AN EXPENSIVE QUAIL.

John Sampson Shot It on Linden Street, and Was Arrested.

A strange spectacle was witnessed on Linden street, near Adams avenue yesterday morning, when a flock of quail, flying through the air, dropped down on the pavement and walked around as unconcerned as if they were on a meadow land away from civilization.

The sight of quail walking around on the street was too much for the sporting blood of a young fellow named John Sampson, residing on Kressler court. He went into the house and netting his trusty rifle, bagged one of the birds. Special Officer T. V. Lewis happened to be passing at the time herself a worker of rare ability and a and placed Sampson under arrest, on Christian of the highest type.
