The Archbald mine local, No. 1649, United Mine Workers of America, held a very enjoyable social session in the Odd Fellows' hall. That the evening was pleasantly spent goes without saying, for it was turned over to mirth and jollity, and recitations and music enlivened it. The large and spacious hall was crowded with members, who appreciated the event very much. The Mozart quartette, the Anthracite Glee party, of Hyde Park, and the Union orhestra rendered very creditable selections during the event. Refreshments and cigars were served. The Taylor Silver Cornet band will render an open air concert this evening from the balcony of Youngblood's hotel. The band boys have been faithfully rehearsing for some time and have gotten together an excellent programme, which will certainly prove a musical treat. Concert will commence at 8 o'clock sharp. During the hot summer months the people who make a living by selling books, patented articles, life insurance. etc., by traveling from house to house in the cities, leave town for their annual vacation, as it were, and make the smaller towns their scenes of actvities, much to the annoyance of the inhabitants thereof. Their usual course is to seek an interview with the business man or householder and commence by impressing him with the fact that they are not here for the Binghamton visited a few days last purpose of doing any business, but were advised to come to this town for an outing by some person in whom they had reposed a misplaced confidence, and not finding the town suitable for a summer resort they are seeking to while away the days of their sojourn by giving the people of this isolated spot the benefits of making an investment in their schemes. They follow up by abusing the inhabitants for not biting at the bait offered them, deriding the village and promising never to return, but they don't go until they have thoroughly bored

THE MARKETS.

Wall Street Review.

Wall Street Review.

New York, July 25.—The upward reaction in stocks this morning marked another phase in the speculation. Such intermittent movements from day to day see a familiar incident of periods when speculative factors have largely spent their force and no new ones of importance are in sight to take their phace. It does not necessarily follow that there are not large speculative commitments still existing in the market. Some further light is evidently awaited on the actual results to the crops of the period of drouth in the west which was formed, together with the steel strike, the basis of recent speculation for the fall. Declining activity and lessening fuctuations are the natural accompaniments of such a period. There is the additional consideration that stocks in the general list which are not directly concerned at all in the vicisitudes of the crops, have suffered from depression by sympathy with those that are. At the low level of prices some of these proved attractive. The professional traders, anxious to develop a new speculative movement, joined in the buying and helped to advance prices. The lutuminous coal carriers, the anothern region were prominent in the leadership of this movement and helped to hold a dull market firm, through the middle portion of the session. The announcement of engagement at the assay office of $500,000 in geld, went prices downward again, but not to the lowest. The market became as stagment at the decline that the courage of the bulle was revived and they marked up refers again. The suiden advance of about 2 points each in United States Steel stocks and an earlier advance of as much in Amalgamated Copper helped to make the closing strong and quite active with many stocks back at the top level of the day.
