LACK OF LIBERALITY
MAY LOOSE INDUSTRY

Casket Manufacturing Concern Would Like to Locate at Simpson, but Hesitate Because Fell Township Officials Don't Seem Inclined to Exonerate the Projectors from Taxes—Details of the Deal.

A lack of liberality, or, more likely, subtle spirit, will probably lose to the village of Simpson an industry that promises to commence well, if started, and to grow to a thriving and prosperous enterprise, one which would incidentally benefit the locality in which it is desired to locate.

A casket manufacturing concern, now established in Philadelphia, sought a location in this vicinity and asked the offices of Alderman William Morrison, who is also the well-known funeral director. The alderman is the owner of a plot of several acres of land located just north of the Simpson silk mills. The Philadelphia concern regarded this as an ideal location and hoped for the co-operation of the officials of Fell township to the extent that the company's plant and grounds would be exempt from taxation for a few years. The company, it is understood, will erect its own plant and buy its own site, so that all of the outside liabilities beget is that of exemption of the site for a term of years. The company is not incorporated unless it employs at least twenty men.

It was expected that the proposition would be favorably received and the offer readily granted, but, instead, the township officials show a halting policy that will probably mean the loss of the industry and the incalculable benefits it would bring to the community.

The company is desirous of locating in some place, and that it will wait on an unreasonable holding back was indicated by the following dispatch received by Alderman Morrison on Saturday morning from one of the projectors of the enterprise:

Owing to the uncertainty of exonerating town taxes for a term of years in relation to casket manufacturing will cease for the present.

M. J. Seamore.

It is up to the township's officers to say what the fate of the proposed industry will be, so far as its location is concerned. There is little, if any, room to argue against the advisability of bestirring to locate the industry, particularly when it is the purpose of the company to enlarge the plant to manufacture undertakers' supplies.

DEPOT LOITERERS WARNED.

Loiterers at City Station of D. and H. to Be Vigorously Dealt With.

A warning notice comes from the company's officials to loiterers who hang about the city station of the Delaware and Hudson company until their presence becomes an intolerable nuisance.

The warning is that those offenders will be vigorously dealt with if they persist in their unruly presence in annoying passengers and interfering with the employees in the discharge of their duties.

The company has posted in a conspicuous place at the station that persons who have occasion to visit the depot have due regard for good order and behavior, but this reasonable advice seems to have no effect and are disregarded and disloyal, when offenders can do so with impunity. There are numerous hangers-on who are sure to be on hand when a train is about to leave or enter the depot and it is a difficult matter for passengers to conveniently go on or off the station platform. Oftentimes they get in the way of the depot employees and embarrass them in the discharge of their duties. Others have taken to committing nasty stunts about the depot that, as mentioned before, are well nigh intolerable and it is chiefly this misbehavior that causes the warning to come from the officials at this time.

The issuance of the warning is not prompted by a narrow spirit, nor with the view to deprive the public of the accommodations of the depot, but is intended for that class who frequent the station and seem to have no sense of behavior.

TURPIA'S PREDICTION.

Mind Reader Declares It Is His Impression That the Miners Will Not Go Out This Spring.

Among the queries fired on Saturday night at Sir Henry Turpia, who gave a wonderful exhibition of mind-reading at the Grand opera house last week, was one of particular interest to the people of the coal regions and one which will be sure to be kept in mind by the residents hereabouts.

"The question was, 'Will there be a miners' strike in April?' asked by a young man named Loftus. To this Sir Henry answered that it was his impression that there would be none."

Another interesting query was, "Tom L. Johnson" came Sir Henry's reply.

There was a multitude of questions asked Sir Henry and in numerous cases particularly about the location of buried persons, the answers proved to be correct.

Whether the entertainment and performance caused the large audience to marvel. The exhibition was in the order of the one given by the Baldwin, "The White Mahatmas," who caused a great stir when they appeared at the Lyceum in Scranton several years ago.

Sir Henry Turpia will be at the Grand opera house this evening, when he will conclude his public appearance in this city. He will remain here, however, at the American house for the remainder of the week to give private audiences for the reading of palms for which he has a great reputation.

THE LIGHT CONTRACT AGAIN.

It Will Come Up Again Tonight in Common Council, When the Mayor's Veto Will Likely Be Disposed Of.

The lighting contract of the city streets, which should have been awarded in May last, which has been extended between both councils since this date, will be in hand tonight for the customary attention bestowed on it at regular intervals for the past four or five months.

It may be disposed of tonight, for positions depends on the temper or pleasure of either one of the two sides arrayed against the measure. What phase of the contract remains to be acted on is the veto of Mayor Kilpatrick, who is opposed to the contract of more than one year, on the ground that the city might be a possible loser, thereby, refused to sign the resolution awarding the job of lighting the streets to the Lackawanna Valley company for a period of three years. Select council members, however, did not seem to think there was much if any merit in the mayor's objection and promptly passed the veto over his honor's head. Then the veto received the attention of common council. The members in this body did not appear to think the same and such opposition manifested as to prolong its disposition by different courses, for several weeks. It is continued until today when the veto is to be found in the hands of the light, fire and water committee of common council, who, it is expected, will make a report this evening. But more than one report is looked for and at least the appearance of a minority and a majority will be no surprise, for on the committee are two or more members who are determinedly opposed to a three years' contract. It is known how the members of council stand on the veto, with the exception of Mr. Pughano. All but Mr. Pughano were present at the last meeting when the veto was passed. How this may be said to any party, for Mr. Pughano was not present at the last meeting and at the meeting prior he was wavering as to his choice. It might be said, then, that it is on his vote that the fate of the contract depends.

