SCRANTON, JULY 24, 1901.

Roughly estimated, the strikes of the past ten months have cost Scranton $2,000,000. Were they worth it?

Benevolence in Insurance.

ONE OF THE newer forms of American ingenuity in the field of practical philanthropy—a field, by the way, in which Yankee genius seems these days to be setting a fast world's pace—consists of the organization in New York of a society to encourage wealthy men to take out endowment life insurance policies for the benefit of their churches.

The Church Endowment society has for its especial mission the promotion of endowments to churches and affiliated societies belonging to the Episcopal denomination and it has succeeded in interesting in its plans and methods many of the leaders in American commerce and finance.

The quashing of the firemen's strike, by the big union squelching the little union, shows that human nature has not changed much since the days of primitive man.

Investigate It Thoroughly.

THE STATEMENT credited to Rear Admiral Evans that the reason for Rear Admiral Schley's long delay at Cienfuegos in the early part of the late war was because neither he nor Captain Cook of the Brooklyn had received the code, in the possession of all the other officers, by which communication with the Cuban insurgents was to be carried on, and could not make communication until Captain McCalla arrived with it, is important, if true, and would explain one incident in the official records which has looked bad for Schley. In his book, "A Soldier's Log," recently published, Admiral Evans refers to this incident in a manner by no means flattering to Schley, but does not hint at the explanation now offered. If he has been correctly quoted, Evans must have learned about the code matter subsequently to the publication of his book, for he is too manly a fellow to sit at Schley's elbow. What makes us question this alleged interview with him is the fact that on the day it was said to have been given to the reporter, and for three days prior to its appearance, Evans was on a yachting cruise beyond communication with land, and he has not since come within range of interrogation.

If Schley and Cook were purposely left in ignorance of an important code likely to play a part in the execution of their official orders, some one is seriously to blame in the navy department and should be identified and disciplined. But taking this explanation as true it by no means disposes of the worst charge against Schley embodied in the official records, which anybody can get by sending to the secretary of the navy. That was his disobedience of orders after he arrived at Santiago and had reason to believe that Cervera's squadron was inside the harbor. No satisfactory explanation of why he turned back for Key West and opened a chance for the Spaniard's escape has been offered; and the fact that this disobedience was not fatal to the naval plan of campaign but was rectified before Cervera took advantage of it subtracts nothing from the gravity of the original offense. As Admiral Evans says in his book, the circumstance instantly calls to mind the fate of the British Admiral Byng who, for a similar performance, was court-martialed and shot.

A thorough investigation of this end-of-the-world subject seems to be unavoidable and the sooner it comes, the better.

Pittston is to lose its silk mill on account of the strike microbe. Again we remark that strikes don't pay.

Unless legal obstacles should prevent, the board of control would make a mistake in taking the collection of school taxes away from the city treasurer. His employment for this work represents both a convenience and a considerable economy to the taxpayers. He has the machinery for prompt and efficient collection well organized and in good working order, and the people are so thoroughly accustomed to paying their school taxes into his office that the interruption of this arrangement would work confusion and hardship. The fact that the city treasurer is now appointed should not prevent the board from electing the recorder's appointee.

Pusion in Pennsylvania is all talk. There are not enough spoils in sight to furnish a working incentive.

Irrigation and Health.

BEFORE THE Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress, which was in session recently at Cripple Creek, Col., Robert Weems Tansill, of Carlsbad, N. M., presented the subject of irrigation—so vital a theme to the inhabitants of the arid west—in a light somewhat novel. He said:

"If you should read in the morning papers that during the year 1898 an epidemic had carried off 202,354 of the population of the United States you would be appalled, yet that is an underestimate of the annual sacrifice demanded by that most insidious, relentless and deadly foe known to man, consumption. Of that number, the state of New York contributed 14,541; Pennsylvania, 7,689; Ohio, 6,292; Massachusetts, 5,981; Illinois, 5,698; and other Eastern and Central states in proportion. These are certainly startling facts, made all the more glaring when compared with the insignificant death rate from this scourge in Arid America, as shown by the death rate from consumption in the following States and territories: Arizona, 48; Idaho, 36; Montana, 55; Nevada, 25; Oklahoma, 21; Utah, 62; Wyoming, 18, while New Mexico, with a population of over 150,000, contributed only 97, less than 63 per 1,000 population, as compared with 480 per 1,000 for the District of Columbia, 2,47 for Massachusetts, and 2,47 for New York. Significant as are these comparisons they fall far short of showing the actual conditions, for I am sure that investigation will prove that a very large percentage of those who died from consumption in the arid regions, contracted the disease in the humid or Eastern states and postponed making a change until too late.

"These figures and comparisons demonstrate that in Arid America the nation possesses, in its very heart, the grandest natural sanitarium in the world for those afflicted with lung or kindred troubles. That being true, I ask from either an economic, business or humanitarian standpoint, in what manner can the national government render more valuable and profitable service to its citizens than by making reasonable, if not liberal, appropriations for improvements that will confer such inestimable benefits to the entire people as would the construction of national reservoirs for storing the waters that would run to waste? This would make it possible for those afflicted with lung trouble, as well as others, to come to Arid America and pursue pleasant and profitable outdoor occupations, so essential to regaining health."

