DISCHARGE OF MEN CAUSES STIR

Street Railway Men Take Up the Case of Two Conductors Who Are Released from Employ of Scranton Railway Company Without Apparently Good Reason.

The discharge of two conductors from the Scranton Railway company's service without any specific reason, it is alleged for their removal, has caused somewhat of a stir among the other men on this division of the road. The cause of the two discharged men has been taken before General Manager Killman in Scranton, by a committee from the street railway men's union of employees on this division of the road, who await an answer from the general manager's office. The answer or explanation for the removal of the conductors is awaited with interest by the employees, who have taken umbrage at what they deem a summary dismissal and who are intent on a more satisfactory explanation or excuse than has been given by the company's officials.

The discharged men are two conductors who have been in the company's employ for a long time and who were looked upon by their associates as efficient and trusted employees. A few days ago they were given their discharge, without an accompanying excuse or explanation. When they were pressed for either, they were referred to higher officials. Accordingly, the union took up the matter and, after discussing it, a committee was appointed to wait on General Manager Killman for information as to the reasons for the discharge of the two men. The answer, the story goes, was that the car registers in charge of the pair showed the reason for their discharge. The discharged men and their associates feel that more definite information was due the men, particularly since the ex-conductors would have to seek positions elsewhere with this stigma resting on them. Mr. Killman protested, the information goes, further that he could not give the details without more of an investigation, and he suggested that a week be given him to prepare the discharge information. The committee reluctantly acquiesced, as it was the wish to clear the discharged employees as quickly as possible. The information being impatiently awaited, meanwhile by the union, which is indicating a united support of the luckless employees, who believe they are being unjustly dealt with, opinions which are alike shared by all of the men.

Changes in Hendricks' Offices. The resignation of C. P. O'Connor as stenographer in the Hendricks Manufacturing company's office, by reason of his entering the medical college of the University of Pennsylvania, has caused a few changes to be made in that office. Mr. O'Connor's successor is Haddock Warren, who has filled the position of assistant timekeeper, a post that he filled so satisfactorily that he is probably as prompt the officials to tender him the advanced position when the vacancy occurred. The place vacated by Mr. Warren will be filled by John Moran, who, until recently, was employed in the Star clothing house. Mr. Moran has a young man who has numerous qualifications for the position.

SENTIMENT OF VETERANS

William H. Davies, Past G. A. R. Subscribes to Feeling Sentiments on Their Stricken Ruler and Comrade, William McKinley, as Submitted by John McComb, Commander of the Post.

At last night's meeting of William H. Davies post, No. 187, Grand Army of the Republic, the death of President McKinley was the subject of sad discourse by the veterans who lamented and mourned the death of their nation's choice and their own comrade in arms.

Commander McComb of the post, was the chief speaker of the solemn assembly, and he read to his comrades, with that spirit and feeling that on the occasion inspired, the most touching and fitting sentiments on the post's loss, the nation's loss and the loss to the whole civilized world.

These sentiments so feelingly expressed by Commander McComb, so impressed and stirred his sudden comrades that they earnestly asked that they be adopted by the post and so spread on the minutes. The soulful sentiment of the commander are as follows:

Sentiments of William H. Davies' post, No. 187, Dept. Pa., G. A. R., referring to the assassination of President William McKinley, by Commander John McComb. Since Friday, September 6, 1901, when the first shock of horror and dismay flashed over the wires that William McKinley, president of the United States, had been stricken down by an assassin's bullet, while representing our great nation at the Pan-American Exposition, at Buffalo, N. Y., the members of this post have experienced the intensest gloom.

Day by day reports of his condition were eagerly scanned, and our hope of his recovery were buoyed by our love for the man, and our esteem for his transcendent ability, his irreproachable character, and his honest purpose. Realizing that his wounds were probably fatal, yet we clung to hope with the tenacity of despair; and would not accept the verdict of Fate until his body was pulseless.

