The local police Thursday succeeded n capturing John McMahon, alias John Stewart, the clever gentleman who has been swindling a number of Wilkes-Barre ladies within the last few weeks McMahon's swindling scheme was to make a house-to-house canvass, endeavoring to interest ladies in the purchase of fine dry goods, samples of which he carried with him or left for examination. The goods were offered at ridiculously low prices, and a number of Wilkes-Barre housewives decided to purchase. Stewart demanded a small deposit in each instance, and succeeded in gathering together quite a goodly sum before he left town. It h needless to say the goods ordered were

Sunday Evening Sermons on the "Life of Christ," Illustrated by Tissot's Great Paintings.

Next Sunday evening at the Penn Avenue Baptist church, the pastor will give the first of a series of sermons on the "Life of Christ." These sermons will be illustrated by the greatest series of paintings on the life and country of Jesus which have ever been given to the world.

The famous artist Tissot was con verted, and gave up an income of more than thirty thousand dollars a year that he might go to Palestine and portray the scenes and incidents of our Savior's life. Tissot spent ten years in the Holy Land, and with the soul of a Christian and skill of a great artist be has painted hundreds of pictures of Oriental life. Dr. Pierce has secured lantern slides of the great paintings, to illustrate his Sunday evening ser mons on "Jesus of Nazareth."

The National Salt company has already pledged a majority of its stock to the merger. The Retsof company will undoubtedly do the same. A meeting of the directors of the Retsof company was held at the New York office, Thursday, E. L. Fuller and M. D. Fuller, of this city, were in attendance. After a lengthy discussion, the directors unanimously decided to recommend to the stockholders that they exchange their stock for securities in the new company. The stockholders are offered very favorable terms. A majority of them will assuredly accept the recommendation. They are to deposit their stock in the Retsof company with the North American Trust company.

When the new company is formed, the salt business of the United States. both rock and evaporated, will be in its control. There are five or six goodsized independent companies not included at present in the combine, but eventually, it is expected, they will be brought in. This will mean that the salt business of this country will be regulated from the city of Scranton. Mr. Fuller, who will likely become president of the International company. entered the salt business in 1892, at the head of the Lehigh Salt Mining company. There were at this time three other rock salt companies supplying trade east of the Mississippi, the Layonia, organized 1891; the Greigsville, organized in the same year, and the Retsof, organized in 1885.

All of these companies were located in New York state, and as they operated in the same territory, competition became very bitter and prices went to

Mr. Fuller sought to put an end to what would prove to some of them a ruinous warfare, and proceeded to effeet a community of interests. The result was that the four companies were merged in one, under the name of the ler as president and chief stockholder. The contemplated selection of Mr. Fuller as the head of the new company indicates that his management of the Retsof company is considered efficient

BAPTIZED IN THE BROOK

CHILLY EXPERIENCE OF HENRY SAAM.

He Is a Convert to the Christian Catholic Church, the Institution of Which John Alexander Dowie Is the Head-Baptizing Was Done in the Roaring Brook by Rev. Gideon Hammond, Who Is the Philadelphia Representative of Dowie-A Large Number of Spectators.

A convert to the Christian Catholic church, the institution presided over by John Alexander Dowle, of Chicago, was baptized yesterday afternoon by being dipped three times in the ley waters of the Roaring Brook to the great enjoyment of half a hundred small boys, who were eye witnesses of the scene and who robbed it of the impressiveness of a religious ceremony. The convert who was baptized was Henry Saam, of Sloan avenue, and the man who did the baptizing was Rev. Gideon Hammond, Dowle's Philadelphia representative. The scene of the baptism was the Roaring brook at the easterly end of Gibson street.

There is a pool of water about four feet deep at this point, surrounded by an ideal place for out-of-door immersion, providing, of course, the weather not warm. A cold breeze was blowing in the afternoon when a number of persons began to assemble to witness the ceremony

THEY BUILT A FIRE.

In fact, so cold was it, that some of the members of the party lit a fire and stood around it shivering while the Rev. Mr. Hammond took soundings to ascertain the depth of the pool and waited patiently for the converts to arrive. He waited for over half an hour and had about decided with the crowd that their nerve had gone back on them at the eleventh hour, when Mr. Saam put in an appearance over the crest of the hill, accompanied by sayeral local members of the Christian Catholic church.

There were to have been several bantized, but Mr. Saam was the only one whose faith was strong enough to permit him to risk pneumonia by venturing into an icy pool of water at this time of the year.

Rev. Mr. Hammond and Mr. Saam immediately repaired to a nearby house to don their baptizing clothes, and the crowd waited expectantly for them to put in their appearance. There were upwards of fifty small boys assembled on the scene and they were about as happy as if they were going to the circus. The grown-ups in the throng numbered about twenty-five. After a long wait the clergyman and the convert were to be seen leaving the house and approaching the pool. Both were long black robes and their ordinary head-gear. The clergyman had on a big pair of rubber boots.

Mr. Saam wore his trousers and shoes, but he removed the latter at the suggestion of the Rev. Mr. Hammond. His shoes removed, he stood irresolutely on the bank as if he hadn't quite made up his mind to go in.

"Come on," said the Rev. Mr. Hammond, who was waist deep in the water, as he smiled a smile of encouragement.

Mr. Saam hesitated for an instant and then stepped boldly in up to his "Ouch," said he. "It's cold," "Come on," said the Rev. Mr. Ham-mond, and Mr. Saam walked in up to his waist. He shivered and shook with the cold, but the Rev. Mr. Hammond caught him by the shoulders and steadied him At this juncture an enterprising photographer, who had planted his camera on the bank a few feet away from the pair in the water, announced he was ready to take a picture. The crowd stood aghast. "It's not right to take a picture of religious ceremony like this.

altogether wrong," said a woman in the crowd Everybody seemed to be waiting for the Rev. Mr. Hammond to indignantly order the photographer away from the scene but he did nothing of the kind.

He surprised everybody by taking hold of the shivering Mr. Saam and turning him round towards the camera. "Turn around Mr. Saam." said he. "it will only take a minute." Then as the Rev. Mr. Hammond and the quaking Mr. Saam posed, under their most uncongenial surroundings, to say the least, the photographer took the cap off the lense and in a few seconds the photograph was taken. HAMMOND PRAYED.

This over the Rev. Mr. Hammond started the baptismal ceremony. He raised his head to heaven and uttered a fervent prayer, calling down the Divine blessing on the assembled crowd and on the man whom he was about to baptize. Then with a final exhortation, he ducked the resisting Mr. Saam completely under the water,

Mr. Saam arose to the surface shiv ering and shaking in every limb, the cold water streaming in rivulets down down his back. He didn't seem to like the idea of being ducked a second time
