

On These Dates the Recorder Will Inquire Into the Needs of Police and Fire Departments.

Recorder W. L. Connell will next Monday begin a thorough investigation of the fire department, its present condition, needs, and the recorder yesterday, "to meet the conditions which caused the rates of rates during the spring. I can't tell just what will be done or what may be necessary until I have carefully gone over the department."

About August 1 the Recorder will make a close examination into the workings of the police department and its general efficiency. Until this task has been completed he will not take up a better system to have a man detailed from the force for special duty, as occasion seems to require.

Many of the councilmen are opposed to having the city employ a detective who is known as such. They believe a better system is to have a man detailed from the force for special duty, as occasion seems to require.

BROKEN AXLE CAUSED WRECK

Thirty-five Cars Went Over a Trestle Near Hancock.

Thirty-five cars loaded with coal were wrecked on the Ontario and Western road, near Hancock, Sunday. The accident was due to the breaking of an axle while a long coal train was crossing a trestle near Hancock.

The engine had got safely over the trestle when the accident occurred. No one was injured, but the trestle was badly wrecked.

Accidents of the Day.

James Jacey, of Jessup, a miner at the Ontario colliery, was yesterday received at the Lackawanna hospital, suffering from one of the most terrible scalp wounds ever treated at that institution. The entire top of his head had been crushed in by a fall of rock, and it required thirty stitches to close the wound. He will recover.

Vesko Francuski, of South Washington avenue, whose left foot was crushed by a street car, Sunday, also received treatment. It was found necessary to amputate one of his toes.

An Italian workman at the Lackawanna car shops was painfully injured yesterday morning while at work. While assisting in moving a large sheet of iron, he tripped and fell, receiving a bad gash on the forehead and crushing his hand.