Relying on the fervent appeals of seventy-six millions of loyal people, as they implored the Ruler of the universe for his recovery; and having unshakable confidence in the ability of the eminent surgeons who were tirelessly trying to avert a portentous calamity, with every means that modern science had placed at their command, we now recognize that "It was God's way," and when, on the morning of Saturday, September 14, 1901, we learned that his life was extinct, we humbly acquiesced to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

With the people who admired William McKinley we have mourned; and we have felt the keenest sorrow; for at no time in our existence have we known a murder to have been committed so ruthlessly and so dastardly.

We have lived through the three periods of our national history when the people were plunged into the abyss of woe by the shocking death of our chief executive. But the martyrdom of William McKinley has a deeper import and a more poignant sensation of responsibility for us, from the fact that he died of a disease which was the result of the damning and reprehensible act.

As a people we are at peace with all the world. As an individual our president had no foe. His statesmanship and administrative ability had given the United States a glory and a prestige which have made us one of the great powers in the world. And at the time of his Judas-like taking of our people were enjoying a larger measure of happiness and prosperity, tranquility and individual independence, than was ever vouchsafed to any people through all the tides of time.

When the earthly remains of our beloved comrade were consigned to the tomb at Canton, Ohio, on Thursday, September 19, 1901, we felt the deepest dejection and desolation, although we had participated in the public memorial services, and heard his merits extolled.

Knowing his worth, and having had implicit confidence in his integrity and probity, we desire to see his remains reposed in this depressing hour. As a body of his late comrades who helped preserve the Union, when he, with us, followed our Starry Flag up to the top of the world, we desire to see his remains reposed in this depressing hour.

THE GAME OF GOLF.

It is Winning Numerous Enthusiasts. Particularly Among the Women-Folk of the Town. The game of golf, "the great game of golf," with emphasis on the "golf," as Dan Daly would express it, is winning numerous enthusiasts, particularly among the women of the town, who manifest a pleasure in outdoor diversions and sports.

Evidence of this is shown in the increased number who travel to the golf links, contiguous to old Alumni Park, and pass afternoons, either watching the flying sticks and sailing balls of the professional players, or engaging themselves to become familiar with the game that has passed the stage of a fad and is firmly established as one of the most interesting and health-bestowing outdoor recreations.

The season has only begun, but from the number of players and candidates who assemble on the links in the course of a week, one would fall into the belief that golf reigned in Carbondale the entire year of the year of the game. But those facts only serve to sustain the reputation that Carbondale enjoys for being foremost in life's activities, and it will be no hazard to predict that this city will furnish more and more worthy candidates for golf honors before the season will have passed.

Already the town is distinguishing itself in this respect, as will be shown in the fact that two of the most ardent followers of the game of golf, B. G. Taylor and E. C. Corbett, are participating in the match between the being played on the Links of the Country club, at Scranton.

Mr. Guerin and Mr. Corbett are skilled golfers and are credited with the highest scores that have been made on the home links.

Max Hoffman.

A sound body is necessary for vigor, and quick-witted adjustment to changing conditions, that few men possess. Every bodily power is taxed to its utmost in such a work. The work of the evangelist is very trying, requiring of him a versatility and quick-witted adjustment to changing conditions, that few men possess. Every bodily power is taxed to its utmost in such a work.

Evangelist Hoffman is to be congratulated, not only that he has found exactly the remedy that he needs, but also that he does not lack the courage necessary to declare his convictions to the whole world. In carrying the truth to the people he has never uttered a greater truth than when he said that "Peruna is a tonic and nerve of excellent value to public workers who are under constant nerve strain and in need of such a remedy."

A Bishop's Letter. Bishop T. H. Lomax, D. D., bishop of the Second District A. M. E. church, from China, writes from Charlotte, N. C.:

"I can cheerfully recommend your Peruna to all who want a strengthening tonic. It is also a very effective remedy for all catarrhal complaints."—H. Lomax, D. D.

If you do not desire prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and we will endeavor to give you our valuable advice gratis.
