SISTERS' RETREAT HAS CLOSED

Week of Prayer and Meditation at St. Rose Convent Ends with Reception of Novices and Profession of Nine Sisters-Impressive Ceremony Conducted by Rt. Rev. Bishop Hoban.

The retreat of the Sisters of the Order of the Immaculate Heart of the Diocese of Scranton, which opened at St. Rose convent on Friday, July 19, closed on Saturday morning, with a reception

The beautiful and impressive ceremony that marks the passing of the candidates from the novitiate to the life of the religeuse took place in the chapel of St. Rose convent, the most beautiful in the diocese, in the presence of a number of the clergy, sisters and relatives and intimate friends of the Quartette, "Mid the Clover and the novices. There was also a profession, in which nine candidates took their final vows and received the black veil. Rt. Rev. Bishop Hoban officiated and Mandolin and guitar also delivered the sermon. At the ceremony of the reception, which followed the celebration of mass by the bishop, two daughters of John Murrin, of this city, beautifully arrayed in white, acted

DR. WHALEN AT THE CHAUTAUQUA.

His Lecture "The Wit and Humor of the Irish People" the Object of Sincere Compliments.

Rev. H. J. Whalen, D. D., who is one of the speakers at the Eagle's Mere with relatives in Honesdale.

Chautauqua, delivered his lecture on Miss Hannah Wyllie, of The Whit and Humor of the Irish People" on Friday night, and as he has been true of every occasion on which he has spread the historical facts and rare collection of humorous stories that are embraced in this happy subject, he made a fine impression and was received with the warmest apprecia-

The Eagle's Mere Daily News of Saturday, in commenting on the talk, says it was "a splendid lecture," and pays the following sincere compliments to Dr. Whalen:

'Last night's lecture by Dr. Whalen on 'The Wit and Humor of the Irish People' exceeded the most sanguine exance. It was happily introduced by her mother, Mrs. Bridget Waish, on a musical prelude of two numbersone by Mr. Weaver on the mandolin. which compelled an encore, and a very entitled 'The Old Plaid Shawl,' by Miss Taylor.

"Dr. Whalen not only gave many gems of Irish wit and humor, but enlightened his hearers with some rather startling historical facts concerning the Emerald Isle, its people and oppressors-facts that were new to nearly every one present. All were well pleased with the lecture and many lingered to personally express to the speaker their appreciation and voice the universal sentiment-that we may soon hear him again." Dr. Whalen also participated in the programme of Sunday forenoon, having been selected to deliver the sermon again, after being absent for several of the service.

THE INDUSTRIOUS MOSQUITO. What a Carbondale Party of Campers

Think of the Pestiferous Flea. A Carbondale party of campers, who returned from an outing a few days go, suffered somewhat from the doings of industrious mosquitoes. One of the party, on his return, rummaged among his batch of clippings and searched out the following, which he advises prospective campers to bear in mind when out a-camping and forced to listen to the "cheerful buzz" of little mos-quito:

O tiny insect, pity take: Go hence: the haunts of man forsake, We pray you. For should our baser passions wake, You'll rue the day-make no mistake-

We'll slay you. For many weave years, it's true, All gratis. When you had nothing else to do-

With obserful buzz you'd ply your sting, And then away would gayly wing, So fleet, oh! But now you've had your little fling.

Begone-er we'll not do a thing.

JERMYN AND MAYFIELD. Michael Furey, an aged and respected esident of Jermyn, was found dead in ed at his home, on Main street, yesterday morning. Death was evidently iue to heart trouble. On Sunday mornittended mass. In the afternoon, while walking with Michael Muldoon, a neighbor and life-long friend, he complained of a pain in the region of the neart, but as he made no reference to t afterwards it was thought it had eassed away. At 10 o'clock at night, after the storm, he and his wife retired to bed, and at 6.30 o'clock yesterday morning Mrs. Furey arose and proceeded about her household duties, supposing her husband was asleep. At 7 clock she called him to come down to breakfast, and failing to get a response, she went up to his room and iscovered him cold in death. As soon as she recovered from the shock, she summoned her neighbors, and Coroner Roberts was notified. He came up yesterday afternoon and viewed the remains, but decided an inquest unneces-Deceased, who was born in County Sligo, Ireland, in 1819, came to this country in 1864, since which time he had resided in this borough. Light received quite a shock, but soon shattered a junction box and threw the broken metal about the building. Engineer Barnes was knocked down and dazed, but soon recovered. The plant was in total darkness. About this time word was brought to him that Lillibridge's barn, which was close by, was on fire. Barnes grabbed the whistle wire and received a severe shock. He was obliged to put on rubber gloves to sound the alarm. Meanwhile, the switchboard was spitting fire and throwing off an electrical display that lit up the entire building. The damage about the plant was considerable. Several window lights in the drug store of W. S. Bloes were blown in. Mrs. Bloes was standing in front of the window when it was blown in with a crash Broken glass struck her on the wrist cutting a deep gash, which required the flooded and the signal boxes of the traction company were burned out. Imperial Palate Immensely. from the Chicago Record Herald. Emperor William of Germany was initiated into the mysterious merits of Smithfield ham several years ago during the ceremonies attending the opening of the great canal at Kiel. Captain Robley D. Evans, who is ometimes known as "Fighting Bob," because of his picturesque profanity and the peculiar manner in which he shivers his timbers, was present on that occasion as the representative of the government of the United States and in the course of events invited the emperor to dine on board the flagship New York. It was purely an American dinner, and a Smithfield ham occupied the centre of the table, roasted to the proper degree and stuck as full of cloves as St. Sebastian was stuck full of arrows. William the Sudden was helped to ham four or five times and apologized for the compliment by saying that it was the best he ever "Why can we not have such hams in Germany?" he exclaimed. "There would be no trouble about it."

retorted the diplomatic Evans, "if your majesty would remove the restrictions from American pork. The emperor's suite timned pale with alarm at this bold thrust of the Yankee sailor, but his majesty smiled and listened to a dissertation on the subject of hams and the peculiarities of the Smithfield brand. Captain Evans explained, by the way, that hams were often spoiled in the cooking. "This one certainly was not," reurned the emperor, "and I would like compliment your cook."

"I'll send for him, if your majesty pleases," said Evans. The captain's cook on board the New York was a colored man named George, who has followed the fortunes Fighting Bob" for many years, and when he was summoned to meet an emperor he responded in his white cap peror of Germany desires to compliment you upon your cooking." George grinned and howed with the grace of a Chesterfield, and when the emperor extended his imperial hand for him to kiss, George, not being in the habit of meeting emperors, grasped t firmly in his own and gave it a hearty shake The emperor's aids alnest fainted at this unconscious exhibition of lese majeste. Evans tried to hide his amusement, and the emperor, who enjoyed it most darky as the latter retired. The consequence was a petition to the captain of the New York that a plate of ham and eggs should be sent aboard the fast next morning, and not only the next morning, but every morning thereafter as long as the emperor remained at Kiel a boat was sent over for Smithfield ham and American eggs.