Federal aid is demanded because private enterprise has well-nigh exhausted itself, and also because internal improvement is legitimately a governmental function. As showing the agricultural possibilities in irrigation, Mr. Tansill cited the development that it had accomplished in the Pecos valley of New Mexico. "Twelve years ago," he said, "all of that region save a small area, was a part of the Great American Desert. The attention of invalids was, in 1888, directed to the great possibilities of that valley under irrigation. Invalids raised and expended there $2,500,000 upon one of the grandest and most complete irrigation systems in America. Since that time prosperous and populous cities have been built and more than ten millions of dollars have been invested in transforming the desert into one of the most beautiful, productive and beautiful spots in the arid regions, thereby affording the invalid an opportunity to acquire a home where life can be prolonged and enjoyed, made possible by irrigation.

The sanitary argument for irrigation is broader than the immediate relief held out to victims of tuberculosis. For that relief it is not necessary to go West. Outdoor exercise is just as beneficial here as there. But irrigation means re-forestation and re-forestation means aid to health for all classes of mankind. Hence irrigation will pay doubly—first as an investment, producing immediate profits; and secondly as a benefaction, helpful to humanity unto the remotest time.

It is very evident from the tenor of the daily news that many yet bug the delusion that night makes right.

Delightful Bird Books.

ONE OF THE things that is especially welcome in noting the newer publications is the increase of popular books on bird life. Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller's "Second Book of Birds," Bradford Torrey's "Everyday Birds," and Frank M. Chapman's "Bird Life," are among the most delightful of the newer summer publications.

It may be hoped that the influence of such books as these, all of which with not a few others on bird life are especially fascinating to the young people who are so fortunate as to have them bestowed on them, will help to put an end to the cruel slaughter of the birds for "millinery" and "feather trimmings." The young people who are now growing up have full opportunities for learning bird ways and the incalculable value of the birds in saving the crops from destruction by multitudinous insect enemies.

Young readers now have the opportunity of learning the charming ways of the bird-people, also, as well as their enormous value in the economies of nature. It is to be hoped, and with a good degree of expectation, that the generations now growing up will so learn the value of the birds in every way in the economies of nature, as well as the charm of the lives of the denizens of air, that to each and every individual of these generations the wearing of a dead bird or its plumage will be a thing as impossible as "the wearing of a coat after a former red Indian fashion."

The books we here mention are specimens of a class of books growing alike in number and in deserved popularity. But there may be many more of them. The love of the wonderful bird creation is a thing that needs to be cultivated by "line upon line, line upon line, precept upon precept, precept upon precept," carrying the story of the inhabitants of the air, alike over and upon land and sea. Needs to be, we say, as every one will admit who has sorrowed over the wretched, wicked destruction of bird life that has been carried on for a generation.

The charge is revived that the steel trust's stock is heavily watered. If true that is wrong but it doesn't justify an otherwise indefensible strike.

One thing grows plainer every day. Either Schley is a humbug or a martyr. To settle which there should be a court of inquiry.

Naturally the Epworth Leaguers are still opposed to the army canteen. Sentiment rarely succumbs before evidence.

Endicott Is to Be an Ideal Village

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

ONE OF THE most thorough going attempts to make the workingman contented with his lot is being made at Endicott, near Binghamton, N. Y., where $2,000,000 is being spent in what is regarded either as a sociological experiment or a shrewd business plan—the classification depending entirely on the business viewpoint of the observer. The project is a good deal unfinished, but it is being made to fit its imposing name as fast as money can move material. A year ago Endicott City was non-existent. Its site was a pleasant tract of meadow and hill on the banks of the Susquehanna river. Today that tract looks as if it were a city in the making. A construction of a mammoth exposition, for from one end to the other it is a prey to the excavator, the road maker, the sewer builder, the carpenter, the electrician, the plumber and the iron worker. Hundreds of men and houses are at work, for the word has gone out that Endicott City must be in existence by the end of September. A wide city in the distance, a town or a village—in four months means hard, quick work, night and day, until the last minute of the last day of the contract time has expired.

When Endicott is finished—and it is going to be completed on time—it will be the largest factory in the world, as well as to be the home of the finest and biggest shoe factory in the United States. These two institutions are designed to form the nucleus around which the town will cluster. For the inhabitants of Endicott, like the town itself, are in the future. The town is to be the keynote of the new city, as far as human endeavor, unshaken by the vicissitudes of time, can bring about that condition. It is the wish of the founder, J. E. Tilt, to make every one of the workers as comfortable and happy as the most contented in the world. In the future of Endicott City, which will be laboriously explained to its children, and which, when so defined, will have to be taken into account, Tilt says:

There have been built more than one hundred cottages, each of the most modern and beautiful design, equipped with the most modern conveniences, clothes drying closets and plate-glass refrigerators. Each of the cottages will be lighted with the electric light, and electric ranges and heating apparatus have been installed. In every respect the cottages will resemble the most costly summer cottages of the rich. The man who planned Endicott, J. E. Tilt, says: "We're going to give the workmen every comfort, and we're going to give them absolute liberty in the community. We do not intend to make Sunday a day of sinning hypocrisy; there will be no religious, political or other organizations of any kind here. The men and women can learn if they do not already know that they are the equals of any more of women workers. Every one here will have absolute liberty in the community.