Whatever may be the result, it is hoped that the matter will be finally disposed of this evening, for while the citizens are divided somewhat on this question as to the councilmen, they are united on the point, and that is the wish that the vexatious matter be disposed of forthwith.

The Lackawanna Valley company, to whom the contract was awarded, is out with a statement, which contains among other things the claim that if common council reject the veto and give the contract to them, the owners of the plant here will expend six thousand dollars for new machinery and lamps to bring about the change from the old style of carbon lamps to the improved type, known as the enclosed system.

AMUSEMENTS.

"A Day and a Night," Tuesday.

An appetizing dish of merriment is Hoyt's "A Day and a Night," which will be seen at the Grand Tuesday night. This is the popular author's latest effort. A young man, religiously inclined, leaves his home and goes to New York to engage singers for his church choir. His father, who is a man of the world, accompanies him and introduces him to an old friend, a theatrical manager, who agrees to furnish the choir singers, and introduces him to some of his chorus girls. Among them is the young man's sweetheart, who is an actress, and who has been visiting old friends but she denies her identity, and says he is mistaken, but agrees to teach him how to make love. The young man proves himself to be a thoroughbred, much to the delight of his father, and annoyance of his mother. The play is interspersed with light songs and bright and catchy specialties.

Wednesday, "The House That Jack Built."

George H. Broadhurst's found of humor seems inexhaustible, for in no one of his farces does it gush forth more copiously than in "The House That Jack Built," his latest production, which will be seen at the Grand for the first time on Wednesday night. Fortunately for the complete success of the production, he has secured a cast of extraordinary merit. Jack Bull, his lead character, is played by George H. Summers, St. George Hush, C. P. Lorraine, Lenore, Lockwood, Hugh Cameron, Max Courtney, Mildred Keith, D. W. Siegert and a number of others each of whom is addition to their acting abilities are clever vaudeville artists.

At the Churches.

"The Bride of Jennico," Saturday.

The romantic success, "The Bride of Jennico," will be given here on Saturday next. All the world loves a lover and is no less enamored of a fighter, and in "The Bride of Jennico" they will find a hero who fights as well as he makes love. He is an expert in the sword and an expert in the ring. The heroine is the charming Princess Othello, and she is the same arch, tantalizing and altogether delicious little witch, as she appears in the well-known novel of Edgerly Castle from which the play was taken.

News of Funerals.

The late George Stephens, who met a tragic death by falling downstairs at the home of his daughter, in Hardwick, Vt., was laid at rest in Maplewood cemetery, Dakeley Burdette. It was stated, in the head of the article, that he was better known as "devil" Burdette, when it should have read "Dorie" Burdette, as it appeared in the body of the article. No greater mistake could have been made and had the types said "angel" Burdette it would have been no mistake, for Mr. Burdette's disposition is more on the order of the angelic than otherwise.

THE PASSING THROG.

Correction Due Mr. Burdette.

By an annoying error on Saturday in the story with reference to the visit of Dorrance Dakeley Burdette, it was stated, in the head of the article, that he was better known as "devil" Burdette, when it should have read "Dorie" Burdette, as it appeared in the body of the article. No greater mistake could have been made and had the types said "angel" Burdette it would have been no mistake, for Mr. Burdette's disposition is more on the order of the angelic than otherwise.

Quite a serious accident occurred at the Fourth street crossing of the Delaware and Hudson railroad Saturday noon. NO TURKISH BATHS IN TURKEY.

Nearest to Them Is the Hammam, Which Has Some Resemblance.

From the Review of the Week.

"Is the Turkish bath known in Turkey?" This curious question is not infrequently put to travellers from the East by people in this country. It is true there is not much resemblance between the external appearance and management of the so-called Turkish bath in England and those of the "hammam" in Turkey.

Outwardly the "hammam" usually presents something of the appearance of a domed sepulchral edifice, of the little domes or cupolas which rise from its roof that in the middle is the highest, and is set, with many small windows for the purpose of lighting the bath. The massive walls that form the sides of the "hammam" have no windows and it is thought that if the walls were pierced the outside air would penetrate into the interior and cause variations in the evenness of temperature which it is held desirable to maintain. The interior thus often becomes very close, as ventilation is very slow, being through the opening by passers, to and from of the double door of the passage which leads to the cool entrance hall. Every now and then the attendants burn frankincense in the interior of the bath with the idea of purifying the air.

The great warm hall under the central dome has generally three large niches, two on each side and one in front, as well as two little chambers. Each of these niches and chambers has a roof in the shape of a half hemisphere, which contains a few tiny glass apertures, and which is joined to the central dome roof. In all these niches and chambers there are, according to the size of the bath, one, two or three marble basins which are fixed in the low part of the wall, each basin being for ladies. In some places ladies go to

JERMYN AND MAYFIELD.

The Jermyrn borough council held a special meeting on Friday evening for the purpose of passing an ordinance to authorize the issuing of $4,500 worth of bonds, to pay off the bonds and interest issued at the time of the sinking of the artesian well, the holders of which have just won a verdict against the borough. Attorney Mulder was present and presented the ordinance, which he had drawn up, which was afterwards read, adopted and ordered to be published. The ordinance provides for the issuing of eighteen bonds of $250 denomination, which are to bear five per cent. interest annually, first of taxation. Four are to mature in 1906, six in 1911 and eight in 1916. All the bonds will bear interest from October, 1901, and for the purpose of paying the principal and interest of said bonds, a levy of two mills will be made each and every year upon the real estate and personal property taxation in the borough. If the two mills be insufficient, the rate will be increased. The bonds will be advertised and sold to the highest bidder, sealed bids to be submitted before October 4.
