Old Blue Law Invoked by a Peters-

Each has had the other in aldermanie court on various more or cos serious charges, and both, in consequence, have contributed rather liberally to the support of the city magis-

George Buchner, father of one family, had Henry Berger, father of the other, arrested for a violation of what has come to be termed the old blue laws of 1834, which forbids all forms of manual labor on the first day of the week, commonly called Sun-

The festimony for the proscentio was to the effect that on four recent Sundays, including last Sunday, Berer worked about his garden, sawing hammering, pulling weeds and trimming grape vines and trees.

Berger admitted this, with somqualifications. He did no bammering, he said, but he did on one occasion say two boards to place under the limbs of plum trees which were so heavily laden with fruit that they the arened to break down. He denied having weeded his garden butadmitted that he occasionally pulled a few bunches of grass or weeds to throw to his chickens. As to the trimming of the grape vines, he explained that while walking through the arbor he was went to pinch off a dead vine here and there, but never set himself out to do any general trimming on Sun-

What work he did perform on Sun day was necessary to be done, he said, and on account of his being engaged from daylight till dark at his daily occupation. ## IN HONOR OF MARTYRED DEAD

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR LATE PRESIDENT.

They Were Conducted Last Night in Providence Presbyterian Church. Brief Addresses Were Made by Thomas S. Morgan and Dolph B. Atherton-Dr. Guild Said That He Hoped President's Death Would Result in the End of Anarchy and of Yellow Journalism.

The members of the congregation of the Providence Presbyterian church honored the memory of the late President McKinley last night at a special nemorial service conducted in the Sunday school rooms of the church and attended by a large-sized throng of

The rooms were tastefully decorated with American flags, while directly behind the reading desk was a splendid portrait of the nation's stricken chief executive draped in sombre folds of

The pastor, Rev. George E. Gulld. opened the exercises with a fervent prayer, calling upon God to guide the ourse of the new president along His ways and pleading that strength be given the widow of the dead president. hat she may bear her heavy burden the easier. A brief summary of the life of President McKinley was read by Attorney George W. Benedict, after

Thomas S. Morgan, who has been for the dead president in the city, made a brief address, in which he told of President McKinley's long political career six terms in congress, two terms as governor of Ohio and two terms as president of the United States. There were no greater political honors which could be conferred upon any man, he said, than those conferred upon the dead president. The fact that throughout his entire public life he lived a clean Christian life proved, Mr. Morgan thought, that politics can be kept clean if politicians want to keep them SORROW THE WORLD OVER. Secretary D. B. Atherton, of the Scranton board of trade, in the course of a brief speech, dwelt especially upor the great sorrow which the president's death has caused in every part of the ivilized world. He said that this proves that he was one of the greatest and best men that this county ever produced.

Dr. Guild followed Secretary Atherton, and though he spoke less than ten minutes, he managed to give expression to a great many pungent truths in that space of time, He spoke, i part, as follows: We continue to be inquisitive regarding !

strangeness of this providential event, which has plunged the nation into deepest sorrow. We must regard it as a providential event, for the Lord God is emnipotent, but His ways are oftimes inscrutable, I believe we are beginning to see for ourselves ome of the divine wisdom behind this deed, and believe that we will see more as the years go by. We look at it from the human standpoint of course, but I believe that we are seeing some thing of the wisdom of Almighty God. The nation is now bowed in sorrow because President McKinley was stricken down in very prime of a life which had been useful is country and which promised to be of st reater usefulness, but, notwithstanding this, sell that if this sorrow will crystallize into ser definite action towards framing a law which w anarchists and purge the United States of al socialism and anarchism, that a greater rest will have been accomplished by President M Kinley's death that he could have accomplishe had he lived. THE YELLOW JOURNALS. Let us hope that his death will result in a limination of that class of newspapers know s yellow journals, which pander to class prelice, and which thus stir up the passions of gnorant against our institutions, I have nesitancy in counseling every member of my c gregation to refuse to allow such papers in the houses as the New York Journal, the New York World and others of that ilk. They are as dangerous as dynamite in our homes; they are dan gerous to our whole social life.

If by President McKinley's death there will be owed a sentiment that shall result in the de struction of the unworthy and indecent newspa pers of the land, then, I say, from a human the loving and tender wisdom of the dispensati that removed from earth him who was the friend of rich and poor, of the high and of the lawly. Dr. Guild concluded by referring to the fact that President McKinley was an habitual church-goer and that he had family prayer every morning after arising. The beauty of his Christian life furnishes an inspiration to the Christian people of all lands, the doctor said. The exercises were brought to a close with the singing of "America."
