DROWNED IN A TUB. Infant Child of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gard Met a Strange Death Yesterday. Minnie, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gard, of 219 Mottola avenue, met a strange death yesterday afternoon, by being drowned in a tub containing not more than four or five inches of water. The child, who was less than two years of age, was playing about the house alone at the time. The tub of water, standing in a corner of the room, exerted a strange fascination over the little one, who threw sticks in it for over half an hour and then attempted to remove them. In making an effort to recover the last stick which she threw, the child was forced to lean far over the edge of the tub and in so doing lost her balance, and her head fell below the surface of the water. She was unable to assume an erect position and her cries, muffled by the water, could not be heard out of the house. Her mother entered soon after and found the child in an unconscious state. All efforts to revive her failed, and it is likely that she was dead when discovered.

Coroner J. J. Roberts was notified of the case and will today conduct an autopsy. The funeral announcement will be made later.

TERRIBLE STRAIN IS TELLING UPON HIM. He Has Won but Two of the Last Six Games He Has Pitched—One of These Victories Was Against St. Louis, When He Shut That Heavy Hitting Aggregation Out Without a Run or a Hit—Has the Record for the Season to Date.

The vicissitudes of the great game of base ball have never more clearly illustrated than in the case of Christy Matthewson, of Factoryville, Bucknell collegian, ex-Scranton Young Men's Christian association player, and known variously to fame through the medium of New York papers as "Mattie" and "Mauser Ball Mat." Matthewson's career has been watched throughout the season by hundreds of Scranton citizens who remember the tall young athlete who used to shoot the ball over the plate out at the ball park, and who used to occasionally vigorously dent the fence with a long drive, when at bat. When he started the season by scoring eight straight victories, four of which were shutouts, there was wild commotion in the base ball world.
